Social Security for Retired Farmers

The Social Security Administration has ruled that retired farm owners cannot participate in the management of their property in certain situations without losing social security benefits.

The law states, under the annual retirement test, that a retired farm owner's income is not counted in determining self-employment income if: (a) the farm is operated as a corporation; (b) the farm owner rents the farm; (c) the farmer enters into a crop-share arrangement, and does not materially participate in farm management or production.

Rental income is not counted for social security purposes providing the farm owner does not materially participate in farm management, or the production of crops or livestock. If the farm owner materially participates, the income is labeled as self-employment income.

A farm owner's income from a crop or livestock produced on his property by a crop-share arrangement is classified as rental property, and falls under the same requirements.

Retired farm owners are considered to be materialy participating in the operation of a farm if they physically work, make decisions, advise and consult, or inspect the farm in such a way that it may be expected to significantly affect or contribute to the success of the enterprise. The material participation requirement virtually prohibits retired farmers from managing and overseeing their property for the rental period, and this is ridiculous.

All over the country retired farm owners are having their social security benefits reduced because they assist in managing and overseeing the land they worked so hard, throughout their farming careers, to maintain productively. They must have the right to manage and oversee the operation of their farm, rented or not, without the threat of reduced social security benefits. I cannot see anything wrong with a farmer working with a tenant in an advisory capacity to attain the highest yield possible, or to protect his property from being damaged.

The government must recognize that the farmer will still own the property after the tenant has completed the terms of the lease.

In an effort to correct this inequity, I am cosponsoring HR 396 which is a bill to allow farmers to participate in the proper operation of their farms without causing rental income to be classifed in the self-employment income category.

A number of articles on material participation have been printed in various magazines and newspapers, and some contain incorrect facts. One that comes to mind is the question of whether or not a farm owner is allowed to live on rented property without the rental income being classified as self-employment income. One author wrote that a farmer is not allowed to live on the property without being penalized for materially participating in the farm's operation. This belief, according to the Social Security Administration, is false, and there is no problem with a retired farm owner renting the property, and continuing to live on it.

Many farmers have also asked me if it is possible for them to earn up to the annual retirement test limit of $4,500 by working for the tenant on their own farm or is it necessary for them to work for someone else. The Social Security Administration has informed me that it is possible for a retired farmer to work and earn up to the limit by performing the work as directed by the tenant.

The problems are complex, and must be corrected as soon as possible. Farmers must have the right to manage what belongs to them without the threat of reduced retirement benefits.

If you should need help in establishing your eligibility under the Social Security Administration's annual retirement test, please contact my District office and I will assist you.

Local Students On Dean's List

Dickinson state college students named to the dean's list for winter quarter have been announced by Dr. Paul C. Larsen, vice president for academic affairs. Stephen Easton of Thief River Falls was among the students earning a 4.0 average (straight A in 12 credits or more), and Michelle Brule of Red Lake Falls was named to the honors list for students attaining a 3.5 grade point average or higher.

4H CLUB

Silverton

The Silverton 4-H club held its monthly meeting at the Roger Rupprecht home on March 8. The next meeting will take place April 19. The meeting was called to order.

Roll call was taken by telling your personal good luck charm. Secretary's and treasurer's reports were read and approved. Old business, the Favorite Foods Show is being held March 3 and the cards for the Show are due. There is a Share-the-Fun workshop on March 12. Our roller skating party was canceled because of the bad weather and a new date hasn't been set yet. The 4-H Carnival is being planned for April 21 and 4-H'ers are to bring old things for the booth. New business, Bev Rupprecht and Sharon Wagner thanked the club for the tickets to the Leader's Banquet. The meeting was adjourned.

A demonstration was given by Mike Sparby. Two project talks were given. One by Kristi Rupprecht on microwave ovens and another by David Altepeter on safety in the home.

We had another class of judging cattle. Lunch was served by the Altepeters and Barths.

There were 21 4-H members present and 17 4-H parents.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Misty Dawn Nelson who left us one year ago March 13.

Do not stand at my grave and weep.
I am not there. I do not sleep.
I am a thousand winds that blow.
I am the diamond's glint on snow.
I am the sunlight on ripened grain.
I am the gentle autumn rain.
When you awake in the morning's hush,
I am the swift on flinging rush.
Of quiet birds in circling flight,
I am the soft starshine at night.
Do not stand at my grave and cry.
I am not there. I did not die.

Sadly missed by her family. 1122c

TO THE COMMUNITY . . .

At this time I would like to extend from myself, the Board of Directors, Staff and most of all the parents and participants, our sincerest Thank You for all your dedicated support to the Falls Day Activity Center, Inc. throughout the past years.

A special Thank You is given for the success of our new building and grounds project to L. B. Hartz and Foundation with a $30,000.00 donation and to Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Swenson who equaled the donation with the contribution of 4,000 shares of Arctic stock to Falls Day Activity, Inc.

I would like to acknowledge at this time the people who as chairpersons of the Falls Day Activity Center were instrumental in the continued growth of our agency. As well as those members who served during the years . . . 1971-72, Art Heinze — 1972-73, Larry McDowell — 1973-74, Wally Sparby — 1974-75, Wally Sparby — 1975-76, John Peterson — 1976-77, Judy Dimich — 1977-78, Dr. Milt Hoff — 1978-79, Paul Johnson.

There will be an Open House Sunday, March 18th from 1:00-5:00 p.m. You, the community, are cordially invited to come and visit our new facilities.

Thank you,
Evan Armstrong

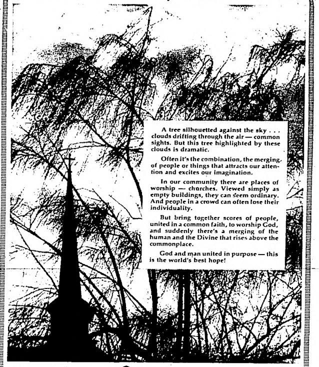
Safety Is YOUR Business

To provide benefits and services to armed forces veterans, their families and survivors, the Veterans Administration has requested a record $21 billion budget for fiscal year 1980.



A tree silhouetted against the sky . . . clouds drifting through the air — common sights. But this tree highlighted by these clouds is dramatic.

Often it's the combination, the merging of people or things that attracts our attention and excites our imagination.

In our community there are places of worship — churches. Viewed simply as empty buildings, they can seem ordinary. And people in a crowd can often lose their individuality.

But bring together scores of people, united in a common faith, to worship God, and suddenly there's a merging of the human and the Divine that rises above the commonplace.

God and man united in purpose — this is the world's best hope!

MINNEHAHA ACADEMY CONCERT BAND TO APPEAR HERE . . .

Date: Friday, March 23, 1979
Place: Franklin Jr. High School
Time: 7:30 P.M.

Free Admission — Free Will Offering

The concert band is composed of 64 members from the 200 students enrolled in bands at the academy. David Hopburn is director. Sacred, classical, and popular selections will be included on the program as well as items by the stage band.

Concert bands from Minnehaha Academy have consistently earned superior ratings in state contests. In recent years the band has toured the east and west coasts as well as midwestern states. The Academy's history of fine music is typified by the fact that nearly seventy per cent of this year's student body participates in performing musical organizations.

Students From China Must Pay Their Own Way

Chinese students at the University of Minnesota will not be subsidized from the institution's budget, President C. Peter Magrath said recently.

Magrath was asked Monday about the possible impact of students from the People's Republic of China during a hearing of the education division of the House appropriations committee.

"We really don't know the answer to that question yet," Magrath said. "We are interested in having those students come here but we are not interested in subsidizing them because we can't afford that."

People's Republic of China has begun an international exchange program to get thousands of specialized scientists trained in the United States and western Europe.

"If the Chinese are really serious about sending large numbers of students to us, they are going to have to pay the freight, and I don't mean just transportation. They are going to have to pay full education costs," Magrath said.

Stanley B. Kegler, University vice president for institutional relations, said it is still too early to determine how many Chinese students will attend the University of Minnesota. "There have been more than casual conversations but we've seen no money in the till," Kegler said.

Kegler said he thought the Chinese exchanges would be "significant" in the areas of technical and vocational education, particularly in agriculture.

In a telephone interview, Josef A. Mestenhauser, director of the international student adviser's office, said that U.S. institutions will have to pay something to support Chinese scholars if they expect their own scholars to go to China.

"It appears to me that the chances of our people going to China would be greatly enhanced if we would scratch our resources to put together something for the Chinese," Mestenhauser said.

China, he said, is an undeveloped country and the Chinese are "overwhelmed" by U.S. educational costs.

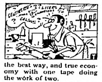
Questions about support for the Chinese were raised when Kegler mentioned the changing and unpredictable nature of enrollment among international students.

Some 2,189 foreign students representing 106 countries are studying at the University with 2,052 of them on the Twin Cities campus.

Hints For Homeowners

HOME IMPROVEMENT, SAFETY AND ECONOMY

GET READY FOR THE METRICS!



In spite of debate for and against the United States' plans to adopt the otherwise world-wide Metric measurement system of centimeters, liters and Celsius, the time is nearing when inches, quarts and Fahrenheit will be historical terms. And, when around the world all people will speak a common language for the first time.

The changeover here is already taking place. Weather announcers advise us that the temperature is 32° Fahrenheit and 0° Celsius. Highway speed limits in some States are marked in both miles and kilometers per hour, and so are new car speedometers. Packaged food contents are given in ounces and grams, liquids in pints and liters.

To ease the transition from measuring in inches to centimeters, new Lufkin tapes and rules at your hardware store are marked side-by-side on the blades in the two systems. That's learning-by-doing,—always the best way, and true economy with one tape doing the work of two.

Here's another way to become more familiar with Metrics, to "see" the difference in the present and new measurements. For fun as well as learning, make up a quiz for the family with questions like "If Jane is 5-feet tall and weighs 90 pounds, what is her Metric height and weight?" A foot equals 0.3 meters, a pound equals 0.45 kilograms. For other approximate conversions, an inch equals 2.5 centimeters, a mile 1.6 kilometers, an ounce 28.4 grams, a gallon 3.8 liters. You can be the first one on your block to know Metrics!

About three weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Nielsen of New Ulm were weekend guests at the home of her parents, the Clayton Mathson's.

During that time Mrs. Jeff Nielsen and Christi Mathson were the hostesses at a baby shower for Mrs. Bruce Mathson held at the Clayton Mathson home. Their guests were Bruce and Shelley's mothers, Mrs. Clayton Mathson and Mrs. Wallace Torkelson; Bruce's grandmothers, Mrs. Alma Mathson and Mrs. Ruth Hagen; Shelley's grandmother, Mrs. Melvyn Torkelson; Brian Mathson; Jodi, Dana and Kari Torkelson; Mrs. Darrel Qualley, Matthew, Dawn and Jill of East Grand Forks; Mrs. Donald Peters and Rena and Mrs. Paul Miramontes, all of Viking; Mrs. Faye Johnson and Damita; Mrs. Tillie Hagen; Mrs. Curtis Lemky and Charlotte; Mrs. Bert Vigen and Elizabeth; and Mrs. Herb Swenson and KayLynn.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Cerney observed their 50th wedding anniversary on Saturday, Feb. 24. Helping the Cerneys celebrate their anniversary at their home on Sunday, Feb. 25, were Mr. and Mrs. Ken Cerney and family, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Lokken and family, Deone Cerney and Chester Keefe, who was the best man at their wedding. Congratulations, Mr. and Mrs. Cerney!

Mrs. Glen Iverson and son Wayne of Goodridge visited last Thursday evening at the home of her mother, Mrs. Goldie Breiland.

Mrs. Clayton Mathson was the hostess for the St. Pauli ALCW meeting at her home last Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Rondorf and Jimmy hosted a whist party at their home Friday evening. Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Rondorf and Ronnie, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Rondorf Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Palmer Omdahl, Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Finstad, and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sorteberg.

Weekend visitors at the home of Mrs. Goldie Breiland were Mrs. Irene Ortloff on Saturday evening. Sunday afternoon were Mrs. Breiland's daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Sorenson, Carla and Cami.

Friday evening and Saturday houseguests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Finstad were Mr. and Mrs. Bill Klyve and Dominic, Mrs. Todd Empanger, all of Crookston, Mrs. John Stoffel of East Grand Forks. Friday evening they attended the father-daughter banquet at the Eagles along with Kermit, Lori and Julie Finstad.

New Math Now Old

Following editorial is from the Fargo Forum:

We would not be so cynical to suggest that styles in teaching the basics in schools are like styles in clothing, which change every so often to help business.

Wide neckties are going out of style, slowly but surely, and wide lapels on suitcoats will undoubtedly be next to go.

The analogy between clothing and book learning comes to mind as the "new math" is demoted in the new textbooks. According to an Associated Press story in The Sunday Forum, the new math did not work out very well. That's the math that insisted the kids learn multiplication, division and the rest of what we used to call arithmetic by using "sets" and definitions and axioms.

Many parents, reared in the days of simple word problems and multiplication tables, were at a loss to help their youngsters with their homework. When you don't know the language, you aren't equipped to help a child understand. And before we condemn the old math as too dependent on rote learning, we should recall the word problems that made many of us really understand what the teacher was talking about. Remember "Johnny had four apples; he gave away two," and "Mother baked six pies and donated five to the church bazaar." That's the kind of subtraction a kid could comprehend with his taste buds.

The publishing firm of Houghton Mifflin, in its new math books, will do away with dense jargon, baffling symbols and wordy explanations of new math. The new books will use examples instead of explanations, pictures instead of verbiage, according to the AP story. Multiplication is illustrated by rows of windows in an apartment building. Shaded boxes prove a half is more than a third.

The publisher's 1967 book for fifth graders read: "Subtraction is the renaming of a sum and an addend as an addend." "Division may be the renaming of a product and factor as the missing factor." No wonder they discarded it.

Though some school systems are sticking with new math, the new old math is quickly making inroads Houghton Mifflin says its updated math series has been adopted this year in more than half the schools in North Dakota, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Kentucky.

The "back to the basics" movement in our country has reverted to many of the old ways Phonics has returned to the spelling lessons, some memorization and some word problems have returned to math.

Meanwhile, we keep changing textbooks every few years. We fully understand the meaning of that.

And how are your wide ties holding out?

You Can't Get There From St. Paul

Following editorial is from the Redwood Gazette:

If your salary was 96.4 per cent higher this year than last year, and destined to rise another 21 per cent next year, you would figure you had it made — come what may with President Carter's anti-inflation efforts.

That's the outlook for members of Minnesota's legislature, who devoted generous amounts of legislative time to their personal economic interest during the 1977 session and now, reportedly, are unhappy with what they wrought.

They moved their annual salary from $8,400 last year to $16,500 this year and $18,500 next year, which is a shade over 120 per cent in all, and isn't a wage-price guideline likely to be proposed even by AFL-CIO's George Meany.

There's more to the story, however.

Last year the lawmakers supplemented their income with per diem payments, $48 per day during the session and for "legislative activity" between sessions, that loose term being made to apply in instances to campaigning for re-election. The result was that this year's salary was approached and instances exceeded when salary and per diem were added.

Doubling one's salary is not a modest approach and it was conceded in legislative halls that some of the per diem would have to go to appease voters. Thus the plan as voted is to pay per diem (daily expenses) this year of $27 for outstate senators and representatives and $17 for metro area lawmaker-commuters.

What was overlooked apparently is that income tax laws, state and federal, are merciless in withholding from salary checks while per diem payments are tax free or nearly so. This puts the lawmakers in a higher tax bracket, where they are presently indicating some discomfort. They are not consoled either that the fall per diem checks were a campaign issue last fall, and some 40 of their number were not returned.

Moral of the story seems to be while you may dream that it would be pleasant to put your own prices on your services, it's not the utopia that it seems.

Why Not Say "No"?

Following editorial is from the Pope County Tribune:

Over half the states in the United States, 27 to be exact, have passed resolutions demanding that a constitutional convention be called unless congress submits a balanced budget amendment to the states for ratification.

Congressmen of both parties have leaped into the breach to urge the states not to follow through on this action because there are no guidelines for holding a constitutional convention, and few people like to tinker with a document that has served this nation well for the more than 200 years of its existence.

Congressmen point out that the budget could easily be balanced simply by cutting back sharply on aid moneys to states, chiefly revenue sharing funds.

Well, what's wrong with cutting out revenue sharing? Nearly everyone of the 50 states is in far better shape financially than the federal government. Many states, including Minnesota and Wisconsin, roll up large surpluses every biennium and can well afford the loss of the revenue sharing funds if it would enable the federal government to finally balance the budget.

Bill Frenzel, Republican congressman from Minnesota's third district, hit the nail on the head when he said that the state lawmakers have gladly accepted federal funds, but yet demand more federal funds and cry at the same time for a balanced federal budget.

Frenzel said that congress looks at state legislatures as "a bunch of spenders telling another bunch of spenders to quit spending."

We don't blame congressmen for getting a bit piqued at legislatures because often-times they spend state and federal funds like drunks on a binge, and then look to the federal government for more.

Why don't the legislatures tell the congress to go ahead and balance the budget, and the states will do their share by turning back revenue sharing funds. The states are in a far better fiscal position to do this than the federal government is to keep paying it out when it means just more deficit spending, and that means more inflation.

It's time that some statemanship showed itself on both a state and federal level.

Not Government's Job

One shouldn't fault the Minnesota safety council for promoting safety, but we disagree with the council's stand on a bill in the state legislature which would require parents of children from birth to four years of age to use federally approved child safety restraints when transporting the children in the family automobile.

The council favors enactment of the bill, and as justification points out the advantages of child restraints in the prevention or abatement of injury from auto accidents.

We certainly wouldn't discourage anyone from using whatever devices could help prevent or reduce injury. Use of child restraints in automobiles should be heartily encouraged, just as emphasis should be placed on the use of protective helmets when riding motorcycles or snowmobiles. Development of more effective equipment has increased its value in injury prevention.

But we continue to maintain that it is not the job of government to mandate such activity and impose penalties for non-compliance. It is quite different for the state to require immunization against communicable diseases — which can affect not only the carrier but those with whom he or she comes in contact — than it is to mandate use of federally-approved devices in private automobiles.

Freedom in our state and our country should include the freedom to make mistakes and the freedom to take risks if we feel so inclined. It is fine to encourage use of safety devices and make the public aware of their availability. It is quite another thing to mandate their use.

NEWS OF CHILDREN

TELETHON TO HELP HANDI"CAPABLE"

Some of the young and not-so-young victims of crippling diseases and birth defects may lead more normal, active lives, thanks to a 20-hour telethon sponsored by the National Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults, on March 24 and 25.

Emmy-Award-winning actor Jack Klugman is national campaign chairman and Don Kirshner, host of "Rock Concert," one of television's most successful rock-and-roll programs, is the co-host. The telethon, now in its seventh year, has raised more than $25 million to help fund a nationwide network of rehabilitation centers, camps, transportation services, equipment loans, workshops and special education courses.

Organized in 1919, the Easter Seal Society is recognized as the world's oldest and largest voluntary agency offering rehabilitation services to persons with disabilities. In addition, it provides help to handicapped persons through a widespread program of legislative activity, public education and collaborative research projects with universities and medical schools.

Getting a supporting hand from actor Jack Klugman, National Campaign Chairman of the 1979 Easter Seal Telethon, and from music magnate Don Kirshner, cohost, is Orange County, Calif. poster child Tobi Sauers.

The telethon's youngest star, seven-year-old Claire Huckel, 1979 National Easter Seal Child, is an example of what both the Society and the handi"capable" can do. Though born with cerebral palsy, this cheerful first-grader walks, runs and plays — with the aid of braces — thanks to a rehabilitation program begun when she was two.

If, as expected, the funds raised in 1979 surpass last year's record-breaking total of $8 million, then perhaps next year even more once-handicapped children will be able to run and play.

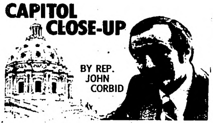
CAPITOL CLOSE-UP



BY REP. JOHN CORBID

I have received several requests for legislation to be introduced that will address problems felt locally, and in this week's column I want to acknowledge those requests. Other bills I am sponsoring should serve other Minnesota areas as well, and while these aren't controversial, they are most important to everyday progress of business and quality of life in general.

First of all, in response to a request from the Red Lake county board, I have introduced a bill authorizing counties to repair ditches and abandon ditch systems that are no longer functional. This will save time and localize control.

I am also seeking legislative approval for the use of plastic pipes in the construction of wells. Research has shown plastic to be every bit as usable as steel, with the added advantage that it is less expensive. The well builders endorse the bill. . .in fact, they requested it. I believe this will be saving in the cost of home building in rural areas.

The settlement of a half-century old dispute is the subject of another bill I've introduced. The Department of Natural Resources has long maintained the right to classify tax forfeit conservation land as to its best use. Northern Minnesota county commissioner would like to see some of the tax forfeit land classified as agricultural and be put up for sale. My bill would require the county boards and the DNR to once and for all settle their differences in district court.

Another settlement of sorts that should have statewide effect is covered by the "arbitration-day" bill of which I am a co-author. Contract negotiations for teachers open up about mid-March, and in recent years, they've rumbled on through the year. Our bill requires the negotiators to come to agreement by July 1 of the year, or submit to binding arbitration. This will prevent conflicts over contracts from extending into the actual school year when everyone should be concentrating on the students.

Small retailers and farmers would benefit from the last two bills I want to focus on. I am proposing that small retailers be allowed to keep $150 each year out of the sales taxes they collect. This would be the state's reimbursement to them for the time they spend processing the sales tax money for the state.

In hopes of avoiding problems with possible grain elevator bankruptcy, I am sponsoring a bill requiring elevator or warehouse owners to be surety bonded for the amount of money they hold for deferred payment to farmers. The farmer is not now protected if between the time he stores his grain and the time he expects payment, the warehouse misuses the funds that were supposed to pay hime. The bill has the support of major Minnesota farm organizations.

In future columns, I will update you on significant developments in the progress of these bills through committee and on the floor. While the pace of controversial legislation here is still cautious, we are giving full consideration to many local interest bills.

CAR TELEPHONE

The Wikstrom Telephone Company, Inc. is planning to install mobile telephone service that will cover the area of Kittson, central and eastern Marshall, Roseau, Lake of the Woods, and Pennington counties. This system will be UHF. The service that we install will cover the area as stated above, plus any other area offering UHF. Before a system can be installed, we have to obtain an FCC license and approval of rates from the Minnesota Public Service Commission. Before those can be obtained, it is required that we have signed up enough users to support the system. Anyone interested in mobile telephone service, contact the Wikstrom Telephone Co., Inc., at Karlstad, Minnesota, 436-2121.

Sincerely,
Wikstrom Telephone Co., Inc.

Afterwards, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Wichterman had a reception at their home in honor of their daughter's baptism for a large group of relatives and friends and Saturday evening a dinner was given by the Wichtermans at their home for Kari Ruth with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Johnson of Plummer, John Maney of Thief River Falls, great-grandfather and paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wichterman and family of Hutchinson present.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert LaFayette and Mrs. Art Wang of Winger were Sunday afternoon and supper guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Solberg near Fosston.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Pahlen attended the St. Patrick's dinner given Sunday at St. Bernard's Catholic church in Thief River Falls and in the afternoon they visited with her father, Leonard Brekke Sr., and at the Larry Shetler home in Thief River Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Erickson moved recently to Strandquist to make their home as they sold their farm here.

Miss Beverly Fallon of Duluth and Mrs. Tom Musich and son Matthew of Virginia came Thursday evening to visit at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jos Fallon. Enroute here, they visited with Alcid Morrissette in Coleraine. They returned home Sunday.

Sunday dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Malwitz near Red Lake Falls were Mrs. Myrtle Malwitz, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Audette and family, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Guillemette and family, Randy Myhre, Mrs. Bob Bouvette and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Berard who had just returned home Thursday from Arizona where they had spent the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Arlt and Amy were Sunday supper guests at the Arnold Arlt home.

Mrs. Nels Vigstol attended an ALCW workshop conference board meeting Friday at the Lutheran church in Karlstad.

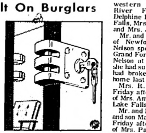
Throw The Bolt On Burglars

Whether you're off on a dream vacation or an extended business trip, you'd like to think that your house or apartment is waiting safely for your return.

But do you know that in this country home break-ins occur at the rate of one every 16 seconds? Almost 2 million residential burglaries result in losses of nearly $1 billion each year with the loss per burglary averaging $500.

To keep your home from becoming a statistic and to ensure that it is, indeed, waiting safely for your return, you can take several simple precautions. Jim Petullo, director of personal lines for CNA Insurance, offers these tips for discouraging intruders:

- Set timers to turn your lights, radio and t.v. on and off just as you would if you were home.
- Put key-operated dead bolt locks on your doors. They are harder to pick and bypass than many primary locks.
- Cover glass panels in your doors with attractive metal grilles.
- Install special locks on sliding doors to make it difficult for a thief to enter by lifting the doors out of their tracks.
- Fasten your screens and windows from the inside so they can't be removed from the outside.
- Stop mail, milk and newspaper deliveries while you're gone.
- Eliminate hiding places for burglars by keeping the shrubbery trimmed and leaving outside lights on all night.
- Ask friends to check your home occasionally during your absence.



To discourage burglars, key — operated dead bolt locks should be installed on all doors.

There are also other things you can do to lessen your loss if a burglar should get in despite all your precautions. Mr. Petullo suggests that you:

- Rent a safe deposit box for your valuables and irreplaceable papers. Few home safes are impregnable and even very heavy ones have been carried off.
- Inventory your household contents and insure them with a homeowner's or tenant's policy. Knowing what you have lost will help you file a claim quickly and accurately. (For a free copy of a household inventory checklist, write to CNA Insurance, Public Relations Department, CNA Plaza — 43S, Chicao, IL 60685.)

FANCY THAT!

Highly flammable liquid oxygen tanks in Cape Kennedy's space complex are insulated with perlite—a naturally occurring substance formed by a flaming volcano!

A more down-to-earth use for perlite is as a home insulator in brick and concrete block walls. Silicone-treated perlite can reduce heat transmission by as much as 52 percent—and double the fire ratings!

Bats in the attic won't be a problem when perlite is its insulating material — it's vermin-, termite-, rot-proof and, most important, it's noncombustible. Easily poured in place by the homeowner, perlite resists compression or settling—so it won't lose the vital air spaces that hold down heat transfer!

Steiner

Mrs. Alfred Solem, Rt. 2, City, 681-3897

Congratulations are extended to David Yonke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Yonke, who placed third in the division for third grade students in a horse drawing contest sponsored by the Red River Valley Winter shows. There were more than 700 entries in the contest. Ribbons were presented to those placing in the competition.

Recent visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Malberg at the Valley Home were Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Korpi of Middle River and Mr. and Mrs. Art Knutson of Thief River Falls.

House guests at the Alfred Solem home from Wednesday afternoon to Saturday afternoon were Bud and Stella Bitzer of Williams. Thursday they were afternoon and evening visitors at the Lester Halvorson home. Their son Keith, who is attending AVTI in Thief River Falls, was also a supper guest there. Friday they were afternoon visitors and supper guests at the Harold Halvorson home.

"Spring Thing" April 6 At Holt

Mrs. Eldon Moe attended a meeting of the East Marshall Home Council at the Nazareth Lutheran church in Holt Monday forenoon. The main feature of business was making final plans for the "Spring Thing" to be held at the Nazareth Lutheran church at 8 o'clock Friday evening, April 6. The program will include magic acts by Phil Dyrud of Middle River, a talk on gardens by county agent Ray Thompson of Warren and a number by each homemaker club of their own choice. Barbara Rodahl of the East Steiner club will be the emcee, and the West Steiner club is on the welcoming committee. Each club is urged to bring crafts for display. A lunch of sandwiches, salads, bars, coffee and punch will be served by the Mary circle of the church at a cost of $2.50 per plate. Club members are asked to let Mrs. Beverly Folden of Newfolden know by Wednesday, March 28, if they plan to attend the event.

Monday forenoon last week Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Larson brought belated birthday wishes to Johnny Nelson of rural Holt and enjoyed dinner with them. That evening Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Kleinwachter and Kent of Strandquist were supper guests at the Larson home.

Mrs. LaVerne Rondorf and Mrs. Alfred Solem were hostesses for the Rebekah circle at the Trinity Lutheran church in Thief River Falls, Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Larson are happy to announce the birth of their first granddaughter. Hope Rachael Kleinwachter was born Saturday morning, March 10 at 1:10 o'clock at Northwestern hospital. She weighed in at 7 lbs. 12 oz. She joins a brother Kent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Kleinwachter at Strandquist.

Tree Diseases To Continue To Drain Budgets

Dutch elm disease and oak wilt will continue to drain city budgets across the state, according to a report issued by the Minnesota shade tree advisory committee.

Don Willeke, chairman of the committee, told a press conference recently that "the people of Minnesota will pay hundreds of millions of dollars . . . whether or not the state acts to ease the (financial) burden."

During the past two years the state has helped cities with the costs of disease management and planting new trees by disbursing some $26 million in matching grants to more than 500 Minnesota cities. The department of agriculture's shade tree program administers separate grants by reimbursing cities for the costs of disease management, identifying, removing and disposing of diseased elms and oaks and planting replacement trees on public lands.

But because funding has run out, the legislature must appropriate new funds to continue the municipal aid program.

The advisory committee recommended that funding for the grants program be increased to $38,792,335 over the next two years and that the disease management and reforestation grants be combined into one fund. Cities could then decide how they could best use their share.

According to committee member Representative Henry Kalis (DFL-Walters) the current program was begun too late to save the elms in some southern Minnesota cities. With the grants combined, he said, these cities could emphasize tree planting.

At the same time, the many cities that have the diseases under control could continue their emphasis on disease management, he said.

The committee is also asking the legislature to create a new grant program to help cities develop tree planting plans for proper tree selection and placement.

Willeke noted that one reason Dutch elm disease is so devastating today is because many cities unwittingly planted almost nothing but elms. Now that new species must be planted he wants to avoid "helter skelter" planting and to ensure that the new trees "will thrive for many, many years."

Another committee member, Dr. David French of the University of Minnesota, told the press that "1979 will be a crucial year to the whole (disease control) program." Many of the remaining elms "can be saved" by using the "tremendous organization we now have in Minnesota."

French also noted that oak wilt could become a larger problem in the state. As cities expand they often move into oak forests. The same organization set up to control Dutch elm disease, he said, could be used to save many of these trees.

The recommendations will be presented to the legislature and have been discussed with Governor Al Quie's staff.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

The Making of a New Enemies List

Using a speech to the University of Michigan as his forum, Senator Edmund Muskie, (D-Maine), recently gave vent to a burst of irrirability and attacked what he called, "the mood of the anti-regulators." These are the people, according to the Senator, who are threatening our environment because they claim it is too costly to protect Americans from the hazards of pollution.

Well phooey! Muskie defends his charge with a flood of angry rhetoric. . .but only drops of reason. And anger often impedes reason. George Jean Nathan once described it as: "The seducer of thought. No man can think clearly when his fists are clenched." So it is with the Senator's arguments. Indeed, the more Muskie carps, the more he flounders.

As an aside, I might also point out that Senator Muskie is Chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, but has no sympathy for Americans who are concerned about inflation and are trying to somehow limit federal spending from the grass roots. He rejects these popular initiatives and calls them "dangerous and poorly thought through." But, let us concentrate here on his regulatory utterances in Michigan.

Muskie says the actions of the anti-regulators are "often blind and negative," and, "the environment is under attack from people who only believe numbers and figures." As proof of this "assault on regulations," he cites the Regulatory Reform bill. He says "it would set aside public health standards," because it would require cost-benefit analyses to be made for all existing regulations.

The Senator is also displeased with the President's new Regulatory Council which will be charged with flagging proposed regulations which could be overly costly. He calls the Council "an obvious symbol of the new anti-regulation, anti-government attitude."

How can Muskie legitimately attack this council before it has even made a decision? More importantly, is it not possible that the President is right, and that he is acting in the best interests of the nation? Senator Muskie is highly critical of the people who supposedly believe only in numbers and figures. Well for heaven's sake, isn't it time somebody started caring about numbers and figures? All the Senator seems to care about is setting regulatory targets of perfection which are frightfully expensive to achieve.

The average family now spends $675 a year just for air and water pollution controls, and this figure could climb as high as $1,400 by 1985. How much is enough? Is it not possible that those who want to take a second look at some of these regulations are not enemies hell-bent on destroying our environment, but are, instead, sincere people trying to reach the fairest possible balance between regulatory costs and social benefits?

Senator Muskie insists that, aside from dollars and cents costs, pollution has costs that can only be measured in lost jobs, health, recreation and future opportunities. Agreed. But he fails to acknowledge that precisely the same is true excessive regulations.

Last year, when the Campbell Works of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company closed it doors in economically distressed Youngstown, Ohio, 5,000 steelworkers lost their jobs. The leaders of these workers told a group of visiting Congressmen that the Environmental Protection Agency had actied like it was only in business to put their company out of business. The men described in detail the agency's punitive regulatory actions against their company, and one Congressman remarked about the severity of the men's criticism.

So there is a case where supposedly needed regulations, enforced with the best of intentions, had disastrous consequences on the lives of the intended beneficiaries. An that case is only one of many.

The Chamber has supplied the President with specific suggestions on how his Administration could ease some of EPA's most excessive air and water regulations. These modifications could save American consumers tens of billions of dollars over the next decade without sacrificing needed safeguards against pollution.

As our regular readers know, we often disagree with President Carter. But in this matter, we think his approach, rather than Muskie's sweeping attacks on imaginary enemies, will guarantee us the possibility of both stregthening our economy and protecting our environment.

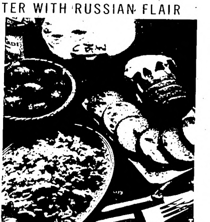
ENJOY EASTER WITH RUSSIAN FLAIR



Want a different idea for Easter this year? Invite your family and friends over for an Easter Sunday Brunch with Russian flair. It's easy to do. Just follow this recipe for Easter Kulich, a traditional part of Easter celebrations in Old Russia. The Kulich is dome-shaped to represent the dome of a Russian Orthodox church. It's an excellent accompaniment to a main course of ham and eggs and, when served along with festive Bacardi Champagne Punch, is sure to make your Easter Brunch a very special occasion.

EASTER KULICH

1/2 cup Bacardi light rum (80 proof)
1/4 cup raisins
1/4 teaspoon ground saffron
1 package active dry yeast
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup milk
1/3 cup butter or margarine
1/4 cup sugar
3 1/2 cups flour
2 eggs
1/2 cup mixed candied fruits and peel
1/4 cup chopped almonds
1/4 teaspoon almond extract
Confectioners' sugar frosting

In mixing bowl, combine rum, raisins and saffron; set aside.

Soften yeast in water (about 115°F.). In saucepan, combine milk, butter and sugar. Heat over low heat to 100°F. Add to yeast mixture with 1 1/2 cups flour. Beat well. Add eggs and 1/2 cup flour, beat until smooth and well blended. Add enough flour to make soft dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board and knead until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl; turn to grease top. Let rise until doubled, about 1 hour, covered, in draft-free place.

Punch down and turn out onto lightly floured board. Knead in fruits, almonds and almond extract. Shape into 2 balls. Place in greased 29-ounce cans or 3 16-ounce cans. Cover; let rise until doubled, about 45 minutes. Bake at 350°F. for 40 minutes or until cakes test done. Remove from cans and cool on wire racks. When cool, drizzle with frosting.

Makes 2 or 3 cakes.

BACARDI CHAMPAGNE PUNCH

1 bottle (4/5 quart) Bacardi light rum (80 proof)
3 cups orange juice
2 cups water
1 1/2 cups brandy
3/4 cup lemon juice
3/4 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1 bottle (4/5 quart) Kupferberg champagne
Ice cubes
Strawberries, halved
Orange slices

Combine all ingredients except champagne. Chill. Just before serving, add champagne. Garnish with ice and fruit.

Makes about 25 servings.

27,000 Cases Of Battered Women Noted

There were nearly 27,000 battered women cases in Minnesota last year, according to estimates made by the state department of corrections.

Estimates are based on data collected by the department from March to November, 1978. State law requires police, hospitals and human service agencies to report battering incidents.

During the report period more than 4,000 cases were filed. The 27,000 number results from a research sample designed to eliminate underreporting.

Reports gathered thus far have produced the following statistics:

+ Husbands and ex-husbands were assailants in 63.4 per cent of the cases. Boyfriends and cohabitants were assailants to 29.5 per cent of the time.

+ Women ranging in age from 15 to 87 have been physically abused, but 76 per cent of the women are younger than 34.

+ Battering happens in every region of the state.

+ Medical reports show that battered women require medical attention 78.5 per cent of the time.

+ Women from all races are assaulted; 83.9 per cent white, 6.9 per cent American Indian, 6.5 per cent black, 1.5 per cent Chicana-Latina and one per cent other races.

+ Medical reports indicate that 69 per cent of the women were assaulted previously, 62 per cent by the same assailant.

State corrections commissioner Jack G. Young called the figures shocking.

"Our experience in corrections tells us another grim story behind this kind of violence. Our prisons are filled with adults who as children grew up in violent homes."

Data collected also indicates a need for more services for battered women, he said. The Minnesota legislature has provided funds to the department of corrections for the establishment of six shelters for battered women which are located across the state.

Shelters are located in St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Marshall, Rochester and Brainerd. Shelter staffs provide physical protection, emotional support and information to battered women.

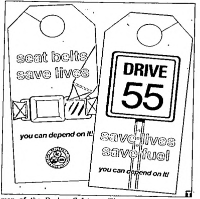
Information gathered at the shelters indicates that of the more than 2,700 women requesting shelter last year, 79 per cent or 2,136 were turned away because of a lack of space. In the seven-county metropolitan area, 85 per cent of the women requesting shelter had to be turned away.

Governor Al Quie has approved a $2.7 million budget request to the 1979 Legislature to increase the number of shelters in the state and to create a pilot treatment program for the violent spouse.

The statewide program for battered women, which relies on citizen task force and 12 regional groups for direction and assistance, distributes information about the problems of battering. For further information contact Ellen Pence, Director, Programs for Battered Women, 430 Metro Square Building, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101, (612) 296-6463.

NEWS OF HIGHWAY SAFETY

Selling Traffic Safety



Traffic fatalities and injuries are on the rise again. About 50,000 men, women and children—roughly equivalent to the entire population of Biloxi, Miss.—were killed in traffic accidents last year, a five-year high.

What's being done about it?

The efforts of government, police agencies, and the organized traffic safety movement have helped to keep the death toll from reaching even more grisly heights than it already has. Cars today are safer than ever, and new roads meet rigid safety engineering standards. Still, as Americans are driving more vehicles of all types more miles every year, the death toll continues to creep upward.

Now comes an attack on traffic accidents from the people who wrote the book on how to sell—the nation's automobile dealers. About 14,000 new car, truck and tire dealers—members of the Highway Users Federation's Dealers Safety and Mobility Council—have mounted a nationwide campaign to urge customers to use their safety belts and observe the 55 mph speed limit.

Showrooms of these dealers will feature colorful displays and posters urging customers to buckle up and slow down. Many of the dealers will sponsor direct mailings, advertising, and a variety of community activities promoting the two safety measures under the slogan, "You Can Depend On It."

Why safety belts and the 55 mph speed limit?

Lee J. Beaudry, a Tucson automobile dealer and chairman of the Dealers Safety and Mobility Council, says dealers know that ten to fifteen thousand lives a year could be saved if everybody buckled up.

Beaudry also says the 55 mph speed limit saves both lives and fuel, but average speeds are creeping up again. Surveys show that 56 percent of motor vehicles are exceeding the speed limit, which contributes to fatalities and the severity of injuries in traffic crashes.

The fuel-saving benefits of 55 are a matter of record, says Beaudry. "In the first 18 months after 55 went into effect nationally, it saved at least three billion gallons of motor fuel—more than enough gasoline to keep all the cars in Arizona and Indiana going for a year."

The two measures—increased use of safety belts and observance of 55—are two high payoff safety areas which do not require costly new government programs, Beaudry says.

Why are dealers getting out front in traffic safety?

"Before a businessman is an automotive dealer, he is a member of his community," says Beaudry. "As the 'point man' for highway mobility, he has a self-interest in cutting traffic accidents and in saving fuel. Motorists and dealers have to work together to save lives and fuel, and thereby help preserve mobility in this country."

Next time you're shopping for a new car, truck or set of tires, don't be surprised if you get a soft-sell pitch to buckle up and slow down.

Protecting your dollar!

By
Warren Spannaus
Attorney General
State of Minnesota

In Minnesota with our long, cold winters we are particularly interested in energy conservation. The federal government recently acted to help consumers conserve energy at a reasonable cost.

In November 1978 the national energy conservation act was passed. The act provides for loans to families buying and installing energy conservation improvements, weatherization of the homes of low-income families, development of solar energy, standards of energy efficiency for appliances and several other programs.

Many provisions of the act require the U.S. department of energy to develop rules to implement these programs, os it may be a while before we feel the full impact of the new law.

A provision of importance to a great many citizens is a new tax credit allowed for energy conservation measures in homes. It allows a federal income tax credit equal to 15 per cent of whatever you spend for such things as weatherstripping, insulation, certain furnace modifications, thermostats which automatically raise or lower the temperature of your home and multi-glazed windows. The maximum credit allowed is $300. You can claim this credit on Form 5695 of your tax packet.

Presently the Internal Revenue service has a booklet "Publication No. 903," which gives specific information on the tax credit.

The department of energy will be making recommendations to the internal revenue service about other specific energy conservation measures which should be eligible for a tax credit, but those recommendations will probably not be made for several months.

If you are thinking about installing an energy saving device in your home, there are several things to remember.

—Make sure the change or addition really will save energy. Utility companies can help you make this determination. The national energy conservation act requires utilities to develop such a service.

—Shop around for the best dollar value and most energy efficient ways to make changes.

—If you are having someone come into your home to do the work, check out the reputation of the company and the length of time it has been in business.

—Compare the prices of several companies, and make sure you receive an itemized list of things which will be done.

—If you have a question on the accuracy of an energy fact you are given, contact the Minnesota energy agency, the internal revenue service or other government agency to make sure you get the true facts.

If you have any questions on this or any other consumer matters, please feel free to write to the Attorney General's Office, 102 State Capitol, St. Paul, Minnesota 55155.

"Sound Of Music" Is LHS Musical

LEAD ROLE of "Maria" in the Lincoln high school musical "The Sound of Music" will be played by Ruth Ferber. Maria, a young postulant at the Nonnberg abbey in Austria is judged not fit for the life of a nun and is sent by the Mother Superior to be governess of Capt. Georg Von Trapp's seven children. The musical centers around her life in the abbey and with the Von Trapp family.

Concert choir and orchestra of Lincoln high school in Thief River Falls will present Rogers and Hammerstein's musical "The Sound of Music" Friday, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium. David Morken is director of the production with James Solsten as orchestra conducter.

Tickets are available from members of the concert choir or at Larson Music company.

Story of the musical is based on the true adventures of the Von Trapp family as they were recorded in the book "The Von Trapp Family Singers" by Maria Augusta Von Trapp. Included in the production are such familiar songs as "Do Re Mi", "My Favorite Things" and "Edelweiss". Setting for the musical is the area of Salzberg, Austria, in the summer of 1938 before the nazi takeover of the country.

Maria Von Trapp is sent by the Mother Superior of the Nonnberg abbey to be governess for Capt. Georg Von Trapp's seven children. She falls in love with the Captain and they are married. When he refuses to accept a key post in Hitler's navy, the family makes an escape while singing in concert.

Ruth Ferber is cast in the lead role of Maria with Tom Bjorkman as Captain Von Trapp. Jane Olson plays the Mother Abbess with Liz Brodin as Elsa Schrader, Bill Saetre as Max Detweiller, Kathy Achenbach as Liesel Von Trapp, Dave Beito as Rolf Gruber, Bill Hustad as Friedrich, Lisa Nelson as Louisa, Rob Blankenfeld as Kurt, Leslie Weigand as Brigitta, Julie Hanson as Marta, Meredith Green as Gretl, Jan Swanson as Frau Schmidt, Brett Carter as Franz, Deb Green as Sister Margaretta, Deb Fearn as Sister Sophia, Jodi Ripley as Sister Berthe, Dave Waale as Herr Zeller and Brian Ranum as Admiral Von Schreiber.

Committee chairmen include: Choreography, Jodi Ripley; makeup, Cari Worner

Goodridge PTA Meet To Hear Glenmore Rep

Postponed meeting of the Goodridge PTA will be held at the Goodridge school gym on Tuesday. William Kotts, supervisor of field service for the Glenmore treatment foundation of Crookston, will talk on alcohol and related problems, according to Mrs. Caroline Pittman, president.

The meeting will start at 8 p.m. and the talk will be at 8:30 p.m. Lunch and coffee will be served after the meeting. Parents, teachers and any one else interested is asked to attend the meeting.

There are many misunderstandings and misconceptions about treatment, Kotts says. Most people approach treatment with fear and anxiety unaware of what is ahead of them and, as one person who went through Glenmore recently stated, "afraid of the one thing that could help". It is not unusual for people to think of treatment only in terms of "drying out" or "the drunk tank" or "the cure". We find that people in general are looking for more information about treatment — what it is, where it is and how to get people there."

Shetler Will Give Recital At Northland

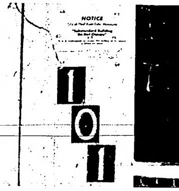
Kathy Shetler, a sophomore at Northland community college, will be featured in a solo recital Tuesday at 8 p.m. Kathy, a soprano, is a music major from Thief River Falls and a student of Mrs. Barbara Geer, applied music instructor at Northland.

The hour-long recital will include selections from the opera "Carmen", several sacred songs, a few classical art songs and selections from Boradway's best musicals. Kathy will conclude her performance with a collection of favorite contemporary music.

Miss Shetler will be accompanied by Mrs. Geer on the guitar and Kristy Gerardy, a freshman music student from Thief River Falls, on the piano.

The recital will be held in Northland fine arts auditorium. The public is welcome and no admission will be charged. A reception will be held for guests following the recital.

Yearly Inspection Could Improve Rental Housing



"I HAVE CONDEMNED quite a number of houses over the years," says city building inspector Bob Bregier. Condemned buildings are posted with a notice that reads, "Substandard Building: Do Not Occupy. It is a misdemeanor to occupy this building or to remove or deface this notice." Bregier said of the house which is shown posted in the photo, "Just general appearance of the whole place is so bad." Bregier indicated he tries to complete condemnation while a building is empty and that the owner of the property is always legally notified. The building inspector has authority to condemn residential buildings on the basis of the uniform housing code which also gives him authority to require repairs in residential property.

by Kim Blaeser
Times Reporter

"I wish they would come in and look these places over and make them come up to a little bit better standards," stated an anonymous woman who called the Times office after reading the March 14 article dealing with the landlords' problems in the rental situation. The caller indicated that she is an older person who has lived in more than one substandard facility, has complained repeatedly to her landlord but now fears eviction if she issues further complaints. "We don't expect a mansion," she says. "We know we are the poverty class. But you should see some of the places I've lived in. You know the slums of the big cities? It's the same here. We don't want to stay here but there is nowhere else to go."

(This is the final article in a series examining the conditions of rental facilities available, the complicated relationship between tenant and landlord, the local enforcement of the uniform housing code and avenues for legitimate complaints about rental facilities.)

It is for the sake of people like this anonymous woman that the city is contemplating a yearly inspection of rental facilities. Building inspector Bob Bregier says, "I've had people call me that would complain about something and not want to give their names and I can understand that, but it's pretty hard for me to do anything for them if they don't want to tell me anything. That's why we are toying with the idea of having yearly inspections. Once a year we would go to rentals, inspect them and license them. We would have a small fee that would help cover the expense of going over and checking them."

The yearly inspection proposal has not as yet gone to the city council for consideration since there are a few things that have to be worked out, such as who would do the actual inspecting. With an estimated 3,468 rental units in the city of Thief River Falls, a yearly inspection of each of them would take considerable time — time the building inspector alone does not have. So, implementation of such a proposal might necessitate the hiring of another employee.

Larger cities such as St. Cloud do have a person just to handle housing but, Bregier says, "Communities our size are all strapped with the same problem — the money it takes to do the job." Bregier in-

Faculty At Northland On Strike Tuesday

Barring action at the state level later today, faculty members at Northland community college will be on strike beginning at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday. Instructors here are members of the Minnesota community college faculty association which has scheduled a strike against all community colleges tomorrow morning.

Picketing will begin at 7:30 a.m. and a strike headquarters has been set up, according to Barb Hauger, Northland faculty's representative on the state MCCFA board. She said that action by the governor in attempting to satisfy the complaints of the organization would be required to halt the strike.

Dr. Alex Easton, college president, said that business as normal is scheduled for tomorrow and that no official notice of class cancellation will be given. Hauger said, however, that instructors are informing their students that they will not be present to teach classes Tuesday.

Offer First Aid Teaching Class

Dr. Charles Samuelson, chairman of Pennington county chapter of the American Red Cross, announced that an instructor's course in multi-media first aid instruction will be offered in Warren.

The course is eight hours in length and will be offered from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, March 24, in the health occupations classroom of the cooperative center.

Anyone who has taken the regular multi-media first aid course and holds a current certificate is eligible to take the instructor's course. There is no charge for the course.

Anyone interested in this instructor's course may contact the Tri-River cooperative center at 745-4781

Hearing On Rezoning Is Scheduled Tonight

Planning commission hearing on the request for rezoning of property in the highway 59 and First St. area is scheduled to commence at 7 p.m. tonight in the city council chambers.

Property owners in that area presented the city council with petitions requesting a downzoning of various lots in property bounded on the west by highway 59 and on the north by First St. The lots are presently zoned C-2 (highway commercial) and the requests are for C-1 (neighborhood commercial) and R-2 (medium density residential) classifications. Acting on the petition, the council directed the planning commission to hold a hearing on the requested zoning changes.

A downzoning in that area at this time would affect the plans of Holiday Stationstores to construct a gas station on property presently housing the Highway 59 Fixit shop. Under both C-1 and R-2 classifications, a gas station would be a non-conforming use although with a special use permit the station could be allowed in a C-1 zone. In the C-2 classification, three homes that presently exist are actually non-conforming uses.

At this time Holiday has an option on the property on the southeast corner of highway 59 and First St. and has proceeded with site plans and other paperwork necessary to obtain a building permit although at press time three items needed prior to the issuance of such permit had not been received.

Also tied to the outcome of the hearing tonight is the settlement of litigation between the city of Thief River Falls, Holiday Stationstores and Northwestern Hospital Services. If Holiday is allowed to build at the site in question the hospital will be able to obtain the property on which Holiday is presently located and the two parties will drop a suit pending against the city from a previous disagreement over a special use permit which would have allowed Holiday to build at 1st St. and Horace Ave.

Plains Bookbus Here March 26

First traveling collection of Midwestern literature will arrive in Thief River Falls Monday, March 26, for a two-day visit at Northland community college and the Northwest regional library. The Plains bookbus, described as "an innovation in bringing regional literature to the people," carries over 250 books and magazines to more than 70 towns each year.

Minnesota poet Mark Vinz will join the Bookbus Monday for a 7 p.m. reading at the library and for workshops during the day. Both are open to the public at no charge.

Vinz' poetry has appeared in about 75 magazines and anthologies from across the country. His four published collections include "Red River Blues" and "Songs for a Hometown Boy." He is a member of the English department at Moorhead state university and editor of the literary magazine "Dacotah Territory."

The reading and Bookbus visit are co-sponsored by the library and the Plains Distribution service, Inc., Fargo, N.D., a non-profit organization whose aim is to promote the midwestern literary arts.

PDS director Joe Richardson described the type of publications carried on the bus as "a mainstay for many of the most respected literary talents who for lack of exposure may pass unknown by the general reading public."

He explained, "Almost all the titles are edited and published by writers. This is one of the reasons that you will not often find them in bookstores and libraries. . . these independently published works have not been promoted for the mass marketplace."

He said that the bookbus is an extension of "what could well be called a growing literary movement in the midwest."

Monday workshops with Vinz are at 10 a.m. at Northland college and 1 p.m. at Lincoln high school. Richardson will lead an hour long class on small press publishing at 12 noon and again at 2 p.m. on Tuesday at the college. Further information may be obtained from Julie Chase, Northwest regional library.

The schedule for bookbus visitation is: Monday, 10:30 to 12 noon, Northland college; 1 to 3 p.m. Lincoln high school; 4 to 6 p.m., library; Tuesday, 10 a.m. to 12 noon, library; 3 to 4 p.m., Northland college. The bus will also be open after the Monday night poetry reading.

Academy Band To Perform At Franklin Fri.

Concert band of Minnehaha Academy, Minneapolis, will present a concert Friday, March 23, beginning at 7:30 p.m. at Franklin Middle school in Thief River Falls. Sponsoring the concert is the Evangelical Covenant church of Thief River Falls.

Minnehaha's concert band is composed of 64 members selected from the 200 students enrolled in bands at the academy. Friday's program will contain sacred, classical and popular selections, according to director David Hepburn.

4th Ice Show Scheduled Here Mar. 31-Apr. 1

As members of the Thief River Falls recreational skating association go into the final two weeks of preparation for the fourth annual local ice show, pressures begin to build for Kathy Comartin Halgrimson who is in her fourth year of handling arrangements for the event.

Skaters performing in the revue on Saturday and Sunday, March 31 and April 1 in the Thief River Falls sports arena range in age from two years to definitely adult and in experience from beginner to advanced. Title of the show this year is "Most Wonderful Times of the Year".

Due to increasing popularity of the event, shows will be held on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. and on Sunday, April 1, at 3 p.m. Admission will be $1 for adults, 50 cents for children six years of age and older, and youngsters under six years of age admitted free.

Various adult groups and more than 300 children will participate in the event this year. Working with Mrs. Halgrimson of Bemidji in providing professional assistance to the skaters are Gary Knox, Alice Bowen and Meredith Sandsborn of Grand Forks and Linda Worth and Yvonne Sabo of Thief River Falls. Class leaders and adult helpers include a number of local volunteers with Jan Nelson and Eleanor Kuchowicz being available at most times to assist.

Creative costuming, attractive lighting and appropriate music add to the production. The show is sanctioned by the United States figure skating association.

Business Office Procedures Is Seminar Topic

"How To Improve Your Office Operations" is the title of a seminar scheduled at Northland community college Saturday, March 31. A good attendance is expected at the seminar which will begin at 8:30 a.m.

Dr. Roger Bloomquist and Dr. Mark Langemo, consultants for offices and education, Grand Forks, N.D., will provide information on improving office procedures. They will cover such topics as "Human Relations in the Office," "Improving Your Business Letters and Forms," "A Look at New Technology" and others.

The cost for this workshop, which will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., is $12 and carries one college credit.

"Common problems relating to the great amount of paperwork in office operations and how to get the job done for less money will be a major part of the workshop," said Barbara Hauger, business instructor at Northland.

For further information, contact Barbara Hauger, Northland community college at 681-2181.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Newcomers Dance And Fish Fry Set; Officers Elected

At the meeting of the Thief River Falls Newcomers club held Tuesday at the Elks club, the club's spring dance was scheduled, a fish fry was set and officers for the new year were elected.

The club's annual spring dance was scheduled for May 19 with Dee Winter appointed to confirm the date with the American Legion. Centerpieces for the dance, consisting of bread baskets with fabric flowers, will be made at an evening coffee on Thursday, March 22, at 7:30 p.m., at the Jan Quinlivan home at 507 North Duluth. Mrs. Quinlivan stated that she will provide the supplies for the baskets. All members were asked to participate and bring suitable fabric scraps for the flowers.

A fish fry for couples was discussed and the event was set for March 30 at 7:30 p.m., at the Best Western.

Results of the annual election included Jan Quinlivan elected president; Ruth Tweet and Dee Winters, co-vice president; Kathy Turner, secretary; and Eleanor Kuchowicz, treasurer. The newly-elected officers will be installed at the potluck-dinner meeting set for Tuesday, April 10, at 8 p.m., at the Elks. The installation will be open to guests and alumni.

Jean Shaffer presided at the meeting attended by nine members. Guests were Nancy Morrison, Rita Gengler and Dorie Zimmerman. Nancy Morrison won the door prize. Mrs. Quinlivan served as hostess.

Fiedler and Stucy Elected Leaders Of Star Club

Leaders of the Star Homemakers club for the next season were elected at a meeting of the club held March 12 at the Ekelund dining hall.

Leaders elected were Elva Fiedler and Loretta Stucy. They will assume their duties in the fall.

The meeting began with members answering roll call by giving a household hint. The lesson, "Drying flowers and making flowers at home," was given by Florence Morrison and Elva Fiedler. A poem was read by Mildred Hovet. Lois Swanson won the market basket and Edyth Solberg, presided at the meeting.

Members present were Edyth Solberg, June Johnson, Marion Marquis, Mary Marquis, Florence Morrison, Elva Fiedler, Lois Swanson, Irene Lovely, Loretta Stucy and Mildred Hovet.

A potluck lunch concluded the meeting.

Janice Wold Becomes Bride of Lonnie Nyflot

Janice Wold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rueben Wold, rural Thief River Falls, became the bride of Lonnie Nyflot of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Nyflot, Lake Bronson, at a recent ceremony held at Our Saviors Lutheran church.

Rev. Eugene Enderlein officiated at the double ring ceremony attended by approximately 325 relatives and friends. Kristi Gerardy, a friend of the bride, was the organist. She played "Nadia's Theme," for the processional and also accompanied Solvig Swenson, a friend of the bride, as she sang, "Wedding Prayer," and "The Lord's Prayer." As a special feature, the bride sang "You Light Up My Life," accompanied by Clark Dyrud. He provided flute accompaniment for the prelude.

Forming a background for the bridal party were candelabra decorated with straw flowers and assorted greenery.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in an organza gown with an empire bodice featuring a sheer yoke with cameo motif and Venice lace trim. Organza ruffles outlined the yoke, graced the high neckline and edged the lace cuffs on her sheer bishop sleeves. Her A-line skirt and chapel-length skirt were edged in matching lace. A lace Juliet headpiece held her sheer walking - length veil bordered with two rows of daisy lace. She carried a cascading bouquet of assorted fall-colored mums, silk roses and babies' breath accented with fall-colored leaves.

Patti Wold was the bride's personal attendant.

Maid of honor was Janet Johnson, a friend of the couple. Other attendants were Lynette Wold, sister of the bride; Carl Oistad, a friend; Cindy Nyflot, Lake Bronson, a sister of the groom, and Marilee Johnson, Minneapolis, a friend. They wore identical, halter-styled gowns of a mint green crepe, topped by coordinating green floral capes. In their hair, they wore a single bronze colored daisy mum with babies' breath. They carried colonial bouquets of assorted fall colored mums and foliage, accented with babies' breath.

Jeffrey Nyflot, Lake Bronson, attended his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Derald Franson, rural Thief River Falls; Allen Melbye, city; Scott Falk, Wahpeton, N.D.; and Steve Sandahl, city, friends of the groom. Serving as ushers were Bob and Richard Wold, brothers of the bride, and Tim Sollid, Bloomington, a cousin of the groom. All wore dark green tuxedos with mint green ruffled shirts and bronze colored daisy mum boutonnieres. The groom wore similar attire with a silk rose boutonniere accented with babies' breath.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Wold selected a rose-colored floor-length gown with a pleated skirt and matching jacket. The mother of the groom wore a lavender floor-length gown with a sashed waistline and a rounded neckline. Their corsages were of mint green carnations and white miniature mums.

Honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Aune, the bride's grandparents.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given in the church parlors by the bride's parents. Serving as host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Schmitke, uncle and aunt of the bride. Marci Franson, a friend of the bride, registered the guests as Delpha Nyflot, aunt of the groom, and Grace Hanson, a cousin of the bride, served the punch.

Highlighting the serving table was a three-tiered wedding cake, iced in white and decorated with clusters of autumn colored straw flowers. Between the Grecian pillars was a flowing water fountain. The cake was cut and served by the bride's aunts, Alice Hanson and Carol Halvorson. Marion Nyflot and Emy DeBoer, aunts of the groom, poured.

Waitresses were Denise Anderson, Cindy Mortrud, Darlene Grothe, Karmin Espe and Wendy Erickson. At the gift table were Kristi Schmitke and Janine Halvorson, cousins of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of Lincoln high school and the Thief River Falls area vocational technical institute where she completed the medical secretarial course. She is employed by the Thief River Clinic. The groom, a graduate of Karlstad high school, is manager of Valley Dairy.

DeCor Club Meet Includes Report On Allen's Book

Report on Robert Thomas Allen's "We Gave You the Electric Tooth Brush," was given at the meeting of the DeCor group of the Federated Women's club held Thursday evening at the home of Ethel Aase.

Reporting on the book was Mary Ann Lofberg. She stated that the book is one man's defiant defense of the older generation.

Also adding interest to the meeting was a display of needlework and crocheted articles made by Mrs. Lofberg, Ethel Aase and Madeleine Seramstad.

During the business session, the Federated Women's club district meeting to be held at New York Mills was discussed.

A dessert lunch was served by Mrs. Aase.

Members present were Mildred Wik, Lillian Aasland, Gladys Isaacson, Mary Ann Lofberg, Madeleine Seramstad, Geneva Overum, Carla Peterson and Ethel Aase.

Argyle Hosts Legion-Aux. Child and Youth Meet

"Children are our most important commodity today. We do care about the many problems they are facing and we are working towards finding proper and satisfactory solutions," stated Philip Kjaglien of Fergus Falls as he spoke at the Ninth District American Legion and auxiliary Children and Youth annual conference held Sunday, March 11, at Argyle. Kjaglien is Ninth District child and youth chairman.

In reporting on the Topeka Area "D" conference, he said that three topics are stressed each year. At the end of the year, one topic is dropped and a new one added. Last year's topics were alcohol, drug abuse and child abuse. Although the main topic this year will be disruptive youth, the dropped topic, "Child Abuse," will not be forgotten. He said that in many instances parents must be treated as well as the child. Some parents weren't loved when they were children. Consequently they don't know how to love their own children. Parents who are guilty of abuse are sick and need help. Supportive groups are now being formed by parents who recognize their need of talking with other parents who have the same problem.

Kjaglien also showed a film featuring the 1975 International Special Olympic games for the retarded. He stated that the Special Olympics did not focus on winning, but rather on participation. Its purpose is based on contributions to the physical, social and psychological development of the retarded participants.

It was noted that Special Olympics is an international program with a total enrollment of almost a million retarded persons from all 50 states and 20 foreign countries. The state of Minnesota has 6,000 retarded citizens in the program, which is open to anyone, regardless of ability. Kjaglien said it is felt that through positive, successful experiences in sports that participants gain confidence and self-mastery, enabling them to build a self-image associated with success rather than failure. By actual performance within the assigned competitive divisions of their age groups, the participants may advance to state or international competition. The State Special Olympics for track, field and wheelchair games will be held May 30-31 at Moorhead State university.

The Special Olympics is now being supported by the Legion and auxiliary. This action was taken at the Legion and Auxiliary National convention last summer at Denver, after being selected by the Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. Foundation.

Also speaking to the group was Mrs. Peter (Blanche) Coppa of Bayport, department auxiliary child and youth chairman. After reading the poem, "Children Learn What They Live," she explained the eight grants given by the Legion and Auxiliary Child and Youth Welfare Foundation. The grants are for cystic fibrosis; to help foster parents understand the problems of foster children; juvenile delinquents; classroom; forgotten children (this grant is for foster children wanting extras like a bike or class ring that the welfare doesn't provide); Sauk Center Girls home; Red Wing correction center for boys; and disruptive youth.

The 1979 points of emphasis were stressed by a panel with Phil Kjaglien and Mrs. Raymond Rapacz, ninth district auxiliary child and youth chairman as moderators. Panel members were Oscar Elshaug, Crookston Mental Health center, and Jane Mack of Warren, Marshall county public health nurse. Elshaug, in speaking on "Child Abuse and Neglect," stated that while neglect includes only two types: physical and emotional; child abuse features the addition of sexual and verbal abuse. To emphasize what to look for in a child suspected of abuse or neglect, he showed the movie "Focus," available from the Northwest Mental Health center at Crookston.

Jane Mack, in stressing "Immunization," stated that two-thirds of the children in Minnesota are not properly immunized. To prevent a serious outbreak of communicable diseases, a law was made in August that a child must be fully immunized before beginning school. She also stressed the importance of keeping good records on immunization.

In the general discussion on disruptive youth, the problems noted were: lack of respect, lack of parental support for teachers, superintendents and school boards; parents no longer considering education a privilege; courts tying the hands of the schools; and the children knowing that they have 99 chances.

The conference was opened by Argyle's first vice commander Warren Keller. Oliver LaBine, Legion chaplain, led the opening prayer and Mrs. Lou Efta, Argyle's auxiliary first vice president, welcomed the guests. Greetings were given by Ninth District auxiliary president Mrs. LaVern (Jeanette) Berg of Dalton and Ninth District Commander, Robert C. Reeve, Thief River Falls.

Also attending from Thief River Falls were Mrs. Reeve, Ninth District First Vice President, Constance Driscoll, president of the local unit 117, and LaVonne Haraldson.

Explorer Scout Medical Post Is Chartered

Recently chartered for explorer scout post 46, a medical post, was Northwestern hospital services of Thief River Falls. Newest post in the Voyageur Trails district, Boy Scouts of America, the medical post will provide an opportunity for young adults between the ages of 14 and 21 to pursue the medical field with the assistance of the hospital and several of its staff.

District boy scout executive Gordy Przybylski indicated that the new post will be administrated by a committee made up of Jill Schoonhoven, post advisor, Tim Brosseau, Larry Golightly, Mike Erickson and Tony Brennan. The explorer post currently has 21 members.

Official installation of the unit and presentation of the charter is scheduled for late April.

Each institution that uses the scout exploring program agrees to provide a meeting place, supervision, and adult leadership. The local council and its districts provide the program, unit service, leadership training, recognition, special facilities, and administrative services and direction.

The Northern Lights council is a member agency of the Thief River Falls United Way and receives 46 per cent of its operating funds from local United Ways across the council with the remainder coming from sustaining membership enrollment.

There are now two explorer posts in Thief River Falls the other one being in the law enforcement area.

Offer Higher Coverage For Crop Insurance

Number of significant improvements have been made in the insurance coverage for 1979 crops, including a substantial increase in the dollar amount of protection offered on such crops as wheat and barley, according to Will Dufresne, regional director of the Federal Crop Insurance corporation.

Farmers who haven't carried insurance on their crop investments in the past may now want to make a hard new look at the benefits of an all-risk insurance policy, says Dufresne. In the case of wheat, for example, a policyholder electing to insure his crop at the new $3 election, coupled with the increased bushel guarantee per acre, can obtain up to 50 per cent more protection than was available a year ago.

Crop investment protection is also available to the growing number of sunflower producers in northern Minnesota. The all-risk feature covers farmers against all natural hazards faced in producing a crop, says Dufresne.

For the crop year that ended with last fall's harvest, Federal Crop insurance wrote $2 billion of insurance coverage on 26 different crops and Dufresne expects this year's total to be at least ten per cent higher. Major reason for the expected increase is the continued rise in crop production expenses which, coupled with narrower profit margins, leave farmers increasingly vulnerable to the whims of nature. Dufresne notes that it is no longer unusual for a single crop loss to wipe out an investment equal to the profits for four or even five good years.

Deadline for taking out an insurance policy is April 15, 1979, but farmers interested in insuring their crop investments are urged to apply as early as possible. By doing so they are assured of having insurance even if sales of new insurance policies have to be stopped because of unfavorable weather or soil conditions. Anyone wanting to find out exactly what it would cost to obtain insurance for his crops, and what yield guarantee the policy provides in his area should contact the FCIC office for his county as soon as possible.

CLASSIC GUITARIST Demetrio Ballesteros and tenor Ricardo Visus, both native Spaniards, will be featured in a convocation Wednesday at Northland community college in Thief River Falls. Bellesteros, a professor at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Madrid, is serving a residency at Moorhead state university this month. Visus is an assistant professor of music at Moorhead state and is recognized as one of Spain's leading tenors. He also trained at the Royal Conservatory of Madrid as well as at Pamplona Conservatory and the Conservatory of Milan. The two musicians will perform in the Northland auditorium at 1 p.m. and will conduct a 2 p.m. workshop following the convocation. The public is invited to attend both at no charge.

Farm Payrolls For Labor Rise In Minnesota

Minnesota's hired farm labor payroll is averaging over $2.5 million a week this winter and is 87 per cent higher than a year ago, according to the January quarterly national farm labor survey, agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin recently reported.

"This is a further indication of the rebuilding of Minnesota's livestock farming enterprise that had been sharply reduced by several years of economic and weather disasters. We can grow no crops here in winter months, so farm labor demand is dominantly for the production of meat, milk, and eggs," commissioner Seetin stated.

The January 7-13 survey by the state-federal crop and livestock reporting service estimated that Minnesota farmers were employing 23,000 hired workers, compared to only 14,000 hired hands a year ago. Hired farm payroll per week in January last year was $1.3 million.

Hired farm workers also are putting in longer hours this year, an average of 36.2 hours per worker during the latest survey week, almost three hours more than in January 1978.

Average wage for hired farm workers in Minnesota this January was $3.01 per hour, up a nickel from a year ago.

Commissioner Seetin said that despite the 9,000 increase over a year ago in hired farm workers, Minnesota's total farm labor force this January dropped to 144,000, because the 121,000 family farm workers were 12,000 fewer than last year.

On annual average, Minnesota still ranks second only to Iowa in family farm workers, with a 1978 average of 158,000. Minnesota's 1978 average of 195,000 family and hired workers was fourth highest among all states, behind California, Texas, and Iowa. Minnesota's average of 37,000 hired farm workers during 1978 was eighth highest in the nation.

Sunflower Oil High On World Market Demand

Growing domestic demand for sunflower oil and a vast world market should maintain a profitable price for sunflower seed producers.

Fred Benson, agricultural economist, believes that growing demand for sunflower oil in this country will help maintain harvest prices at the currently profitable level. "Sunflower seeds contain a high quality oil," he explains. "Consumers are just starting to become aware of the low cholesterol and high polyunsaturate levels in this oil.

Domestic demand is encouraging expansion of U.S. crushing and processing facilities, he adds.

The projected 48 per cent increase in sunflower acreage for 1979 should not depress prices. "Growers can now get contracts for harvest delivery at 10 to 11 cents," he says. "A 48 per cent acreage increase will probably not result in that great of a production increase. And when you have a small total production to begin with, adding to it by half is not substantial; not as substantial as increasing soybean acreage by 3 per cent."

The increase will still keep the U.S. share of the world sunflower trade relatively small. An extra 1.3 million acres planted in the U.S. is not likely to have much impact on the huge world market, he explains.

The extension management specialist advises growers to contract part of their crop. "Try to cover your out-of-pocket expenses by locking in at least 10 cents per pound," Benson says.

Inspection May Help Improve Rental Housing

dicated that he thought cities such as Detroit Lakes, Bemidji, East Grand Forks and Brainerd all operate mainly on a complaint basis such as Thief River Falls does, but that Crookston has an individual who handles strictly housing.

Another problem that would be involved in the implementation of the proposal for yearly inspections would be determination of exactly what standards rental units must meet. The city already adopted the 1976 edition of the "Uniform Housing Code" as the official city code for housing facilities but this document has only been loosely enforced and then only on a complaint basis. The problem with strict enforcement of the code is that it is believed that the majority of the existing rental facilities would not meet code requirements and there is some controversy about the necessity of some of the uniform housing code requirements such as ceiling height, room size and number and size of windows.

Basically the uniform housing code defines the amount of yard space required in relation to the size of the building; sets minimum ceiling height at 7'6" with other specifics given for sloping and furred ceilings; and requires that every dwelling unit have at least one room with no less than 150 square feet of floor area, that other rooms except the kitchen be at least 70 square feet in area and that sleeping room floor area be increased by 50 square feet per occupant if more than two persons occupy the room. All habitable rooms except the kitchen are required to be at least seven feet in any dimension. Each bathroom stool must be located in a clear space of at least 30 inches with a clear space in front of it of at least 24 inches.

Requirements are given regarding natural light and natural or mechanical ventilation based on the size of the room. Generally, habitable rooms must have a window or windows of at least 10 square feet except for bathrooms and kitchens if those rooms are equipped with adequate mechanical ventilation.

The uniform housing code requires that all public halls, stairs and exitways, such as those of apartment houses, be adequately lighted; it states that every dwelling unit must be provided with a bathroom, a stool and a bathtub or shower and that the bathroom must have a tight fitting door; and it requires that every kitchen and bathroom have a sink with both hot and cold water required in the kitchen and at least cold water required in the bathroom.

Every dwelling unit must be connected to an approved sewage disposal system and an approved water system and be equipped with heating facilities capable of maintaining a room temperature of 70 degrees F when it is 20 degrees below zero outside. The building must be structurally sound and all ceilings, floors and walls must be kept in good repair. Plumbing, sanitary, electrical and heating facilities must all be installed and maintained in a safe manner. At least one exit to the outside or a public hallway is required in every unit and sleeping rooms must have at least one operable window or exterior door for emergency exit.

The code also outlines the complaint procedure and the authority of the building inspector. When the building official receives a complaint he is to inspect the building. If he finds it substandard he can issue a notice and order the owner to repair the facility setting a time limit for completion of the repairs, order the structure vacated or order it vacated and demolished depending on the extent of the problems.

The owner has a right to appeal the decision and the right to a public hearing. If the owner does not appeal the decision or the result of the hearing is that the decision of the building inspector is upheld and the owner does not commence the repairs with the specified time, the building inspector can vacate the building and order the repairs to be completed with cost of the work to be assessed against the owner or made a personal obligation of the owner and collected by appropriate legal procedures.

Specifics of the code are complicated, but the point is that the code is on the books in the city of Thief River Falls ready to be enforced. What remains to be settled is to what extent it should be enforced and in what manner.

Under the present enforcement by complaint system, Bob Bregier has a form he asks tenants issuing the complaints to fill out. The form requires the tenant to supply his name and address, the property owner's name and address and the nature of the complaint.

When he receives a complaint the building inspector goes to the house to see what the problem is. Bregier indicated that, if possible, he likes to have the landlord go with him when he makes the inspection. "If there is a life-safety factor involved," he said, "something dangerous for fire or these types of things, something very unsanitary like the sewer not working we give them just so much time, within reason, to take care of the problem and get things up to standard as much as possible."

The question is how much is possible, to what extent should the standards be enforced? "In some of these older houses," Bregier says, "you have to realize that everything can't be perfect. I could be tougher and more picky. Maybe I should be — I don't know. Maybe you have to have some of these houses that are not really all that fancy but are still safe as far as life-safety things, that are clean enough and have the proper facilities in them."

Perhaps a yearly inspection of the rental units in Thief River Falls will become a reality, or perhaps it will remain financially out of reach of this city. But in the meantime, approximately one third of the population will live in rental facilities, some of them inevitably encountering sub-standard housing.

If a unit is substandard because it has a ceiling height of 7'4" instead of the required 7'6", unless an occupant is 7'8" tall and subjects himself to a possible concussion each time he straightens up, we would expect the tenant to be reasonable and overlook such noncompliance. But if you cannot heat a unit to above 50 degrees F when the temperature drops below zero outside, the tenant has a legitimate complaint — one any reasonable landlord would acknowledge and attempt to alleviate.

If a renter feels he has a legitimate concern and his landlord fails to take any action to solve the problem, the tenant does have several avenues for complaints. He may contact the city building inspector, the local social services departmdent or community action program.

Kathleen Treb of Tri-Valley Opportunity Council, Inc., encourages senior citizens who need help in making a complaint to contact the long term care ombudsman program, 281-5832 and those under 60 to get help by calling the information and referral number, 281-4444. Northwest Minnesota Legal Services also provides low income individuals with help in dealing with landlord-tenant problems and information is available from the consumer protection division of the attorney general's office at the state capitol building in St. Paul.

One thing the potential complainant should keep in mind is that he is legally protected from any retaliatory action by his landlord. In other words, a landlord cannot evict a tenant or raise his rent simply because he has filed a complaint.

But the fact that the law is on their side may not convince remters such as the anonymous woman who called the Times office to come forward and make a complaint about the facilities they are living in. If the uniform code was adopted "for the protection of life, limb, health, property, safety and welfare of the general public," it would seem that some type of regular enforcement should guarantee that protection to all renters.

CAR TELEPHONE

The Wikstrom Telephone Company, Inc. is planning to install mobile telephone service that will cover the area of Kittson, central and eastern Marshall, Roseau, Lake of the Woods, and Pennington counties. This system will be UHF. The service that we install will cover the area as stated above, plus any other area offering UHF. Before a system can be installed, we have to obtain an FCC license and approval of rates from the Minnesota Public Service Commission. Before these can be obtained, it is required that we have signed up enough users to support the system. Anyone interested in mobile telephone service, contact the Wikstrom Telephone Co., Inc., at Karlstad, Minnesota, 436-2121.

Sincerely,
Wikstrom Telephone Co., Inc.

Services Held At Gatzke For Roger Loven, 40

Funeral services for Roger Loven, 40, of Gatzke, were held Thursday at 11 a.m., at the United Lutheran church in Gatzke. Loven died Sunday morning, March 11, at Northwestern hospital, following a lengthy illness.

Rev. Robert Amundson officiated at the services. Vocal selections were by a trio composed of Mrs. Keith Grandstrand, Mrs. Paul Saurdiff, Jr., and Mrs. Davin Halvorson with Melanie Lunsetter serving as organist. Interment will be in the Moose River cemetery near Gatzke. The Collins Funeral home, Middle River, is in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Larry Hagen, Ronald and Richard Engelstad, Orlin Ostby and Gerald and Orin Aune.

Military honors were accorded by the Middle River American Legion post 444.

Roger Wesley Loven was born at Gatzke on June 6, 1938 to John and Ingeborg Loven. He attended school and grew to manhood in the Gatzke community. He also attended the Northwest School of Agriculture at Crookston, graduating in 1956.

He served in the U.S. Army from 1958 until 1960. Following his discharge, he returned to the Gatzke community, where he farmed in Rollis township.

He was a member of the United Lutheran church of Gatzke and the Thief River Falls Eagles club.

Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Ingeborg Loven, Gatzke; a brother, Duane Loven, Grand Forks, N.D.; one niece and a nephew, Kim and Tim, both of Grand Forks, and several aunts and uncles.

He was preceded in death by his father, who died in January of 1967.

Services Held At Badger For Mrs. M. Tauer

Mrs. Marguerite Tauer, 80, of Thief River Falls died Tuesday at United hospital in Grand Forks, N.D. as a result of injuries received March 7 when she was struck by a semi-trailer truck in this city.

Funeral services for Marguerite Tauer were held Saturday at 2 p.m. at Our Redeemers Lutheran church in Badger, with Rev. Jerry Hanson officiating. Interment will be in the Badger city cemetery. The Helgeson Funeral chapel, Roseau, is in charge of arrangements.

Honorary pallbearers were John Dermaid, Bennie Michelson, Arnold Peterson, Joseph Jenson, Albert Kammen and Obert Wammer.

Serving as active pallbearers were James Grothe, Bill Tauer, Donald Thompson, Edvin Haaland, Bob Graff and George Foster.

Mrs. Tauer, the former Maguerite Alice Foster, was born November 9, 1898 at Minneota to Mr. and Mrs. Hamlet Foster, now deceased. As a child, she moved from Minneota to Streeter, N.D., and in 1913 returned to Minnesota, settling in the Duxby community. In 1928 she moved to Badger, and on June 28 of that year, was married there to Joseph Tauer. She was a member of Our Redeemers Lutheran church, and served on the church council. For the past few years, she had resided in Thief River Falls.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Dallas (Alice) Grothe of Cheney, Wash.; one son, Harvey Tauer of Thief River Falls; 16 grandchildren, three great-grandchildren, two brothers, Elmer and Clarence Foster of Badger; and two sisters, Mrs. Elmer (Helen) Johnson and Mrs. Clarence (Lilly) Haaland, both of Badger.

In addition to her parents, she was preceded in death by her husband and one daughter.

U of M Asks Sports Fund: Meets With Critical Response

Legislator hearing details of the University of Minnesota biennial request recently reacted strongly against a statement that failure to fund women's sports would jeopardize federal money to the university.

Robert A. Stein, university vice president for administration and planning, told the house education division that failure to provide an annual $1 million for women's athletics could mean the university would be in violation of title IX of the higher education amendments of 1972.

"We're not where we should be on the basis of moral principles and proper division of men's and women's programs and compliance with the letter of the law," Stein said. "We hope to God we're in compliance with the law because failure to comply would have serious consequences for the University of Minnesota."

He said that the university is second among big ten schools in state support for women's atheltics, but that the others are moving quickly to increase their funding because of federal pressure.

Rep. William Dean, IR-Minneapolis, jumped on Stein's statement, saying that federal funding is not likely to be cut off regardless of interpretations of the act by the department of health, education and welfare.

"You know as well as I do," Dean said, "That if we did not fund women's athletics the federal government isn't going to stop supporting the University of Minnesota.

"Minnesota's senators would not let that happen, the vice president of the United States isn't going to let that happen and, for that matter, the president of the United States isn't going to let that happen. Given all that, it's just not going to happen," he said.

"It's the kind of gross exaggeration that, as a member of the legislature, I don't like to hear from somebody who knows better," Dean said. "There is no school in the United States with a history of greater state support for women's athletics than the University of Minnesota."

Dean suggested the the university look at the $3.9 million men's athletics budget as a source of support for both men's and women's programs.

Stein agreed with Dean that the federal government is unlikely to cut off all of its annual $86 million support to the university if the state does not increase its funding of women's athletics.

But, he added, a university analysis has shown that it would be difficult for the Gopher sports program to support women's athletics when it is facing deficits itself.

"Another part of our general struggle right now is just to keep the men's program alive," Stein said.

He said the university has studied reducing the number of men's sports from eleven to eight, the number required to remain in the big ten conference.

"Cutting three sports would not save that much. We are doing an analysis of costs," he said. "It's revenue from ticket sales that supports the men's programs. So that's not an easy solution for us right now."

Stein began his presentation with data showing the projected growth of women's intercollegiate athletics into a large competitive program similar to the men's programs.

"We feel we are offering an opportunity for women athletes comparable to that of our male athletes," he said. Although the women compete in a regional, large-college conference, he said, there is some movement toward a big ten conference for women's athletics.

Stein said that women athletes at Minnesota have been "astonishingly successful," with several teams placing nationally.

"If anything close to that had been achieved by our men's programs, that would have been banner headlines for weeks if not months. Unfortunately, our women's programs haven't captured the same level of media attention," Stein said.

Stein estimated that the budget for women's athletics would grow to nearly $1.4 million in 1980-81 from the current budget of $783,812.

He said that the University is assuming that title IX requires similar opportunities for men and women rather than equal funding, but said that this interpretation is currently under HEW review.

University President C. Peter Magrath has said that the University will not pay for intercollegiate athletics with funds from academic program budgets.

Grygla Gong Show Entries Are Still Open

Entries are still needed for the third annual Grygla-Gatzke Jaycee sno-fest gong show to be held Saturday at 8 p.m. at Grygla. Entry fee will be $5 and a $100 first prize will be offered (based on 20 contest entries).

Persons interested in competing in the talent contest are encouraged to contact Lynn Anderson at 294-6111 or 294-6311 by Wednesday. People of any age may compete with acts that are either serious or humorous.

Other scheduled events on Saturday include broomball tournament from 9 a.m. to noon, dinner from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., Ma and Pa slalom from 1 to 3:30 p.m., and softball game between the Lions and Jaycees at 3 p.m.

Sen. Hanson To Speak At Seminar Sat.

"Women in Action" seminar scheduled for Roseau on Saturday, March 24 has added Senator Marvin B. Hanson of Hallock, assistant majority leader of the Minnesota senate, as keynote speaker. He will address the seminar on the topic "Women and the Law."

Six special interest sessions will begin at 10:30 a.m. following Senator Hanson's address. Two of the sessions of special interest to women will be "Starting and Operating a Small Business" and "Career Development". The morning sessions will be repeated in the afternoon beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Registration will be at the Roseau high school beginning at 8:30 a.m., March 24 with a charge of $12 for one college credit.

"This is a good opportunity for women to get together and share ideas," said Barbara Hauger, Northland college business instructor.

Contact Northland college at 681-2181 for additional information.

Film Will Be Shown At Tues. NOW Meeting

"Mary Rogers Ripley" is the title of a film to be presented at the March 20 meeting of the Agassiz chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW). The film tells the story of the first Minnesota woman doctor. After film viewing, Julie Chase of Northwest regional library will talk about women in history and will provide general information about the materials and services of the library. The NOW meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in room B-37 at Northland community college.

Sherrie Nelson In "Who's Who"

Sherrie Nelson, a sophomore at the University of Minnesota technical college — Crookston (UMC) and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Nelson of Goodridge, has been named to the 1978-79 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges".

Students are named to "Who's Who" on the basis of their academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and future potential.

Spencer Foods Purchased By Land O' Lakes

Addressing the 58th annual meting of Land O' Lakes, Inc., Claire Sandness, chairman of the board, said Land O' Lakes members have opened their food marketing doors to farmers who otherwise might not have such opportunity.

Sandness, a dairy and grain farmer from LaMoure, N.D., cited the 1978 purchase of Spencer Foods, Inc. as another example of Land O' Lakes "extending our reach" this time to beef producers.

Spencer Foods, Inc., a beef slaughtering and fabricating company headquartered in Spencer, Ia., has processing plants in Spencer and Schuyler, Neb.

With the Spencer purchase, Sandness said the way was cleared for hundreds of upper midwest cattle producers to market their livestock on a cooperative basis. Never before, he noted, had they had such a market readily available to them.

The Land O' Lakes chairman declared, "Without the kind of cooperative market we can provide, many family farmers will be forced out of business. Large farming operations will become gigantic, and investor-owned farming operations will become commonplace."

The remarks of the Land O' Lakes chairman were delivered to an audience of nearly 3,000 upper midwest farmer-owners and managers of member cooperatives attending the opening session of the Minneapolis-based regional cooperative's annual meeting in the Twin Cities.

Sandness told the cooperative's membership that some members are concerned about Land O' Lakes becoming too big as it reaches out to serve additional farmers.

"We all know," he said, "that bigness in itself has no virtue. But when bigness is built on the principle of individual freedom and at the same time provides us with increased marketing strength, a broader product base and greater efficiency, then bigness does have viture and should be welcomed," he said.

He called bigness a by-product of Land O' Lakes diversification, not the goal.

Land O' Lakes' first step toward diversification was taken more than 50 years ago, when the founding dairy farmers opened their cooperative door and invited turkey and egg producers to join them for their mutual benefit.

"I do not know how fast we will move in the future," the chairman of the board said. "But I do know," he stated, "that we will progress in a planned, orderly fashion so as to protect and enhance the interests of present members while extending a helping hand to other farmers who also can benefit from cooperative marketing."

The Land O' Lakes chairman observed that the cooperative took another step to becoming a total food company in 1972 when soybean growers accepted "the friendly out-stretched hand of Land O' Lakes, and we bagan marketing margarine for them."

"As we continue to move toward becoming a total food company through greater diversification," Sandness concluded, "we are placing outselves in a better position in the marketplace than if we remained with a limited food line."

A farmer for more than 30 years, Sandness has served on the Land O' Lakes board of directors wince 1969. He was elected chairman at the close of the cooperative's annual meeting two years ago. Sandness also is a member of the North Dakota State Senate.

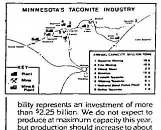
The Meaning of Mining

Minnesota has several industries which affect everybody in the state, through the jobs they provide, through their reliance on others who supply needed goods and services, and through taxes they pay. One of these basic industries is mining and processing taconites and natural iron ores. This report outlines the current status of iron mining in Minnesota.

Taconite's importance grows

Mining of natural iron ores accounted for less than 10% of our total production in 1978—5.2 million tons of natural ore compared to 53.7 million tons of taconite pellets. This is a healthy output but it is 11.3 million tons short of the 65 million Minnesota's eight taconite plants are designed to produce. We fell short of our design capability in 1978 for several reasons: some plant expansions had not yet been completed; some plants experienced start-up problems following the 1977 strike; one plant had a serious breakdown in an underground conveyor system which slowed processing; other taconite plants cut back because the demand for iron ore was lower—steel production was hit hard by competition from imported steel, which captured nearly 20% of our domestic market in 1978. Our 65 million ton taconite capability represents an investment of more than $2.25 billion. We do not expect to produce at maximum capacity this year, but production should increase to about 58 million tons.



Production and economic benefits

Big production figures are impressive, but how do they affect people? Last year, more than 16,000 men and women worked at producing ore and pellets. They were paid over $335,000,000.

Indirect benefits

Each job in a basic industry, like mining, sustains another job in a support industry, such as transportation, manufacturing, refining, or distribution. We purchased $649 million in supplies and services last year, doing business with more than 2400 Minnesota firms. These are not just in Duluth, the Twin Cities, or on the Iron Range. Businesses in communities like St. Cloud, Rochester, Little Falls, Owatonna, Redwing, Pipestone, Mankato, Winona, and Fergus Falls all have mining industry customers.

Taconite Taxes

Tax payments by mining companies help provide educational and governmental services to all Minnesotans. They also support the local taxing districts in Iron Range areas. Mining companies in Minnesota are taxed at a high level. We estimate that 1979 state and local taxes on just 8 taconite companies will exceed 100 million dollars.

Mining's environmental challenges

While mining means economic opportunity, it also requires environmental responsibility. We can't mine iron, or have things made of iron and steel without disturbing the landscape.

Iron mining occupies a small fraction of Minnesota's land—0.2%. That's one-half of one per cent of the land we devote to farming and forestry. Comparing mining's large economic benefits with this small land use helps reveal mining's value as a Minnesota industry.

Closed circuit water systems

How we treat the land, as well as air and water, is important. Water used in taconite processing can be continuously recirculated in a closed circuit system. One of Minnesota's eight taconite producers, Reserve Mining Co., has been an exception to this practice, discharging process water and taconite tailings to Lake Superior. Technical impediments to a closed circuit water system for Reserve have been resolved and the long controversy is settled. Reserve is converting to on-land tailings disposal with complete water recirculation. All tailings discharge to Lake Superior will end by April 1980. This $370 million project—including air quality improvement—is one of the largest environmental control programs ever undertaken.

Revegetation

We have planted hundreds of thousands of trees and we seed thousands of acres of stockpiles, tailings beaches, and embankments each year; while these efforts require time, they'll pay off in years ahead.

Dust control

Our taconite plants have dust collectors to prevent air pollution. Our tailings disposal basins are comparable to large fields, dusty when dry and subject to wind erosion. To combat this we keep them under water, or spray them with dust retardants, and revegetate inactive areas.

Iron mining's harmony with the environment is shown by Minnesota's mineral and recreational industries which have developed side-by-side in northeastern Minnesota, good neighbors for nearly a century.

Energy conservation

Taconite processing was made possible by a big-machine technology. These machines, which saved our industry, need lots of energy. Pelletizing furnaces and kilns require large quantities of fuel. Some use natural gas, some burn a heavy grade of fuel oil, some burn coal, most can switch between alternate fuels, according to availability. One company has begun an experiment with coal gasification. All producers are taking measures to conserve energy; even a small percentage saving represents a large amount of power or fuel.

Excellent safety record

While respecting natural values, mining is concerned with its people, too, particularly in keeping high safety standards. Minnesota's iron mining men and women are safer on the job than off the job. Iron mining in our state has a good record: 5.41 injuries (of the type that kept the worker away from work) per million hours worked. This is half the nationwide average of 10.87 for all industries.

Iron mining linked to steel

Minnesota's iron mining industry is closely linked to the vitality of the domestic steel industry. Steel's ability

- to fight unfair dumping of imports, reducing our trade deficits;
- to attract capital for expansion and modernization;
- to cope with economic and environmental regulation,

all have a direct, measurable, and certain effect on Minnesota iron ore operations. At present, the steel industry is recovering from its deepest decline since the Depression. Efforts to check import dumping are being applied, production has improved, earnings are better, and forecasts are cautiously optimistic. These are good signals for Minnesota.

This report summarizes the "meaning of mining" to Minnesota. If you have questions about mining, or if you are a teacher who would like classroom materials on mining, write to the Iron Mining Industry of Minnesota, 828 First National Bank Building, Duluth, MN 55802.

Farmers Created Their Own Problems

Over the years we have carried a number of editorial comments about the plight of farmers in the marketplace and the struggle of agriculture to remain solvent in the face of prices which have not matched increasing costs. That opinion still holds. It is extremely difficult to remain in business with little if any control over the prices of what you sell or what you buy.

While those who live in the heavily agricultural areas of the state and country recognize the difficulties faced by farmers, there are those in other parts of the country who have a different perspective on what has been taking place in the rural areas. One of the viewpoints is expressed in this editorial from the Ely Echo:

A whole bunch of farmers drove tractors to Washington, D.C., last week to protest what they feel are poor prices for their crops. Without question, what it is now costing a good many farmers to operate, makes it difficult for them to come out ahead with current prices on cash grain crops. What the farmers want is more money for crops that nobody needs. . . that is, there are just too many bushels of grain being grown and the grain growers want the taxpayer to pick up the tab. The problem is, the taxpayer has been paying crop subsidies for years and it never did solve the problem. What it did, is put more land into crops.

A couple of questions come to mind: Where were all these farmers when the federal government went on a big drainage binge, much of it at taxpayers expense, to ditch, dredge and drain hundreds of thousands of acres of wetlands to convert them into cropland?

The facts are the farm organizations and farm country Congressmen were in there hand and foot getting that federally-subsidized drainage in order to create more cropland and grow more cash grain crops. . .in direct competition with existing farms. It was greed, pure and simple.

And the fact that those wetlands were natural flood reservoirs didn't make a hoot. That the ditching and dredging created a whole nightmare of floods downstream, floods that the taxpayers are annually footing the bills for, also didn't make a hoot. It was a mad scramble to get more land drained and under the plow. . .and that scramble is still going on.

The second program was the mass destruction of woodlands. . .cut 'em down, burn 'em up and grub the stumps out of the ground. All of 'em. Back in the 1920's there was scarcely a farm without a woodlot. They used the wood to heat the farm home. Then came cheap oil and automatic heat. Zip went the woodlots.

There are a lot of north country farmers who were smart enough not to level their woodlots and those farmers are sitting pretty well right now. But the corn belt farmers couldn't think any farther ahead than next year's crop check. Furthermore, all of this was made easy by government assistance either through cash or through tax write-offs as "farm improvement." Improvement? Ho.

Down in the corn belt they cut down thousands of acres of oaks, maples and walnuts. Some of the wood went into furniture and veneer. Some of it was simply stacked and burned. Anything to get rid of it. Very, very little was ever replanted or managed for timber. After all, who wants to wait 40 or 50 years for a tree to mature when there is cash to be had next fall for a grain crop?

Right now, one good walnut tree will bring from $1,000 to $15,000. Just one tree. There is one heck of a market for good hardwood trees, but a lousy market for grain. Yet a lot of farmers are still ripping up the remaining woodlots, burning the trees and grubbing out the stumps to make more land for grain crops.

Furthermore, the bulk of the farmers in the U.S. are abominable stewards of the land. The value of contour farming and wind breaks have been well understood for centuries, but most U.S. farmers still plow straight up and down hill and make up for washing topsoil by dumping on tons of fertilizer. And they obliterate every vestige of land cover so the wind can pick up the balance of the topsoil and blow it away.

There are all kinds of federal programs to aid farmers in putting in soil conservation plans. With a few notable exceptions, these programs are ignored. The facts are, the federal government can't even pay the farmers to farm right. To the credit of President Carter and Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, they didn't get all shook about those farmers driving their $50,000 tractors into Washington D.C. to complain about grain prices. What Bergland should have said when he saw those tractors is simply: "Boys, you've got a problem. . .and it may well be that you are riding on it."

Giving The People A Voice

Following editorial is from the Pope County Tribune:

Four proposed amendments to the state constitution would give Minnesotans a stronger voice in their government if the amendments were approved. And a recent Minnesota Poll showed that Minnesotans would no doubt overwhelmingly support the amendments when they come up for a vote at the next general election.

The strong backing for the four amendments indicates to us quite conclusively that people in Minnesota are generally dissatisfied with the manner in which their elected officials govern over the actions of the legislators and elected officials.

One amendment, which would limit state spending to the rate of growth of personal income in the state, was favored 84 per cent to 14 per cent.

Another amendment would require a 60 per cent favorable vote in the legislature to increase taxes, and this was favored 73 per cent to 25 per cent.

The other two amendments concern the controversial initiative and referendum. Initiative would allow the voters to propose a new legislation after the required number of signatures was obtained. In this way, a proposal from the voters could be presented to the voters in the next general election. This was backed 75 to 23 per cent.

Referendum gives the citizens the power to recall an unwanted law again after the necessary signatures are obtained. A petition to terminate a law would be voted on in the next general election. If a majority of those voting favor repeal, the law would be rescinded, and this was favored by a vote of 79 to 19 per cent.

Initiative and referendum are generally not favored by members of the legislature because they claim it makes government cumbersome and ineffective, but all four proposed amendments are favored strongly by Gov. Al Quie, and with that type of support from the general public, any legislator that opposed giving the people a chance to vote on them would certainly hurt his chances for re-election.

We have long favored the processes of initiative and referendum, and think there is considerable merit in the other two as well. The major source of inflation in this nation has always been uncontrolled government spending, especially on a federal level, but also true to some extent on a state level. Limiting state spending to the rate of growth of personal income makes sense, and is something that should be enacted on a federal level as well.

The amendment to require a 60 per cent vote of the legislature to increase taxes would merely make it a little more difficult to boost taxes, so that any measure that would get that heavy a favorable vote must have some merit.

The large margins of approval for the four proposed amendments indicates people have a strong mistrust of government and particularly elected officials. It's time to give government at least partially back to the people and these four proposed amendments would be giant strides in the right direction.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Father to teenaged son: "Your mother married me for what I was. . the only man she could get!"

A well-known gambler died. The funeral was well attended by his professional friends. In the eulogy the minister asserted, "Spike is not dead — he only sleeps." A voice from the crowd interrupted with the words: "I got $100 says he's dead."

"Young man," said the stern-faced judge, "it is alcohol and alcohol alone that is responsible for your present sorry state."

"I'm glad to hear you say that, Your Honor," the defendant replied. "Everybody else says it's all my fault."

As a pretty girl entered a crowded bus a man jumped to his feet. "No, no," she objected. "Please sit down; I insist." "Insist all you want, Miss," the man replied, "but I'm getting off here."

Doctor to overweight patient: "Your diet will be very simple: If food tastes good, spit it out."

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Yes, Black America, There Is A Better Way

For years, the liberal message to the black community has been one blaring and unending commercial for more government as a cure to any and all black complaints. Those of us in the business community have sent a different message — free enterprise is the true philosophy of those struggling to get ahead. For while the wealthy usually have the influence to live well under any system, an ambitious poor person can only succeed in a climate of freedom which provides individual opportunity, rewards achievement and places a premium on dynamic economic growth.

It has become customary to believe blacks are, and will always remain in the liberal camp. Even if that perception was correct, it isn't anymore. Several factors have recently combined to increase the receptivity of blacks to business: The undeniable failure of so many supposedly compassionate federal programs; the willingness of liberals to take black support for granted and to oppose the repeal of laws which actually keep blacks pinned to the bottom of the economic ladder; the recognition by business of the special economic and social needs of the black community, and the growing commitment by business to marshall the resources of private enterprise and promote genuine economic change — these are all reasons why more blacks are increasingly looking to business for new leadership and a possible new partnership.

Americans are by nature a compassionate people. During the past decade they have voluntarily given billions of dollars in taxes to the federal government, thinking the money would be used to help those who cannot help themselves. But much of that money never reached the poor, because championing the disadvantaged has now become more than an occupation. Thomas Sowell, a black economist, describes this cruel hoax with these words: "To be blunt, the poor are a gold mine. By the time they are studied, advised, experimented with and administered to, the poor have helped many a middle-class liberal to achieve affluence with government money."

Many of these same liberals, who believe they alone know the real needs of the poor, are themselves promoting policies which keep the poor down. For example, the quest for a new future of no growth, soft technology and lowered expectations has become very chic for many card-carrying liberals who are already members of the leisure class. But just think what that would mean for poor families struggling to break out of the ghetto? No growth would freeze them into a permanent position of poverty and dependence.

Liberals are also fighting repeal of a whole series of laws and regulations which blatantly discriminate against poor working people. Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the NAACP, was recently quoted in Time Magazine saying unnecessary regulations were killing black neighborhoods because "nobody, but nobody is buying into a decaying black ghetto except blacks themselves. So the effect of some regulations is almost 100 per cent to exclude blacks."

But that's just the beginning. Eminent black economists like Walter Williams have pointed out that the minimum wage law results in higher black unemployment because it often makes hiring unskilled workers too expensive for only marginally profitable businesses. Yet despite the pleadings of black economists, Congressional liberals refuse to support a youth-wage differential, while they continue to favor an unrealistically high minimum wage.

But what about blacks who already have a skill — say construction — and are hoping to get work under a federal contract? Chances are they'll be disappointed, too. If, like many blacks, they're non-union, they could easily be zinged by the Davis-Bacon Act which requires all workers on federal construction projects to be paid at high prevailing levels. The Administration's economists favor repeal of Davis-Bacon, but labor doesn't, so President Carter is leaving it alone.

Or what about black persons, for example, who would like to purchase a taxi? Sorry, even they face tremendous roadblocks. Some cities have tremendously expensive licensing fees. So many blacks who could become small taxicab businessmen end up collecting welfare.

I believe the business community is approaching these very real problems with genuine solutions. Last year, U.S. corporations voluntarily bought $1.8 billion in goods and services from minority-owned business firms. Business is also trying to help straighten out the scandal-ridden CETA program and redirect it into the private sector training program where blacks can learn real skills for productive jobs.

Obviously, we must all do more. But I believe, along with Bemjamin Hooks and an increasing number of other black leaders, that real progress can only come from a stronger private economy and more private jobs. In the words of Hooks himself, "at the national level, and in every local Chamber of Commerce and Better Business Bureau, black leaders and business leaders should be sitting down to deal on the points on which we agree."

Amen.

Seek Candidates For Miss Teen, Miss Little MN

Local residents interested in participating in the Miss Teen-Miss Little Minnesota pageant to be held April 7 and 8 in Minneapolis may obtain applications by writing to State Pageant Productions; 4500 Stevens ave. s.; Minneapolis, Minnesota 55409, and indicating the age division in which they are interested.

Candidates must be between the ages of three and 17 and will compete in one of four divisions including: Petite (ages 3 to 6); Little Lady (ages 7 to 10); Young Lady (ages 11 to 13); or Miss Teen (ages 14 to 17). Contestants will be judged on personality in an inverview situation and poise and appearance in party dress and sportswear.

Winners in all four divisions will advance to the national pageant competition to be held in Nashville, Tenn., in July and will represent their communities at a variety of functions throughout the year as well as serving as state ambassadors. In addition, the photogenic winners in each division will also qualify to participate in a national pageant event.

Horse Care Course Is Rescheduled

Horse care and management course that was scheduled to begin at Northland community college Tuesday, March 13, has been rescheduled and will now begin Tuesday, March 20. The change was made due to weather conditions on March 13.

Over 40 people have preregistered for the course which will now start one week later. Classes are now scheduled for March 20, 27, April 3 and April 10 from 7-9 p.m. in room A 16 at Northland community college.

Subject matter that will be covered will include feeding, costs of keeping horses, reproduction, horsemanship, selection, diseases and foot care.

Instructors are well known individuals in care and management of horses, such as Dr. Robert Jordan, Ida Paulson, Dr. Mary Isaacson and Gary Simmons.

Course cost is $12 and persons who have not preregistered as yet may still do so by calling Willard Kottke at Northland community college, 681-2181.

The course is being offered cooperatively by the University of Minnesota, Pennington county extension service and Northland community college.

State Hockey Tournament

Our second trip to the Minnesota state high school hockey tournament last week was certainly no less enjoyable than our 1978 tournament debut. Watching outstanding hockey teams and outstanding hockey players is a great way to end the season.

It was once again a working vacation for us as we served as photographer for the Roseau Times-Region.

Next year we suspect it may be more work and less vacation since Thief River Falls has already been given the nod as 1979-80 preseason hockey favorite.

"Thief River Falls and Warroad should be the favorites in Section 8 next year," said Roseau coach Gary Hokanson who watched a portion of Edina East's 4-3 championship game overtime win over Rochester John Marshall from the St. Paul Civic Center press box. "But, we should be right in there too,' he promised.

Tournament Comment

Best comment we overheard during the 1979 state high school hockey tournament came from a young Roseau fan when it was announced that Thursday afternoon's opening session drew a record 19,145 spectators—largest crowd ever to watch a hockey game in Minnesota.

The youngster turned to his equally young companion seconds after the size of the crowd was announced and said, "Gee, that's more people than Thief River Falls has."

Roseau Smallest Tournament Entry

Roseau, with an enrollment of 359 students in the top three grades, was the only school participating in the 1979 state high school hockey tournament with an enrollment of under 1,000.

St. Paul harding was the largest participating school, with an enrollment of 2,102.

That Roseau-Edina East semifinal confrontation for the second consecutive year is the biggest size mismatch in Minnesota high school sports since the multiple class system is used elsewhere — two classes in most sports and five in football.

Familiar Irondale Names

Seven of the eight sophomores on the Section 2 champion Irondale team that played in the 1979 state high school hockey tournament were members of an Irondale squad that won the 1976 Minnesota state Pee-Wee tournament played in Thief River Falls.

Steve Checco, Mike Bjugstad, Dave Kirwin, Steve Hoppe, Mark Badger and Ken Brovold of the Knights were members of that Pee-Wee team. They also won a state Bantam crown.

Also playing in that 1976 state Pee-Wee tournament here were Brian Crippa of Grand Rapids and Jeff Aikens of Rochester. All but Aikens, a back-up goalie to Paul Butters, played in last week's state classic.

Miscellaneous

+ Don Olson of KTRF radio used all that tournament experience of his to win the press box pot at the 1979 Minnesota state high school hockey tournament. He pocketed a tidy little sum of money by correctly picking eight of the 11 tournament winners. It cost us $2 to name three right.

+Roseau was named winner of the first Minnesota State High School League hockey sportsmanship award.

+Thief River Falls was rated 14th in the "Let's Play Hockey" prep hockey ratings announced in the publication's state tournament issue. Grand Rapids headed the list, followed in the top five by Hill-Murray, Edina-East, Roseau and Rochester John Marshall.

+ Taking his team to the state hockey tournament for the fourth straight year, Grand Rapids high school hockey coach Jim Nelson said, "Going to the state hockey tournament doesn't get old, it just gets better." The Indians have won six straight Section 7 titles, the last four under Nelson.

+Mandatory budget cuts at Ada public schools, if approved, will drop wrestling, gynmastics, baseball, golf and tennis programs at the high school.

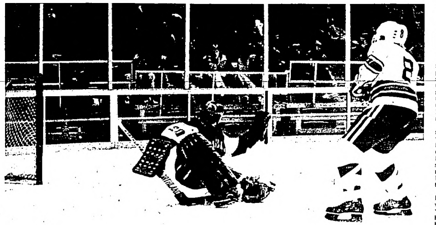
FORMER LINCOLN high school coach Gene Sack, now head hockey coach at Rochester John Marshall, led his Rockets into the Minnesota state high school hockey tournament for the third straight year, finishing second in last week's event played at the St. Paul Civic Center. However, Sack, who coached the Prowlers to a Region 8 title — their last — in 1960, showed little, if any, emotion during the three-day tournament. Although he never showed it in his reactions, while these pictures were being taken during Thursday's 5-3 opening round win over St. Paul Hardings, both the Rockets and Knights scored. John Marshall added a 7-4 semifinal victory over Irondale before losing to Edina East 4-3 in overtime in Saturday's championship game.



EDINA EAST wing Tom Carroll, typifying the Hornets' marksmen skills, came in alone on Roseau goalie Jim Pelowski and hit the upper corner at 8:31 of the second period during Friday's Minnesota state high school hockey tournament semifinal game played in the St. Paul Civic Center. Carroll's goal put Edina East ahead 6-3 in a game the Hornets finally won 12-4.

Roseau Third In State Meet

Section 8 champion Roseau, making a record 21st appearance in the Minnesota state high school hockey tournament, came up with a second consecutive third place trophy in the three-day extravaganza played at the St. Paul Civic Center before a record 100,902 spectators.

Roseau opened with a surprising 6-4 first round victory over pre-tournament favorite Grand Rapids Thursday. Edina East crushed the Rams 12-4 in Friday's semifinals, but Roseau rebounded to out-score Irondale 9-7 in Saturday's third place contest.

Coach Gary Hokanson of the Rams said he was satisfied with the tournament showing. "What the heck, most people had us sold off as coming down here, playing two games and going home," he said. "There's a lot of awfully good hockey teams down here. It makes us proud just to be a part of the tournament."

Rest of Thursday's opening round scores found Edina East beating Hill-Murray 4-3, Irondale knocked off Minneapolis Washburn 6-4 and Rochester John Marshall defeated St. Paul Harding 5-3.

Rochester John Marshall joined Edina East in the championship game with a 7-4 semifinal victory over Irondale. The Hornets edged the Rockets 4-3 in overtime in Saturday's championship game.

In the consolation series, Grand Rapids got by Hill-Murray 4-3 in overtime, Washburn handled Harding 5-1 and Grand Rapids stopped Washburn 6-2 for the trophy.

Roseau — Grand Rapids

Roseau, beaten 5-1 by Grand Rapids in a late-season meeting, surprised most observers with a 6-4 first round win over the unbeaten Indians.

An aggressive forechecking game produced the victory that featured Glen daMota's hat trick. Aaron Broten scored twice for the Rams who led 1-0 at the end of the first period and kept that one-goal edge, 3-2 after 30 minutes. It was daMota's hat trick that broke a 4-4 tie at 12:45 of the third period and Broten iced it with an open net goal in the final four seconds.

Sophomore Billy Yon scored in the first period as the Rams' first line once again carried the entire offensive load. Four different players scored for the Indians.

Edina East — Roseau

A near-perfect performance by Edina East humbled Roseau 12-4 in the semifinals.

Mike Lauen and Mark Gagnon both had hat tricks for the Hornets who led 2-0 in the first 84 seconds.

Goals by Chip Ammerman and Glen daMota just 17 seconds apart tied the game 2-2, but it was only a temporary reprieve for the Rams.

The speedy Lauen scored on a power play at 14:37 of the first period to supply the Hornets with a 3-2 edge at the first intermission. It was 8-3 after two periods.

Roseau — Irondale

In a third place shoot-out, Roseau out-scored Irondale 9-7 as Aaron Broten closed out his high school career with a four-goal, five-point night that made him the tournament's leading scorer with six goals, six assists and 12 points.

Irondale star Scott Bjugstad had the hat trick for the Knights who led 2-1 after the first period but trailed 4-2 after two.

Roseau finished the year with a 23-3 record, upping the Rams' record to 72-6 over the past three years.

MSHSL State Hockey Tournament Program . . .

1954 TRF State Champs Featured

Thief River Falls' undefeated 1954 state champion team was featured in the 1979 Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) state hockey tournament program. It's MSHSL custom to honor silver anniversary state champions in their publications.

That 1954 Thief River Falls squad, called by many the finest hockey team ever at Lincoln high school, is the only undefeated state champion in the history at the school. It was the first state title for the Prowlers who also represented Region 8 in 1945, 1951 and 1952.

According to the MSHSL program, "The 1954 state tournament was unquestionably the best in the ten years of (MSHSL) sponsorship of this event. The teams were well-balanced and the skills and abilities of the players were equal to, if not superior to, those of previous years."

In the first round of the 1954 tournament Thief River Falls beat Minneapolis South 6-1, South St. Paul blanked Duluth Central 6-0, St. Paul Johnson shut out Wayzata 7-0 and Eveleth, appearing in its tenth straight tournament, knocked off St. Paul Harding 5-2.

Thief River Falls skated past South St. Paul 8-1 and Eveleth edged St. Paul Johnson 3-2 in the semifinals. Coach Dennis Rolle's Prowlers handled Eveleth 4-1 in the championship game.

The three-day tournament, played in the St. Paul Auditorium, attracted the largest crowds in the history of the event at that time — 24,508. Twenty-five years later the 1979 state tournament, played in the plush St. Paul Civic center which is adjacent to the auditorium where the tournament was staged for 23 years, drew 19,145 the first afternoon and went over the 100,000 mark in total attendance for the first time in history.

Four members of that 1954 Thief River Falls squad were named to the all-tournament squad: Joe Poole, Marv Jorde, Jack Hoppe and Mike McMahon. Other all-tournament selections were Dave Rodda, Bob Kochevar and Ed Oswald, Eveleth; Dick Jinks, Harding; Dick Lick, Stu Anderson, South St. Paul, and Stu Anderson, St. Paul Johnson.

Rest of the Thief River Falls squad included Lyle Guttu, Loren Vraa, Jim Zavoral, Robert Helgeland, Bradley Teal, Les Sabo, Darryl Durgin, Jack Quesnell and Rodney Collins.

Thief River Falls followed that 1954 state tournament appearance with trips to St. Paul in 1955, 56, 59, 60 and 65. The Prowlers won another state title in 1956.

In addition to their championship trophies, the Prowlers also took the runner-up prize in 1945, third in 1951 and consolation honors in 1952 and 1959.

Confidence Makes Rams Section 8 Hockey Power

Terry Abram, who coached Roseau to the Minnesota state high school hockey tournament in 1971, 1975 and 1977 before leaving to take over coaching chores at Anoka high school, reflected back on the Roseau program and said the Rams' confidence makes them a perennial power in Section 8 where they haven't lost a game in three years.

"I think they know the meaning of the word lose, but they feel they're going to win every game they're in," said Abram who served as a radio broadcaster during the 1979 state tournament played last week in St. Paul.

Abram, who coached the Rams for seven years after earning All-American honors at the University of North Dakota, says he still follows Roseau's progress.

"You don't spend seven years of your life in one place and then just forget about it," mentioned Abram. "I see the scores in the Minneapolis Tribune and I still get the Roseau paper. I still know most of the kids on the team."

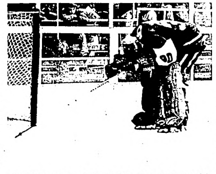
Why does Roseau have that edge over Section 8 opponents that supplies them with their confidence? "I would say the big thing is the free ice time available at any time," pointed out Abram. "In a small town like Roseau there's not much else to do and since the ice time is available, kids go skating. Even in Thief River Falls there's more distractions for the kids and they probably don't put in quite as much ice time."

Thief River Falls seems to enjoy some success at the youth level against Roseau. Unfortunately for the frustrated fans here, that success hasn't manifested itself at the high school. The Prowlers haven't appeared in a state tournament since 1965 and they haven't won a region section title since 1960.

"In Thief River they play the most disciplined Squirt game as far as position-wise is concerned," remembered Abram. "But to me that's not important. In Roseau they play 15 kids and they're not worried so much about playing their position as they are about skating. They all go after the puck and they all get involved in the play. I think that pays off later at the high school level where they're better skaters."

In his two years at Anoka Abram has turned the Tornadoes into Section 2 contenders. They bowed to eventual champion Irondale 5-4 in the Section 2 quarterfinals this year. "We thought we were going to be here (at the state tournament) this year," he said. "We only graduate five seniors so we think we'll be in the thick of things next year."

Chances are, by that time the Tornadoes will have that confidence installed that Abram brought with him from Roseau.



REACTING TO one of the 12 Edina East goals scored in Friday's 12-4 Minnesota state high school hockey tournament semifinal loss to the Hornets, Roseau goalie Jim Pelowski lowered his head after being beat by Tom Carroll in the second period of the one-sided affair.

GAME-WINNING goal in Roseau's 6-4 win over Grand Rapids in Thursday's opening round of the 1979 Minnesota state high school hockey tournament was scored by Glen daMota (17) who shot the puck past goalie Jon Casey at 12:45 of the third period to complete a hat trick performance. Wings Aaron Broten (10) and Billy Yon (7) were also involved in the play as Broten set the goal up with a centering pass and Yon looked for a rebound. Brian Crippa (15) and Steve Anderson (7), along with two unidentified teammates, didn't offer Casey much help on the play that snapped a 4-4 tie.

ROSEAU GOALIE Jim Pelowski was joined in the net by a Grand Rapids player who barged into the netminder and lifted the net right off its posts in Thursday's opening round game of the 1979 Minnesota state high school hockey tournament played in the St. Paul Civic Center. The Rams upset the pre-tournament favorite Indians 6-4.

Sportsman Show At Grand Forks Mar. 29-Apr. 1

Annual Grand Forks sportsman's boat, camping and vacation show returns for its 12th year to the Grand Forks arena on Thursday, March 29, through Sunday, April 1.

With dozens of exhibitors from the upper midwest occupying thousands of square feet of display space, the show will present the area with a complete exhibition of recreational vehicles, boats, hunting and fishing equipment, and vacation and travel information.

"With the camping and boating industries continually growing and changing so rapidly," show producer Nick Cenaiko pointed out, "this show is one way to keep up on what's happening by, visiting one place at one time for a representative sampling of the latest innovations."

Fleets of RVs will be showcased in the arena, ranging from pick-up campers and van conversions to versatile fifth wheelers and luxurious 30-foot motorhomes. A major portion of the exhibition space will be devoted to boating, from canoes and rubber inflatables to runabouts and cruisers.

Displays of fishing tackle, rods and reels, guns and decoys, tents, backpacks and other related accessories will also share the display area. Additional exhibitors will be on hand with booths and displays providing information regarding travel, resorts and tours.

This year's show features recording artist and performer Jacky Ward, who is currently high on the charts with his recording of "Rhythm of the Rain." Also performing are a teeter board group, Les Zerbinis, and the Rito Brothers with their trampoline and team juggling acts. The live performances are scheduled for 8:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday, 3:30 and 8:30 p.m. Saturday, and 3:30 and 7 p.m. Sunday.

Doors will be open from 5 to 11 p.m. Thursday and Friday, noon to 11 p.m. Saturday, and noon to 9 p.m. Sunday. Admission to the show is $2 for adults, $1 for children under 12, with pre-schoolers admitted free. Adult advance discount tickets are available from Kiwanis Club members for $1.50.

Relay Team Sets Lincoln Mark In State Swim Meet

Thief River Falls' 400-yard freestyle relay team set a new Lincoln high school record Friday, but failed to land a spot in either the finals or consolation finals of the 1979 Minnesota state high school swimming meet held at the Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis.

Dave Beito, Bruce Storhaug, Kevin Murphy and Jon Pinkerton of the Prowlers swam the 400-yard freestyle relay in 3:25.2 for 17th place. Top six times in the Friday prelims earn spots in Saturday's finals, with the seventh through 12th times competing in Saturday's consolation finals.

"They did very well," pointed out Thief River Falls coach John Kopari. "They did their best. I think they're satisfied. It was a fabulous meet; some super fast swimmers."

Fosston's Eric Rustad earned spots in the finals of both the 50 and 100-yard freestyle races, placing fourth in the 50 and sixth in the 100. But Rustad and the Thief River Falls relay teams were the only Section 3 entries to better their section meet times at the state level.

Only other Section 3 state meet finalists were Tim Frazer of Brainerd, fifth in the diving competition; and Cal Collins of Alexandria, sixth in the 500-yard freestyle.

De La Salle won the state team title with 111 points, followed in the top five by Minnetonka 99, St. Cloud Tech 93, Burnsville 82 and Bloomington Lincoln 69.

Franklin Pool Schedule

Mon., March 19 — 7:45-8:45 p.m. open swimming; 8:45-9:45 p.m. adult lessons.

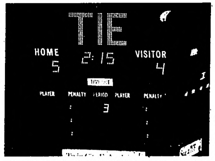
Tues., March 20 — 7:30 p.m. Northland.

Wed., March 21 — 7:45-9:45 p.m. open swimming.

Thurs., March 22 — 7:45-9:45 p.m. open swimming.

Fri., March 23 — 7:45-9:45 p.m. open swimming.

Sat., March 24 — 1:30-4:30 p.m. open swimming; 7:45-9:45 p.m. open swimming.



SCOREBOARD AT the St. Paul Civic Center wasn't able to keep up with the happenings in the 1979 Minnesota state high school hockey tournament. Grand Rapids rallied from a two-goal deficit to catch Roseau 4-4 at 11:53 of the third period in Thursdays opening round, producing a "Tie" message across the top of the board. However, Roseau broke the deadlock less than a minute later on a goal by Glen daMota as the Rams won 6-4.

Fertile, Melrose Girls Win In Region 8A, 8AA

Melrose and Fertile-Beltrami were winners last week in Region 8AA and Region 8A girls high school basketball tournaments.

In Region 8AA play at St. Cloud, Melrose surprised pre-tournament favorite Detroit Lakes 45-39 and Little Falls came from behind to beat Bemidji 48-39 in the first round, with Melrose handling Little Falls 43-29 in the championship game.

The Region 8A tournament was played at Marshall County Central high school in Newfolden where Fertile-Beltrami repeated as champion.

In first round Region 8A play, Fertile-Beltrami knocked off Hallock 44-34 and Warren dropped Akeley 58-30. Fertile-Beltrami earned a come-from-behind 42-40 championship game victory over Warren, with Hallock beating Akeley 44-36 for consolation honors.

The 1979 Minnesota state high school basketball tournament will be played Thursday, Friday and Saturday. First round games Thursday will feature Class AA competition at the St. Paul Civic Center and Class A games at Met Sports Center in Bloomington. Semifinals and finals in both classes will be played at Met Sports Center.

COUNTY BOARD PROCEEDINGS

March 19, 1979
Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
March 6, 1979

Pursuant to adjournment the County Board met in the Commissioners' Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 10:00 A.M., March 6, 1979.

Members present: Hoffman, Grabanski, Koop, Stenberg and Tasa. All present.

Roy Waters, Director of the Northwestern Mental Health Clinic presented a proposed budget for the fiscal year 1979-80 and requested approval of the Board as one of seven Counties supporting the Clinic. The Contract that was presented calls for committment of $68,306.00 with actual payments to be $33,986.00 for the Mental Health Clinic and $6,869.00 for the Detox unit after third party payments are applied. This is an increase of $2,672.50 over the previous year. A summary of the activity of the Clinic was presented which indicated that a total of 2,181 hours of time had been devoted to various kinds of treatment or activity on behalf of Pennington County.

Commissioner Koop introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED, By the Board of County Commissioners of Pennington County in regular session duly assembled, the County of Pennington shall participate in the financial support of the Northwestern Mental Health Center, Inc. as provided in the Northwestern Mental Health Center, Inc. budget for the period July 1, 1979 to June 30, 1980, inclusive, in the amount of $68,306.00.

The foregoregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Tasa and upon vote was declared unanimously adopted.

Moved by Tasa seconded by Koop that Commissioner Grabanski represent Pennington County on Committee known as the City-County-School Committee — a 'Committee for exchange of thoughts and information. Motion carried.

Moved by Stenberg seconded by Tasa that the sum of $15,686.48 be appropriated and paid to the State of Minnesota, Department of Corrections to defray the cost of Probation services for 1978. Motion unanimously carried.

The re-windowing proposal was discussed again as a part of a total program that is being mandated by Law to make the Courthouse energy efficient and barrier free (access to handicapped). The doors of the building need replacement as well as many of the glass blocks that have broken. The Architect has the re-windowing project ready for contract and work could progress during the summer. Making the building barrier free would entail the installation of an elevator and discussion was held along the lines of what else is really needed to make the elevator project a more meaningful project.

Commissioner Stenberg introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED, that the County Board instruct the Architect Foss Engelstad Foss, to complete plans and draw specifications so that bids can be called for the re-windowing project on the Courthouse, with bids to be called and opened at the earliest opportunity.

Upon call for a second to the motion there was no response and the chairman declared the Resolution lost for lack of a second.

County Assessor, Gerard DeHaan then discussed some problems that have been brought to his attention where the proper coding had not been made on 9 pieces of property and the individuals had been denied Homestead as a result and 7 instances where the Limited Market value had been carried forward at the same rate as the Estimated Value which exceeded the limit of increase allowed by Law and further 6 instances where the valuations were improperly entered and as a result received no tax statements requiring additions to the tax roles. The changes requested were approved under the Statute providing corrections for obvious errors. Complete records of these changes are on file in the Auditor's Office and in the Assessor's Office.

Commissioner Stenberg introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, The Office of County Surveyor has not been abolished but is vacnat by reason of the death of the incumbent, and

WHEREAS, The end of the term of the Office of County Surveyor is more than six months away.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, That the Office of County Surveyor shall henceforth be filled by appointment according to MS 389, Subd. 2 (2).

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Koop and upon vote declared unanimously adopted.

Vernon Holmstrom of Thief River Falls was present and presented credentials indicating he was a registered surveyor licensed in Minnesota.

Commissioner Tasa introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED, That Vernon Holmstrom be appointed, this date, to the Office of County Surveyor for a term ending December 31, 1980.

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Grabanski and upon vote declared unanimously adopted.

Terry Courneya appeared and reviewed a possible Arbor Day project pointed toward an expended tree project in the County. The Extension agent was encouraged to continue planning for a project involving 4-H clubs and others.

The proposal for widening 1st Street, installing signals and widening the 1st Street Bridge was then discussed in detail.

At 3:00 P.M. the Board proceeded to open bids for a new Motor Grader as duly advertised and called for: The following bids were opened and read aloud: Ziegler, Inc., Minneapolis, New Model 140G Cat.$105,012.00 Net after trade in $74,377.00 Guaranteed Maintenance cost $4,200.00 for 5 years and a buy back price of $89,630.00 after 5 years.

A second bid was presented by Zieiger, Inc. with identical figures without the buy back clause.

No other bids were received but a potential bidder filed a letter indicating the specifications were too restrictive and as a consequence withheld bidding. An apparent reference to the 'but back' feature. Moved by Koop seconded by Tasa that the bid of Ziegler, Inc. in the amount of $74,377.00 with trade in, be accepted as the lowest and best bid received and the Chairman and Auditor be authorized and instructed to enter into Contract for delivery of said Motor Grader. Motion declared unanimously adopted.

The Board then returned to the 1st Street matter that was under discussion. After considerable discussion and reference to budgets Commissioner Tasa introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED, that the Chairman and Engineer be authorized and instructed to proceed with design and to take such steps as are necessary to widen the First Street Bridge, provided the City of Thief River Falls widens First Street from the West end of the bridge and West to Main. Project to be financed with State and Federal Bridge Bond funds with the County paying for the engineering and approaches at an estaimated cost of $52,500.; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the City of Thief River Falls proceed with widening First Street at no cost to the County; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that Pennington County participate with the City of Thief River Falls and the State of Minnesota in the installation of signals according to formula before the Board, again with the provision that the street be widened.

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Koop and upon vote declared adopted with Commissioner Grabanski voting in opposition.

The minutes of the meetings of January 2, 16, 25 and Feb. 6 and 22nd were read and approved as read. Note: The Feb. 6th minutes indicated that $55,576.00 had been set aside for the re-windowing project. This was in error and should have indicated that the sum of $75,576.00 has been set aside in Revenue Sharing for this purpose.

LEGAL NOTICE

March 19, 1979
Notice of Request For Home Occupation Permit

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN PURSUANT TO Chapter 11 of the Municipal Code of Thief River Falls that Mr. and Mrs. Jim Kremer of 515 N. LaBree Ave. have applied with the zoning office for a home occupation permit. This permit if issued would allow the Kremers to operate an antique and refinishing business in their home.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the permit will be issued to the applicants on March 30, 1979, 10 days from the date of notification, unless comments from those notified justify a hearing on this matter. If no complaints are received from residents within 350' of the intended use, the permit will be issued. Anyone wishing to comment on this matter may do so in writing or by phoning the City Planning Office, Box 528, 218-681-6780.

Dated this 16th day of March, 1979.
-s- Jan T. Reid
Zoning Administrator

March 19, 1979
Assessment Notice

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That the Board of Review — Equalization of the City of Thief River Falls in Pennington County, Minnesota, will meet at the office of the Clerk in said Township at 10 o'clock A.M., on Tuesday, the 17th day of April, 1979, for the purpose of reviewing and correcting the assessment of said City for the year 1979. All persons considering themselves aggrieved by said assessment, or who wish to complain that the property of another is assessed too low, are hereby notified to appear at said meeting, and show cause for having such assessment corrected.

No complaint that another person is assessed too low will be acted upon until the person so assessed, or his agent, shall been notified of such complaint.

Given under my hand this 14th day of March, 1979.

Foster Homes Are Needed In Marshall Co.

"Could you share your love and your home with a child in need of a foster home?" asks Joyce Johnson, social worker with the Marshall county welfare department in Warren.

"Children are in need of foster homes for various reasons, such as stressful conditions within their own home; those whose parents are temporarily unable to care for them; young children awaiting adoption placements; physically or mentally handicapped; trouble in the school; or having family problems.

"Whether the placements are temporary or long-term, the children need a warm, accepting, stable home atmosphere to give them a chance to develop to their full capacity," Johnson said.

"We need help in providing these children with homes. Contact the Marshall county welfare department to find out how to become a foster parent. Office hours are from 8-12 a.m. and 1-5 p.m. Monday through Friday and phone number is 745-5124.

Bratteli Becomes One-Gallon Donor

One gallon donor to the Northern Blood Bank is Sam Bratteli, former Grygla community resident now living in Thief River Falls. He reached the one gallon donor status two months before becoming ineligible to donate blood as he will reach his 66th birthday May 15.

Bratteli joined the local blood bank when he made his first blood donation on Nov. 9, 1960, and his final donation on Thursday. Upon reaching his 66th birthday he will become a lifetime member of the blood bank association.

Northern Blood bank association has a number of donors who have reached the one gallon donor status on the basis of donating eight or more units of blood over the years since the association was formed.

Blood bank technician Darlene Kelley is shown in the accompanying photos checking Bratteli's donor registration card, taping the blood transfer tube in place and collecting a blood sample for laboratory testing. Bratteli says making a blood donation has never bothered him and that he attempts to maintain good physical condition with active exercise every day.

LEC Reports 17 New Cases

Seventeen cases were included in the March 13 law enforcement report including six thefts, nine accidents and two vandalisms. Individual cases are listed below by reporting date:

March 1 — Jim Brower of 1440 N. Main reported that someone broke into his home and took a Zenith color T.V. valued at $300, a Technics turntable worth $230, one SAE amplifier valued at $175, one SAE preamp also valued at $175 and a small amount of money. Total theft loss was $930. The burglary is under investigation.

March 3 — A Sanyo 8-track tape player was stolen from a car owned by Allen Rux of Thief River Falls while the vehicle was parked in front of El Ceritos. Also taken were 41 tapes. Total value of the stolen items was $450.

March 4 — Two tires were slashed on a Blazer owned by Mrs. Robert Walseth of St. Hilaire while the vehicle was parked in front of the St. Hilaire Hartz store. Damages were estimated at $100.

March 6 — 3:28 p.m., one mile north of highway No. 1 on U.S. No. 59: Vehicles driven by Gust Homme of Thief River Falls and Gregory Carlson of Newfolden were both traveling south on highway 59. Home had just turned onto 59 and Carlson was unable to avoid colliding with the rear of the Homme vehicle. Carlson suffered bruises on the right hand and arm and Homme suffered pains in his lower back. Both vehicles received extensive damage.

March 6 — A 15 year old male juvenile was apprehended in the Valley Dairy store for shoplifting a number of items valued at $1.

March 6 — City employee Gary Anderson reported that while he was cleaning up the city auditorium somebody broke the north most door on the auditorium. Damages to the glass door were estimated at $150.

March 8 — 5:53 p.m., Tindolph Ave. and Greenwood St.: Crystal Harbott of Thief River Falls was traveling west on Greenwood St. while Mona Johnson also of Thief River Falls was traveling south on Tindolph. The vehicles collided in the intersection with minimal damage done to the Harbott vehicle and considerable damage to Johnson's. Johnson also suffered pains in the neck and forehead.

March 9 — A curling iron and assorted dishes and pans were taken from the Betty Housker garage at 212 S. Conley. Loss in the theft, which occurred at an unknown time, was approximately $62.

March 9—8:35 a.m., Tindolph Ave. and Greenwood St.: Bryant Peppin of Thief River Falls was traveling north on Tindolph while Fredrick Rosenfeldt, also of Thief River Falls, was headed east on Greenwood and the two vehicles collided in the intersection. The Peppin vehicle received minimal damages and the Rosenfeldt vehicle, considerable damage.

March 9 — Unknown time, Kendall Ave.: A vehicle owned by Ernesto Padilla of Thief River Falls was parked at 211 N. Kendall on the west side of the street when it was struck by a vehicle driven by Lori Finstad of Thief River Falls who was traveling south on Kendall. Minimal damage was done to both vehicles.

March 10 — A snowmobile owned by Allen Berndt of Goodridge was stolen from where it was parked along side the Trapper and Trader. The 1979 Polaris was recovered by on-duty deputies approximately an hour and one half after it was reported stolen. The machine, valued at $3,000, was found approximately 200 feet east of the Trapper and Trader undamaged.

March 10 — Don Murray of St. Hilaire reported that his pickup had been moved from where it was parked next to El Ceritos into the ditch. The keys from the pickup were stolen along with a red tool box with approximately $150 of tools in it. A CB radio was taken from the dash of the vehicle and thrown into the snowbank beside the truck. Two young men aged 19 and 21 were apprehended in the incident and charges are pending.

March 10 — 10:59 a.m., Muzzy St. and St. Paul Ave.: A vehicle driven by Robin Neelan of Thief River Falls was proceeding east on Muzzy St. while a second vehicle, driven by Michael McCann of Thief River Falls, was traveling south in the alley and attempted to turn right onto Muzzy avenue. The vehicles collided causing considerable damage to each of them. A passenger in the McCann vehicle, Tamicia McCann, received a bump on the head.

March 10 — 11:35 a.m., N. Main Ave. and 12th St.: Mark C. Larson of Thief River Falls was stopped facing north on Main Ave. waiting for oncoming traffic to clear so he could make a left turn onto 12th St. Joan Larson of Badger was traveling south on Main, swerved left to avoid a hole in the road and collided with the Mark Larson vehicle. Both vehicles sustained a minimal amount of damage.

March 11 — 3:34 p.m., 6th St. and Horace Ave: Dale Teigland of Thief River Falls was traveling east on 6th St. while Dave Ulrich, also of Thief River Falls, was headed south on Horace Ave. and the two vehicles collided in the intersection. Damages were minimal.

March 11 — 12:30 p.m., Gulf St. and alley west of Spruce St.: Richard Kezar of Thief River Falls was driving south and was attempting to enter Gulf St. while Harold Stanislawski of Greenbush was traveling west on Gulf St. The two vehicles collided on Gulf St. and both sustained minimal damages.

March 11 — 4:01 a.m., Kinney Ave.: A vehicle owned by Kent Simons of Thief River Falls was legally parked facing north on Kinney Ave. when Valerie Bray, also of Thief River Falls was traveling north on Kinney and struck the drivers side of the Simons vehicle causing considerable damage. The Bray vehicle sustained minimal damage.

List Safety Precautions For Flooding

Deep snow this winter makes spring flooding a possibility in many parts of Minnesota.

Families in flood threatened areas should make plans in advance, advises Clifton Halsey, extension conservationist at the University of Minnesota. "Be prepared to protect your property and leave your homes temporarily. Heavy spring rains can make flash flooding with little warning an added hazard," Halsey says. He advises flood threatened families to take these precautions:

(1) Know the flood warning system in your community. Find out if there will be radio announcements, sirens or public address systems.

(2) Make plans for your entire family now. Include plans for evacuation or for temporarily moving to the second story of your house. Everyone should know how to quickly leave the house by walking or riding. Pick a route to follow that won't be blocked by washouts or high water.

Make a list of emergency supplies and have them ready for evacuation or movement upstairs. Place them where they're handy. Consider items like first aid supplies, emergency food, drinkable water, emergency lights a battery radio, temporary toilet, medicines, cooking equipment and games.

Other preparedness tips:

+ Be sure there's plenty of gas in your car for evacuation.

+ Take pictures of your home and personal property for insurance purposes.

+ Know what your property insurance covers.

+ Be sure your valuables and legal papers are in a safe place.

(3) When you receive flood warnings, keep listening to the radio for the latest local information.

(4) If there's time, move important items like food, furniture, rugs, appliances, clothing, books, electric motors and controls to higher elevations. Make sure that toxic chemicals and pesticides are stored where they will not get wet or into flood waters.

(5) Shut off all utilities (electricity, gas, water) at main switches and valves in each building.

(6) Cap openings and pipes of all disconnected appliances. Don't drain pipes.

(7) Keep indoor and outdoor water levels about equal by leaving doors and windows open. This will help prevent foundations from collapsing and buildings from floating away.

(8) Tie down or safely store all items that could be carried away by flood waters. This includes lumber, pipes, fuel tanks, toys and lawn chairs.

(9) Evacuate immediately if you're so advised. Take necessities such as medicines, eye glasses, diet foods and suitable clothing. Take life jackets if you're going by boat.

(10) Wait until authorities assure that flood dangers are over before you re-enter home premises.

Families may be able to protect their homes with sandbag and plastic dikes where floodwaters will be less than three feet deep. Directions for building plastic dikes may be obtained from county extension offices. Ask for the leaflet "Using Plastic and Dikes to Prevent Minor Surface Flooding." Extension offices also have a wall poster, "Preparing for Floods — Flood Cleanup and Salvage Steps," and a bulletin, "Face to Face With a Flood," which tell how to get ready for flooding.

Planning Commission Acts On Zoning

ALDERMAN DON GOODRICH, who purchased property for re-sale to Holiday stationstores to resolve a dispute about downtown relocation of the business, was among those testifying Monday evening at a hearing held by the Thief River Falls planning commission. He explained his involvement in the transaction and his opposition to neighborhood requests to have the property he purchased for re-sale down-zoned from C2 to C1 classification.

In three seaprate actions Monday evening, the Thief River Falls planning commission took steps toward permitting construction of a new Holiday stationstore near the intersection of First street and highway 59, changing residential property to residential zoning and providing a narrow buffer zone between other highway commercial and residential property.

Resolutions approved for recommendation to the city council at its next meeting on Tuesday, March 27, provided for the following:

(1) Re-zoning of residential properties owned by Ellsworth Jorgenson and a lot owned by John Jaranson from the present C2 designation to a residential classification. This would premit remodeling or modification for residential purposes on those properties without requesting a variance as non-conforming use.

(2) Leaving the C2 (highway commercial) designation in effect for the lots comprising the area which has been proposed for sale to Holiday station-stores for the construction of a new facility. This would permit alderman Donald Goodrich to sell the property he acquired from Mr. and Mrs. Larry Pribyl and the Hiway 59 Fix-it shop to Holiday and that firm to construct a stationstore with gasoline sales.

(3) Down-zoning several lots fronting on First street from C2 to C1 (neighborhood commerce). This would form a narrow buffer zone of C1 property between the highway commercial zone and residential property to the north.

Monday's hearing was called by the city planning commission at the request of the city council following the council's receipt of petitions asking changes in zoning in the area. Purpose of the petitions was to prevent the construction of the stationstore in the neighborhood by more restrictive zoning which would make gasoline sales a non-conforming use of the property.

Testifying at the hearing in behalf of the petitioners was John Penn, a resident of the area. He pointed out concerns of area residents regarding increased traffic on first street, hazards involving the intersection of First street and highway 59, possible reduction of property values of homes in the area, pedestrian safety at the intersection and possible environmental damage due to gas spills and the like.

Penn also questioned the notification procedure prior to zoning of the area in former years and expressed the opinion that even if legal public notice was given at that time, it was not sufficient to evoke proper citizen participation.

Jerry Jensen, real estate representative for Holiday stationstores, pointed out in his comments to the planning

EMPTY CLASSROOM was experienced by Rich Lyttle, instructor in journalism, history and American literature at Northland community college in Thief River Falls. Lyttle is not a member of the striking Minnesota community college faculty association and told his students on Monday that he would be at his job during the strike which began Tuesday morning. A member of the Northland teaching staff for 12 years, he quit the college faculty association when it affiliated with the Minnesota education association. "I could see the militancy coming and I didn't want to be a part of it," he said.

"It's A Matter of Principle . . . .".

Non-Striker Faces Empty Classroom

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Rich Lyttle has been in his classroom at Northland community college today, waiting for students that he didn't expect to arrive. To get there, he had to cross picket lines of striking fellow faculty members who were discouraging students from going to class.

"It's a matter of principle for me," he explained in his faculty office on Tuesday, the first day of the Minnesota community college faculty association (MCCFA) strike against Minnesota's community colleges.

"I could have stayed home; that probably would have been the easiest thing to do. But I told my students Monday that I would be here during the strike, if it came, and I have plenty of things that I can do."

Most of Northland's faculty members informed their students on Monday — the first day of classes for the spring quarter at Northland — that they would be participating in the strike beginning at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday. On Tuesday morning most of them were carrying picket signs instead of lesson plans.

"I'm not a member of the faculty association, you know," Lyttle continued. "I used to belong during my first years on the faculty here. That started 12 years ago, when the college was still in the Lincoln high school building. But I quit when the association became part of the MEA (Minnesota education association) because I could see the militancy coming and I didn't want to be a part of it."

Although Lyttle chooses not to be a member of MCCFA, he still is compelled to support it financially. The regular deduction from his paycheck is called "fair share" payment — a legal obligation imposed by the legislature. The payment is sent to the state organization because, by law, it represents his interests — whether he wants that sort of "representation" or not.

Lyttle, who teaches journalism, history and American literature at the college, doesn't particularly resent the forced deduction. He accepts it along with other governmental intrusions which he feels rather powerless to change. But that doesn't mean he likes it.

"I tend to be pretty conservative in my thinking," he said. "I guess you could

County Road Restrictions Start Thursday

Effective date of road restrictions on all Pennington county roads will be Thursday, March 22, according to Arvid Olson, county highway engineer. Restriction limits are based on gross axle weights which includes the weight of the vehicle and the load it is carrying.

No permits for overweight axle loads exceeding posted axle weights will be issued during the period when the signs are in place or while road restrictions are in effect, Olson said.

During the period when signs are in place or road restrictions are in effect (approximately March 22 through May 15) any county or township road is restricted to five tons gross weight per axle except as otherwise signed. If no signs are erected the five ton gross weight provisions shall apply.

Exceptions to the five ton gross weight per axle restriction are:

CSAH 7 from highway 59 East to CSAH 22; CSAH 28 from highway 1 north to Pennington - Marshall county line; and CSAH 17 from CSAH 3 to the Red Lake county line.

The above noted county highways will be posted to seven ton gross weight per axle.

CSAH 17 from First street (city of Thief River Falls) to CSAH 3 is a legal axle road and will not be posted and CSAH 3 from CSAH 17 to the Polk county line is a legal axle road and will not be posted, Olson noted.

PICKET LINE was formed at the entrance to the Northland community college campus Tuesday morning as the Minnesota community college faculty association (MCCFA) went on strike against the state of Minnesota. Carrying picket signs above are Judy Rosetta, Merle Kruschke and Al Adams. Other faculty members picketed near the entrance to the college building complex. Hand-lettered signs were made by members of the local association. Printed signs were provided by the Minnesota education association with which the MCCFA is affiliated.

Picketing Continues At Northland Today

Picketing continues today at Northland community college in Thief River Falls as members of the Minnesota community college faculty association (MCCFA) are now in their second day of a strike against the state's community colleges.

"We have postponed on-campus credit activities until further notice," is the way Dr. Alex Easton, president of Northland, explained the school's position at this point in the strike. Faculty members officially went on strike at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday after most informed their students Monday that they would not in their classrooms the next day.

Cessation of classes after only one day of the spring quarter has created a dilemma for community college students. (See the student's opinion story beginning on the front page of today's Times.) But it has also created a major potential problem for the future of small colleges such as Northland which have been actively recruiting for enrollment and now find themselves unable to deliver the education offered.

"We can't say for sure at this point how the strike will affect our enrollment," Dr. Easton said. "We do know that we have about 100 full-time equivalent students who have not yet registered for the spring quarter. That is several times the normal attrition we would expect. At least one sophomore has transferred to another school that I am aware of and I know of others who are seriously considering it. And I can't say I blame them."

Only one of Northland's programs — the registered nurse program — is continuing during the strike. That is being taught by Frances McLachlan who is classified as an administrator in the program.

Pickets at the entrance to the college campus have been distributing a letter to persons who cross the picket line or elect to turn around rather than cross. It asks for cooperation from the public and assures students that faculty will be of assistance in making up for time lost.

Reasons for the strike as set forth in the letter are as follows:

"(1) In 1975 we submitted contract negotiations to ar-

Student Viewpoint:

Strike Leaves College Student In Tough Spot

(Editor's Note: Student's viewpoint in the strike of community college faculty members against the state of Minnesota is presented in this public opinion letter written by Jean Dziengel, a full-time student at Northland college and a part-time employee on the Times staff.)

This letter is addressed to all persons directly involved in the statewide Minnesota community college strike. It includes instructors, administrators, state officials and others who will decide the total effect of the contract dispute.

What determines education is the process by which knowledge is presented and maintained. It entails cooperation, wisdom and understanding. What we see happening in our state at the present time is a breakdown in communication and cooperation which has led us to a situation where the total outcome could be devastating.

Settlement can be achieved if parties on the state side and the MCCFA negotiating committee's agree to compromise. But there is no guarantee of such a meeting in the near future. Both main parties feel their best interests

Phenomenology Is Discussed By Campanula Club

Phenomenology from the middle of February until March 14, was discussed at the meeting of the Campanula garden club held March 14 at the Public library. Leading the discussion was Mrs. Emil Koglin. To correspond with the topic, the seven members answered roll call by listing a natural phenomena observed since the last meeting.

Several reports were given. Mrs. Emil Koglin gave an account of the last meeting; Olga Johnson reported on the club's financial condition and Bernice Knutson reported on the Good Cheer activities. A report on the Winter Crop show held February 20 at Crookston was given by Ruth Holmes, Olga Johnson and Mrs. Emil Koglin. Geneva Overum read a letter from the 13th District President Lois Swanson announcing the spring workshop set for March 31 at Roseau.

Adding interest to the meeting was the judging of the booklet covers made by the members. Selected as the most attractive was the cover made by Mrs. Emil Koglin. She was instructed to make two covers to be sent to the district president.

Also adding variety to the meeting were slides shown by Geneva Overum of her trip to Salt Lake City in October of 1977. Slides included scenes of Mount Rushmore, Chapel of the Hills, Custer's Last Stand and Statue of Crazy Horse.

The purpose of the club was read by Geneva Overum and Olga Johnson gave the March poem. During the social hour, the birthday song was sung and the floral zodiacs were read for Bertha Hastad, Bernice Knutson and Mrs. Emil Koglin.

The members brought their own sack lunches. Special treats were cookies brought by Bertha Hastad and Bernice Knutson, bars from Mrs. Emil Koglin, and green candy, in observance of St. Patrick's day, from Geneva Overum.

The program will be given by the five participating homemakers clubs: River Valley, Star, Chattering Chicks, Merry Sunshine and P.M. Homemakers. Crafts made by the club members will be displayed.

Special music will be provided by The Mothers Three of Thief River Falls, Jan Lindbloom, Melba Penning and Jan Peterson, accompanied by Ida Nordvall.

There will be a registration fee of $1.00 to help cover expenses.

The public is welcome to attend.

Emilie Susan Solberg Baptized at Goodridge

Emilie Susan Solberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Solberg of Goodridge, received the sacrament of holy baptism on Sunday, March 11.

The ceremony took place after the 10:30 a.m., Mass at St. Anne's Catholic church in Goodridge with Rev. Leon Rausch officiating. Serving as sponsors were Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Solberg, Mary Mutnansky and Dale Neuschwander.

Following the baptism, a dinner was served at the Paul Solberg home. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Chester Solberg, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Solberg, Mary Mutnansky, Dale and Kathy Neuschwander and Rev. Leon Rausch.

Good Grief, A sharing Grief Group, To Meet

Monthly meeting of the Good Grief group, an ecumenical caring and sharing group of persons who are experiencing grief, will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., at the Fireside room at the United Methodist church.

The core of the group, formed a year ago by several women who met and shared together their common experience of the death of a teenager, felt that there was a need for a caring, sharing and understanding fellowship support group for grieving persons in this community. From experience they learned that most grieving persons have moments of loneliness, fear and panic as well as moments of immense love and gratitude to God and friends.

The group recognizes that besides death, there are various causes of grief. Divorce, losses resulting from strokes or surgery, loss of job, moving from friends of family, retirement, "empty nest," placement of loved ones in nursing homes, and lingering illnesses are all forms of grief.

The group also recognizes that there are five main stages of grief in a death or an illness for both the patient and family. The five stages are shock or denial, guilt or bargaining, anger, depression, and acceptance. With proper attitude and guidance, based on "We know that in all things God works for good with those who love Him, those whom He has called according to His purpose," Romans 8:28, all grief can be turned into good grief.

People of all ages and sex are welcome to attend these meetings, regardless of grief situation, whether it is a fresh one or a lingering nonacceptance of a grief of many years ago. Those attending may speak freely or just listen and learn from others as they share some of the same experiences and emotions. (No one in the group has been trained in grief ministry, except by personal experience, reading books and listening to tapes.) Especially welcome are persons who have successfully coped with grief. By sharing their experiences, they may be able to help others.

There are no memberships. Those attending may attend when and how often they feel the need. Further information may be obtained by calling 681-1483.

VFW Auxiliary Will Initiate New Members

New members will be initiated at the regular meeting of the VFW Laides Auxiliary to be held Monday at 8 p.m., at the club.

A supper at 6:30 will precede the meeting.

All members are asked to attend.

Women's Aglow Fellowship To Meet Friday

Nancy Christian of Fertile will be guest speaker at the meeting of Women's Aglow Fellowship set for Friday at 7 p.m., at the basement meeting room in the Thief River Falls City auditorium.

Mrs. Christian is a registered nurse and the daughter of a Lutheran pastor. She and her husband, Ray, have five children. Her lecture will include instruction in letting the Holy Spirit into every area of the heart.

Coffee and doughnuts will be served.

Women of all faiths are welcome to attend. Membership cards will be available at the meeting. Annual membership dues are $5.00. The local Women's Aglow Fellowship, affiliated with the international organization, encourages women to be active in their local churches by promoting unity in the body of Christ.

Female Health Discussed By Jaycee Women

"Female Health," was the topic discussed at the March meeting of the Thief River Falls Jaycee Women held at the home of Rose Wold. Guest speaker was Mrs. Vivian Contos, RN. In addition to giving tips in female health, Mrs. Contos showed the film, "Understanding Cancer."

During the business session, several events were discussed and planned. A report was also given on the recent Charity Ball. It was noted that approximately $1,200 was made at the event.

Karen Lehrer and Carolyn Hamness reported that radio days are set for March 25-31; and Darla Twomey and Diane Freeman stated that plans for the babysitting clinic, set for April 21 and 28th, are progressing. Cathy Belmont, chairman of the 20th anniversary celebration of the organization, said that the event will be observed April 20, at 8 p.m., at the Elks.

A tentative slate of officers was given by the nominating committee. Diane Paulson and Kim Blaeser, co-chairmen of a money-making project, with proceeds to be used for providing Easter food baskets for the needy in the area, stated that the event has been set for March 29, at the Elks.

Also discussed were the joint Jaycee and Jaycee Women installation banquet on April 27 with Marlene Essig as chairman; Jaycee jelly week March 18-25, and the concessions for the Boy Scout exposition.

New members welcomed were Judy Stoe and Lana Christianson.

Hostesses were Lianne Mattson and Elaine Bergem.

Drying Flowers Studied by Chat And Chew Club

"Drying flowers and making flowers at home," was the lesson studied at the March meeting of the Chat and Chew homemakers club held at the home of Mrs. Pete Sullivan.

Presenting the lesson were Pauline Aubol, Carol Narverud and Geneva Overum. Miss Overum showed some of the flowers she had pressed. Instructions in making red and yellow carnations were given by Mrs. Aubol and Mrs. Narverud, who also displayed several corsages, floral arrangements, and pussy willows.

Carol Narverud presided at the meeting. In place of reading the homemakers creed, the 10 members present responded to roll call by naming their favorite flower. The secretary's report was given by Geneva Overum and the treasurer's report was read by Betty DeHaan. The floral zodiac horoscope was given by Pauline Aubol.

During the business session, plans were made for hosting the Friendship club meeting set for April 5 at the courthouse meeting room. Members also signed a St. Patrick's day card for Lena Hayes, a former member, who is now a resident of the Alexandria nursing home.

A dessert lunch was served by Vi Sullivan.

University Women Guest Luncheon Set

"Woman's Self-Image," will be explored at the branch meeting of the American Association of University Women on Saturday at the guest day luncheon at Lon's, beginning at 12:30 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Kathleen Kelly of the Crookston Catholic Diocese, a specialist in pre-marriage counseling.

AAUW members are encouraged to invite friends and potential members to this meeting.

SPEAKING at the Women's Aglow Fellowship meeting Friday will be Nancy Christian of Fertile. As a special feature, she will give instruction in letting the Holy Spirit into every area of the heart. The meeting to be held at the basement meeting room in the city auditorium, will begin at 7 p.m.

Family Night Sunday at EFC At Newfolden

Family Night of the Evangelical Free church, Newfolden, will be held Sunday at 8 p.m., with a group from Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship of Bemidji State University, presenting the program. Linda and Janet Bjornrud of Newfolden are members of the group.

The program was arranged by the Robert Dahl family. Lunch will be served. Everyone is welcome to attend.

Commission Acts Tuesday On Zoning

commission that the proposed Holiday operation would be totally conforming to existing zoning. Should the designation be changed to C1, he said, the only part of that proposed operation which would be affected would be gasoline sales.

Jensen said he believed the stationstore would add little traffic to the area since it would be located in the area to take advantage of traffic already there. He circulated a photo of the company's current stationstore design among commission members and said he believed the new facility would be an improvement over the existing condition. It was his opinion that the development would improve area property values rather than diminish them.

Attorney Robert Severson of Hallock, representing Dr. Donald Goodrich, owner of the property proposed for sale to Holiday southeast of the intersection of highway 59 and First street, entered a number of exhibits into the record of the hearing. They included copies from the city's development plan; letters from planners, engineers and realtors; a petition from area property owners favoring retention of C2 designation; and a number of photographs of the area in question.

Severson called several witnesses including Calvin Marjamaa of Engineers Architects Professional corporation in Grand Forks. Marjamaa testified that his studies projected little if any traffic impact on the area from location of a stationstore there and no impact on highway safety from such a use.

Dr. Goodrich stated his position regarding negotiations with Holiday to find a suitable site for relocation of the stationstore from its present downtown location. He said he received encouragement from the city council and Northwestern hospital board, the latter of which intends to acquire the existing Holiday property for potential future expansion.

He said he was compelled to take options on the property in order to provide Holiday with a firm price and that delays in the proceedings forced him to exercise the options to continue to make the property available for sale.

Under questioning by attorney Severson, Dr. Goodrich said it was correct that he offered to sell the property at no profit to himself and that he has now incurred considerable legal, engineering and interest expense because of delays and challenges in re-selling the property.

Robert Wurst, city attorney, volunteered the opinion that because the petitions sought to prevent use of specific property within the C2 zone for what is currently a conforming use, the city would be very vulnerable in a lawsuit if it should decide to down-zone the property.

"We have a suit pending against the city at this time," Wurst said, referring to a suit brought by Holiday and Northwestern hospital regarding city refusal of a special use permit for downtown relocation of the Holiday stationstore. "I don't feel too uncomfortable about defending that one," he said, "but I would be very uncomfortable to defend the change requested here."

Rites Held For Mrs. Robert Gunstad, 54

Funeral services for Mrs. Robert (DeVona) Gunstad, 54, of rural St. Hilaire were held Monday at 2 p.m., at the Calvary Lutheran church in St. Hilaire. Mrs. Gunstad died Wednesday, March 14, at Northwestern hospital, following a lingering illness.

Rev. Lloyd Heroff officiated at the services. Daniel Rewertz was the soloist and Mrs. Faye Johnson, the organist. Interment will be in the Community cemetery at St. Hilaire with the Green Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Gary Haugen, Robert Hansen, Eldon Larson, Robert Skoglund, Herbert Torstveit and John Sherack.

Mrs. Gunstad, the former DeVona Elizabeth Armstrong, was born Aug. 20, 1924 in Thief River Falls to Nelson and Selma Armstrong. When she was a child, she moved with the family to the Iron Range where they lived for a few years before moving to Huron, S.D. There she attended school and grew to womanhood. In the early 1940's, she returned with the family to Thief River Falls.

On July 12, 1946, she was married at St. Hilaire to Robert Gunstad. The couple settled on a farm in Rocksbury township where they have since made their home. Mrs. Gunstad was employed for many years at the Rex Cafe in this city.

She was a member of the Calvary Lutheran church and its ladies aid.

She is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Gary (Debra) Holmgren, Red Lake Falls; two sons: Robert D. Gunstad, San Diego, Calif., and James, Thief River Falls; six grandchildren, and two sisters: Mrs. Raymond (Evelyn) Bradley, Thief River Falls, and Mrs. Art (Mardyn) Modrell, Los Angeles, Calif.

She was preceded in death by her parents.

Elie Payment Rites Held At Red Lake Falls

Funeral services for Elie (Step) Payment, 81, of Red Lake Falls were held Monday at 7 p.m., at the Petterson Funeral home in that city. Payment died Friday at St. John's hospital in Red Lake Falls. For the past several years, he had been a resident at the Hillcrest Nursing home.

Rev. Gerald Noesen, priest of St. Joseph's Catholic parish, officiated at the services. Interment will be in St. Joseph's cemetery in Red Lake Falls.

Pallbearers were James and E. J. LaCoursiere, David and Levi Roy, and Henry and Roger Thode.

Elie Payment was born June 16, 1897 in Louisville township, Red Lake county, to Eustache and Sophie Valley Payment. He lived with his parents on the farm northwest of Red Lake Falls until he was two years old. At that time, his father died and his mother sold the farm to Joe Raymond and moved into Red Lake Falls, settling in the Klondike addition. As a child, he was stricken with polio.

Payment was employed for several years in Bemidji as a telegrapher. He then returned to Red Lake Falls and was employed there by L. J. Savard and at his Jewel Tavern.

He was married in July of 1958 at Red Lake Falls to Rose Gagner Paradis.

He is survived by his wife, a resident at a nursing home in Camas, Wash., and a number of nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by his parents, four sisters: Mrs. Emil (Eleanor Ann) LaCoursiere, Mrs. Levite (Florentine) Roy, and Marie Payment; and three brothers: Wilford, Joseph and Thomas.

Rites Held At Greenbush For Mrs. W. Shoen

Funeral services for Mrs. William (Veronica) Shoen, 57, of Oralndo, Fla., and formerly of the Greenbush community, were held Tuesday, March 13, at the St. Aloysius Catholic church in Leo, near Greenbush. Mrs. Shoen died Thursday morning, March 8, at Orlando, following a car-pedestraian accident.

Rev. Frank A. Arcuri, S.J., offered the Mass. Interment will be in the church cemetery with the Collins Funeral home, Greenbush, in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Don, William and Harold Stanislawski, Leroy and Adrian Pulczinski and Dan Persons.

Military rites were accorded by the Greenbush American Legion post 88.

Mrs. Shoen, the former Veronica Stanislawski, was born April 13, 1921 in Polonia township, Roseau county, near Greenbush to Joseph and Regina Stanislawski. She received her elementary education in Polonia township and was graduated from Greenbush high school in 1939. Later she attended St. John's school of Nursing at Fargo, N.D. She was employed for a short time at the Veterans Administration hospital in Fargo prior to enlisting in the Nursing Corps of the U.S. Army in 1943. While in the service, she served as 2nd Lieutenant in the 92nd General hospital in England, at Ford Ord, Calif., Hawaii and Clinton, Iowa. She received her discharge in 1945.

On Aug. 13, 1949, she was united in marriage to William R. Shoen at Van Nuys, Calif. Since their marriage, the couple has made their home at many military installations in various states, including Mississippi, New York, California and Minnesota. For the past three and one-half years, they have resided at Orlando, Fla.

Surviving are her husband, two brothers: John Stanislawski, Greenbush, and Felix of Lancaster; four sisters: Mrs. Frances Johnson, Glendale, Calif.; Mrs. Harold (Ann) Pakuer, Burbank, Calif., and Mrs. Agnes Pulczinski and Mrs. Ben (Elizabeth) Landowski, both of Greenbush; and several nieces and nephews.

She was preceded in death by her parents and two brothers.

Law Officials Report 10 Cases

A March 20 report from the law enforcement center listed 10 new cases including six thefts, one accident and three vandalisms. Individual cases are given below by reporting date:

March 12 — Nine dollars of gas was reportedly siphoned from a vehicle owned by Mrs. Leonard Gebauer of St. Hilaire while her vehicle was parked in front of her house.

March 13 — Brenda Hecht of the Youth Center reported that the center had been broken into with the pop machine receiving approximately $20 damage and an estimated $75 in change taken from other machines. Charges are pending against four juveniles in the incident.

March 13 — Apprehended and charged with the theft was a 15 year old male juvenile who reportedly knocked down Mrs. Alice Patten in an alley and took her purse. The youth was apprehended a few blocks from the scene and the purse recovered.

March 16 — A Midland 23 channel CB was stolen from a car owned by June Hanson of Northland Manor while the vehicle was parked in downtown Thief River Falls.

March 16 — Eighteen year old Andrew Holmgren of St. Hilaire and a 14 year old juvenile male were apprehended for the theft of a semi trailer and truck. The vehicle was found abandoned on CSAH 3 and upon investigation it was determined that the vehicle was owned by Bernard Pulskamp of Winger and had been stolen from St. Hilaire.

March 17 — Kenneth Murphy of 703 N. Duluth reported that a snowball was thrown through the living room window of the Murphy residence causing $50 damage.

March 17 — The side window on a vehicle owned by Paula Newton of Stephen was broken while the vehicle was parked at the Family Bowl. Damages were estimated at $100.

March 17 — A vehicle owned by Scotty Torgerson of Grygla was legally parked on the east side of Horace Ave. when it was struck by an unknown vehicle. The accident resulted in damages of under $1,000 to the Torgerson vehicle.

March 18 — Karen Olson of 1510 Northland Village reported that a tire on her vehicle had been slashed while she was parked in the Northland lot. Damages were estimated at $45.

March 19 — Rory Harger of Thief River Falls reported the theft of a number of tools from Woodland Construction Co. Value of the stolen items was estimated at $278.

Conference For Women Set At UND Campus

"Traditions in Transition" is the theme of a March 30-31 Charlotte Danstrom conference to be held in the Memorial Union at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks. The annual conference, sponsored by the president's office and several departments at UND, focuses on the changing status of women in their career development.

Charlotte Danstrom was a 1977 conference faculty member and keynote speaker who was killed in a motorcycle accident several months after the conference. A 1956 UND graduate, Danstrom was executive director of a large shopping center in Skokie, Ill., at the time of her death. The conference series has been named for Charlotte to recognize her leadership in the first UND women's conference.

Keynote address will be delivered at the Friday, March 30, session by Shirley McCarty of the Aerospace Corporation in El Segundo, Cal., and Friday topics will deal with "Working Within the Establishment." Saturday the focus will be on "Dual Careers" and the day's session will kick off with an address by Dr. Mary Cesare-Murphy, staff member at the center for human development in Grand Forks.

Subtopics to be dealt with during the two-day conference include: "Entering the World of Work," "Examination of Personal or Self Biases," "Management Practices in Budgeting, Personnel and Editorial Policy Making," "Balancing Priorities," "Money and Career Management," and "Dealing with the Supermom Complex."

Cost for the workshop is $5 for the general public and $2 for UND faculty or students plus meals. Attendance at the entire conference and completion of requirements will earn participants 1.4 CEU's. Further information is available from the division of continuing education at the University of North Dakota.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

I am writing to you about the U.S. Marine corps. I was going to enlist in the Marine corps. So I went and talked to the Marine corps recruiter from Fargo, N.D. I asked him about the Marines. He told me all about them. He asked me if I was still in school and I said no, but I finished three-fourths of the tenth grade and he said that is no good, you have to complete the tenth grade otherwise you have to score over 31 per cent on their test. And they would not let me take the test. They said I would not pass. How would they know if they won't let me take it?

And if I did pass the test I still will not be able to go in because I didn't finish tenth grade and they even won't let me go in with a GED. If I did get in they won't guarantee me what I want because I didn't finish the tenth grade.

So sir, I am saying the U.S. Marine corps can go to h--. And if a war came out right now I will tell all the services to go to the same place. If they won't take a person now, when the draft comes out people will run and hide instead of fighting for their country. Some people do not like to kill. So if a war comes out I will not fight because they won't take me now. When the draft comes out I will not fight, but if they take me now I will go.

Sincerely,
Arthur E. Braun the Third

Rehab Workers Pay Taxes, Ease Program Cost

In three years, rehabilitation efforts by the division of vocational rehabilitation (DVR) in 1977 will generate enough in tax savings and tax income to pay the total cost of the entire program in 1977, Ed Ophiem, acting assistant commissioner for vocational rehabilitation, Minnesota department of economic security, reported recently.

Ophiem said DVR recently studied the earnings of 5,321 people who were rehabilitated and became employed in fiscal year 1977. The study showed these people paid $3,257,000 in taxes during their first year of employment. In addition, because of their earnings, public assistance payments to them were reduced $1,573,000.

Now that they are in their second year of employment, these persons are saving even more in public assistance payments and the yearly tax benefits amount to $5,564,000, Ophiem said.

"This means that the $16,082,817 which DVR spent for services in fiscal year 1977 will be fully recaptured through tax savings and income resulting from rehabilitation efforts that year," Ophiem said.

The division of vocational rehabilitation provides vocational evaluation, restoration, training and placement services to people who are physically or mentally disabled.

Second Annual UND Marketing Conference Set

Second annual marketing, business and advertising conference is being planned by the University of North Dakota collegiate chapter of the American marketing association (AMA). Theme of the conference, to be held April 4-6 at the UND Memorial Union in Grand Forks, is "Marketing is Everybody's Business."

Keynote speaker at the conference will be Larry Luvenow, a Northwood native who graduated from UND and is now a senior vice president with Carl Byoir and Associates, an international public relations form. Luvenow, who will speak at 8 p.m. April 4, is one of 12 successful business leaders and experts who will share opinions, plans and strategies for success.

Among UND students working on conference planning committees are David Flattum and Jennifer Pluth of Thief River Falls. Both are members of the operations committee.

Sgt. C. Stroup Receives Award For Recruiting

Gold recruiting badge was presented to Staff Sergeant Charles Stroup, Thief River Falls recruiter, in a recent ceremony held at Fargo, N.D. Making the presentation was Colonel Joseph S. McLeod, commander of the mid-western recruiting region from Fort Sheridan, Ill.

The badge was given to a recruiter in recognition of his enlistment of high quality and quantity of men and women into the army over a period of approximately three years. Stroup, who makes his home in St. Hilaire, earned the award ahead of his peers having only served as a recruiter for 22 months. The gold recruiting award becomes a permanent decoration that can be worn on the army uniform even after Stroup is no longer on recruiting duty.

4-H News

Deer Park

Deer Park 4-H club held its monthly meeting March 12 at the Merle Lundeen home. Meeting was called to order by President Dale Lundeen. We decided on a play for the Share the Fun that will be held on April 6 at 7:30 in the city auditorium.

The Favorite Foods show is being held March 17 and Dale Lundeen and Arlan Hofstad are taking part in it.

The carnival is set for April 21 and the 4-H decided to make a game for it.

For recreation we played a game.

There were six 4-H members present, three 4-H parents and one visitor.

Next Deer Park monthly meeting will be held April 9 at the Glen Hofstad home.

Perry Lundeen, Reporter

Mavie

March meeting of the Mavie 4-H club was brought to order at the Grand Plain hall by President Tim Panek. Treasurer's and secretary's reports were read and approved. Old business — we discussed the radio program. New business — we talked about the Share the Fun acts. We also talked about the Favorite Foods show that is to be held March 17. Birthday pencils were given out. Motion to adjourn the meeting was made by Darren Panek and seconded by Rhonda Landerville.

A demonstration was given by Cheri Nelson on foods and Beattie Mickelson gave a talk on goal setting.

Recreation was provided by the Gary Iverson family. We had to stuff balloons into a pair of long johns and see who could get done the fastest.

Present at the meeting were 12 4-H members, 10 4-H parents and two visitors.

Our April meeting will also be held at Grand Plain hall.

Minn. Cheese Production Up 28 Per Cent

Minnesota's dairy processing plants manufactured 38.9 million pounds of American cheese this January, an increase of 28 per cent over a year ago, reports the Minnesota department of agriculture.

That was over 22 per cent of national American cheese output for the month and the 2.75 million pound increase over January of last year was the greatest in the nation.

At an average wholesale market price of $1.05 per pound, Minnesota's January cheese production was valued at about $41 million.

Butter manufacture in Minnesota this January was estimated at 14.87 million pounds, seven per cent below a year ago, and over 15 per cent of the U.S. production. At an average wholesale price of $1.14 per pound, Minnesota's January butter output had a market value of nearly $17 million.

Minnesota is the nation's second leading state in manufactured dairy products, behind only neighboring Wisconsin. Combined production of the two states this January accounted for over 63 per cent of the American cheese and over 40 per cent of the butter manufactured in the nation.

Although January was one of the coldest on record, Minnesota dairy plants also found ready markets for nearly 2 million gallons of ice cream manufactured, up 5,000 gallons from a year earlier. That was tenth highest volume among all states and almost 59 per cent more than the output of neighboring Wisconsin this January.

Escape From Any Submerged Vehicle Quickly

Wintertime anglers and others driving across the state's frozen lakes and rivers face increasing dangers as the ice cover is gradually weakened by rains and warmer temperatures.

Act quickly if your vehicle breaks through the ice. Immediately try to escape through a window before the vehicle starts to sink, advises the Minnesota department of public safety.

A vehicle usually bobs back to a horizontal floating position after it plunges into water. Get out through the windows during this floating period which lasts a few seconds to several minutes.

Squeeze out through a window and quickly pull out other passengers. Water pressure from the outside will make door-opening impossible. If side windows are blocked, quickly try to shove your shoulder or feet against the windshield or rear window to force it out of the frame.

After floating awhile, the vehicle will sink vertically, either nose-first or tail-first, depending on where the engine is located.

Once the vehicle sinks to the bottom, your chances of survival are cut greatly. Generally, very little or no air will remain inside. The vehicle doors will open once the passenger compartment is nearly filled with water, but by then, your time and air may have run out.

Before driving onto any frozen waterway, make sure you know that other similar-size vehicles have crossed the ice safely, or test the ice thickness by chopping or drilling a hole.

The minimum recommended safe ice depth — of clear lake ice not heavily traveled — should be four to six inches for snowmobiles, about eight inches for a car or pickup of up to two and a half tons gross weight, and 10 inches thick for a medium truck of up to three and a half tons gross.

Show Film At Ev. Covenant

"Peace Child", a film showing primitive life in the jungles of Irian Jaya, formerly Dutch New Guinea, will be shown Sunday at 7 p.m. at the Evangelical Covenant church in Thief River Falls. Movie shows the work of missionaries Don and Carol Richardson, and the response of the promitive people to them and their messages.

SKATING INSTRUCTOR Linda Worth of the Thief River Falls recreational skating program demands concentration and effort from her students but is always ready and willing to give help and encouragement. In the photos above she explains a dance step to Chris Contos, then leads him through it to help build confidence. Regent Board Agrees To Wait On Stock Issue

Seven stockholder resolutions were approved by the University of Minnesota board of regents recently, but another six dealing with South Africa were held over for further study.

Five of the resolutions approved apply to companies doing business in South Africa, and the other two to companies promoting the sale of infant formula in third world countries.

The regents approved only the resolutions that were supported by both President C. Peter Magrath and the University senate committee on social responsibility in investments. On the other six resolutions, the recommendations of the two differed.

The resolutions that were approved call for:

—American Home Products to set up a review committee to study its practices in selling and promoting infant formula;

—Bristol Myers to take a number of specific actions in changing its infant formula marketing practices, including an end to both the distribution of free samples and heavy promotion of the formula;

—Continental Illinois, Citicorp, and J.P. Morgan to supply reports on bank loans to South Africa;

—Caterpillar Tractor to set up a review committee to study the sale of certain materials to the South African police and military; and

—Eastman Kodak to stop sales of photographic supplies that could be used "for oppressive purposes."

The resolutions held over until the April meeting ask that:

-Exxon Corporation cease expansion of South African operations;

—Ford Motor Company and General Motors Corporation stop sales of strategic materials to South Africa;

—Mobil Corporation and Standard Oil of California reduce oil imports to South Africa, and —Phillips Petroleum withdraw from South Africa entirely.

In each of these cases, the social responsibility committee had recommended support of the resolution; Magrath had recommended abstaining on all votes except one. Magrath had recommended that the regents oppose the Exxon resolution.

The regents also heard a short presentation from Magrath on the university's open meeting policy. Magrath told the regents that university attorney Joel Tierney is preparing a legal interpretation on the effect the state open meeting law has on the university, and that that report should be ready by April or May.

"The law is quite vague with regard to many aspects concerning a diverse institution such as the University of Minnesota," Magrath said.

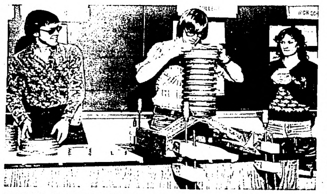
The university administration has come under attack in the past few months, particularly by the student newspaper, the Minnesota Daily, for holding closed meetings of policymaking committees.

Magrath said that the law clearly applies to meetings of the board of regents, which does hold open meetings, but that it is "not at all clear if the law reaches to meetings of administrators and their staffs, he said.

He said that the chancellors of the state university and community college systems do not consider their administrative meetings covered by the law.

In other action, the regents approved the appointment of Stephen W. Roszell as director of alumni relations and executive direcotor of the alumni association. Roszell is currently director of alumni activities at the University of Missouri, Columbia.

Magrath also told the group that Vernan Ruttan, professor of agricultural and applied economics, will chair a committee to select a director for the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs. The rest of the search committee will be named next week.



TOOTHPICK ENGINEERING CONTEST participant, Tim Schoonhoven of Thief River Falls, constructed a model bridge that supported 241.6 pounds winning him sixth place standing in the 5th annual competition held at Moorhead state university. Schoonhoven (center), a student at Moorhead state, is pictured placing test weights on his model bridge. Winner of the competition, Scott Hovelsrud of Moorhead, had a bridge which supported 390½ pounds. Held in conjunction with national engineering week, the contest is sponsored by the Fargo-Moorhead engineering club. Contestants build a model span bridge by gluing together not more than 500 round toothpicks and the bridges are weight-tested with nine-inch metal weights. Model bridge that supports the heaviest load wins. This year the top price awarded was $100.

Barry Hanson Is On Western Pacific Tour

Navy boiler technician third class Barry N. Hanson, son of Norman G. Hanson of Thief River Falls recently departed for a deployment in the Western Pacific.

He is a crewmember aboard the guided missile cruiser USS Horne, homeported in San Diego and operating as a unit of the U.S. seventh fleet.

Missions of the seventh fleet are to protect U.S. citizens, shipping and interests in the Western Pacific; to deter aggression against our Western Pacific allies by maintaining mobile striking forces; to promote peace and stability in the Western Pacific; and to create good will for the United States.

During the cruise, the Horne is scheduled to participate in various training exercises with other Seventh Fleet units and those of allied nations. Port visits are scheduled in several Far Eastern countries.

The Horne is 547 feet long, displaces 7,930 tons and carries a crew of 418 officers and enlisted men. She is outfitted with guns, missile launchers, torpedo tubes and an antisubmarine rocket launcher.

A 1972 graduate of Lincoln high school, Hanson joined the navy in February of 1975.

4H CLUB

Happy Acres 4-H Club

March meeting of the Happy Acres 4-H club was held at Val Hall with 26 members, seven parents and three guests present. Following roll call, the flag pledge and the secretary's report, the play committee reported that a play had been selected and rehearsals had started March 8. The 4-H newsletter was read and the leaders council meeting discussed.

Old business included discussion of the favorite food show and the extension of congratulations to all who participated in the Red River Valley winter shows. New business items discussed were the March 23-25 camper show, Share the Fun, and the 4-H carnival.

A demonstration was given at the meeting by Susie Thune and Todd Carlson on patching jeans and Gretchen McEwen and Collette Thune presented a project talk on making crepes.

Courneya Will Join Team For Chile Mission

Terry Courneya

Pennington county extension director Terry Courneya has been selected to serve on a three-man team representing the University of Minnesota agricultural extension service on a two week mission to the country of Chile in South America.

Courneya will join Dr. Roland Abraham, director of the U of M agricultural extension service, and, Eugene Pilgram, extension program leader for agricultural production on the Chile trip March 24 to April 10.

Purpose of the Chile visit is to work out final details of an agreement between the University of Minnesota agricultural extension service and the Chilean ministry of agriculture for assistance in developing an agricultural production, education and technology transfer system patterned after the U.S. agricultural extension service.

Courneya stated that the continuing wide gap between production levels achieved by crop and livestock producers in Chile, and the production potential demonstrated at the experiment stations, is a major concern of the Chilean government. It will be the objective of this project to develop a longer term working agreement between the University of Minnesota and the Chilean government to assist them in establishing a functional extension service that will increase the production output of Chilean farmers.

Schools Close For Inservice Mon., Mar. 26

Northwest Minnesota common inservice day is set for Monday, March 26, at area schools. No classes will be in session that day with Thief River Falls instructors to participate in a day-long workshop entitled "Time For The Talented." The inservice is aimed at designing and implementing a program for high potential students with Dr. Kenneth Ashpole, superintendent at LeSeuer, to be keynote speaker.

Ashpole is completing his 27th year in education in Minnesota and has served as a superintendent for the last 22 years. He has been actively involved in support for the gifted and talented for 20 years having served as leader of many inservice and workshops in that area. Dr. Ashpole served on the state board of education's advisory committee for 10 years holding the position of chairperson for five years.

The March 26 inservice is being sponsored by the Northwest educational cooperative service unit (NWFSCU). Lunch and coffee will be served during the day at a cost of $3.

INTERESTED OBSERVERS at the planning commission hearing on re-zoning of property along First street and highway 59 in Thief River Falls Monday evening were Mr. and Mrs. Larry Pribyl. They had sold their residential property to provide a future site for a Holiday stationstore. Some time ago they had been refused a $15,000 building permit to improve their residential property because it was a non-conforming use in a C2 zone. Pribyl testified Monday that reclassification to C1 at this time would seem to be especially unfair.

Viking Fourth Graders Join National Event

Fourth grade students at the Viking elementary school will release 20 helium filled balloons containing self-addressed cards on Friday morning as part of a nationwide writing pals contest sponsored by a nationally circulated classroom newspaper.

Ardelle Anderson, fourth grade teacher at Viking, said an estimated quarter of a million school children throughout the United States will be participating in the program. Persons who find the bright yellow balloons when they come to earth again are asked to fill their names and addresses on the cards and mail them back to the school from which the balloons were launched. The children will write personal letters to the balloon finders.

The contest sponsor offers a $500 first prize to the school from which a balloon travels the greatest distance. One hundred runner-up prizes are also offered. Children are encouraged to learn about the geography, economy and history of the areas to which their balloons travel.

Spring Road Restrictions Go Into Effect

Spring load restrictions for all trunk highways in Northern Minnesota may go into effect March 22 according to Glenn Ellinger and Patrick Hughes, area maintenance engineers for district two of the Minnesota department of transportation. Spring load restrictions will remain in effect until further notice. All roads affected by this order will be signed according to their individual load carrying capacity and in all cases, the load limit indicated on the signs will be in effect regardless of any other previous posting or information. Highways having no signs indicating the posted load limit may carry the normal legal load limit of nine-tons per axle.

The department of transportation advises that people planning to transport heavy loads should do so as soon as possible to avoid delays caused by road restrictions.

Information regarding the posting of spring road restrictions on specific roads may be obtained by calling the maintenance offices at Bemidji (218-755-2942) or Crookston (218-281-3503).

Congressman
Arlan Stangeland

The American people have been asked by the current administration to observe, and try to maintain, an inflation rate no higher than 7 per cent for prices and wages. This voluntary action is intended to reduce the burden of high inflation by combating excessive price increases, and higher wages. Congress, on the other hand, seems to be ignoring the President's suggested guidelines, and is continuing to spend hard earned tax dollars at rates well in excess of 7 per cent.

The House of Representatives recently gave its approval to committee operating budgets for fiscal year 1979, and all but two call for increases in expenditures in excess of 7 per cent. The worst example of Congress' intentions to control inflation came on March 7 of this year when the House passed a 2,600 (2 thousand 6 hundred) per cent increase in funds for the House Rules Committee. Last year, the Rules Committee spent $19,200, and this year's budget authorization calls for expenditures of $519,000, an amount 27 times as great. To put it into perspective, if a person making $10,119 annually (average salary for a Minnesota resident) received a salary increase of 2,600 per cent, their annual income would be increased to $263,094.

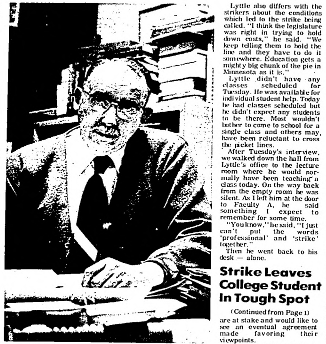
The main reason for this type of increase is Congress' continued proliferation of the number of committee staff employees. In 1968 there were only 637 committee staff employees, and by 1978 the total had increased to 2,143. I believe we have adequate numbers of committee staff employees, and in some cases there is overstaffing. Part of the problem is that many committees overlap in their duties, and additional staff members are needed to perform the same tasks of another committee. This is the kind of Congressional bureaucracy that must be reduced, and guarded against.

Excessive budget increases were also approved for the Select Task Force on Pensions (53 per cent), the Armed Services Committee (31 per cent), the House Administration Committee (29 per cent), the Education and Labor Committee (21 per cent), and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence (18 per cent). I also found it necessary to vote against the budget for the House Public Works and Transportation Committee, of which I am a member, because of its 12 per cent increase.

These budget increases are examples of the double standard that has been set up by Congress, and, unfortunately, it shows a real lack of concern in dealing with the nation's economic problems.

Congress has heavily criticized the current administration's handling of the economy, and the growth of the administrative bureaucracy. The truth, however, is that Congress isn't doing much better. We must follow the guidelines that have been proposed by voting to keep budget increases and Federal spending at levels equal to, or less than, 7 per cent. As an elected body, we must also act as a good example by policing our own operation. This will be necessary to balance the budget, and bring our fiscal problems under control. Asking the taxpayers to keep prices and wages at a reasonable rate is an excellent idea, but the burden must not rest on their shoulders alone.

I have voted against these committee operations budgets, and will continue to vote against all measures calling for excessive, and unnecessary spending. The approval of these committee budgets is unfortunate, and I am discouraged that more of my colleagues in Congress have not taken an active role in reducing unnecessary government spending.



RICH LYTTLE was in his office at Northland community college Tuesday, available for any students who wished individual assistance. He was the only faculty member to cross the picket lines of the striking Minnesota community college faculty association. He has chosen not to be a member of the association.

Non-Striker Has No Students In Class At NCC

describe me as generally anti-labor. There was a time during the industrial revolution when labor unions were needed. Now I think they have outlived their usefulness and even may be detrimental to our society."

Crossing the picket lines was not a pleasant nor particularly difficult experience. Lyttle found no great satisfaction in doing it. "It's sort of like going to the dentist, if you'll pardon that comparison he said. "The anticipation is worse than the experience.

"The other faculty members know my position — they know I'm not a member of the association and I would imagine they feel that because I'm not with them, I'm against them. In regard to the strike, I suppose I am. But I also feel I'm entitled to form my own opinions and make my own decisions."

Lyttle doesn't view his actions of crossing picket lines and going to work as strikebreaking. He is only one of more than 20 local faculty members and he hasn't been trying to influence others to swing his way.

"I believe college is for the students, not the faculty," he said. We're well paid and we have excellent working conditions. That's my opinion. Obviously, there are others out there (the picketing faculty members) who would disagree with me."

SEVERAL BOYS entered the favorite foods show Saturday at the Thief River Falls city auditorium. Among them was Troy Carlson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chuck Carlson and first year member of the Happy Acres 4-H club.

Lyttle ventured the guess that the Northland faculty averages an annual income about $1,500 in excess of the state average of approximately $17,500.

"Most of our faculty members are on the upper level of the experience lanes," he said. "That puts us at a higher than average salary scale. If we average a $19,000 a year salary, that's a pretty good income for this area. I don't think a lot of people know how well paid we are."

If the strike should be settled in a week or two and the spring quarter moved back by that amount of time, Lyttle could find himself in the position of working a week or two for no pay.

"That doesn't bother me," he said. "I'd sure be willing to stay on an extra week or two. I'm not in this for the money; I'm here to teach kids. I need the salary for a living, of course, but it's not my primary motivation."

There is speculation that some MCCFA members are on the picket lines due to peer pressure rather than a commitment to the cause. Lyttle minimizes the peer influence.

"Sure, I like to get along with people," he said. "If I can be on good terms with my fellow faculty members it makes the job that much nicer. But I can do my job without them, really. I can go from my students to my office and do the job of teaching. That's what I get paid to do. It doesn't mean I'm anti-social it just means I'm free to do my work in the best way I know how."

Lyttle also differs with the strikers about the conditions which led to the strike being called. "I think the legislature was right in trying to hold down costs," he said. "We keep telling them to hold the line and they have to do it somewhere. Education gets a mighty big chunk of the pie in Minnesota as it is."

Lyttle didn't have any classes scheduled for Tuesday. He was available for individual student help. Today he had classes scheduled but he didn't expect any students to be there. Most wouldn't bother to come to school for a single class and others may have been reluctant to cross the picket lines.

After Tuesday's interview, we walked down the hall from Lyttle's office to the lecture room where he would normally have been teaching a class today. On the way back from the empty room he was silent. As I left him at the door to Faculty A, he said something I expect to remember for some time.

"You know," he said, "I just can't put the words 'professional' and 'strike' together."

Then he went back to his desk — alone.

are at stake and would like to see an eventual agreement made favoring their viewpoints.

Yet, a major factor is overlooked in the decision to waylay negotiations. Perhaps representatives of both involved parties have consciously attempted to push aside the existence of a third party whose rights are being trodden upon. This third party consists of some 30,000 Minnesota community college students.

Thus far, I have heard little mentioned by spokespersons in reference to students and the consequences that we are being forced to deal with. Why has our situation been seemingly deliberately ignored?

Instructors plead that we support them in their efforts to achieve pay raises and attain the propositions legally arbitrated in 1977. I have met with and peaceably discussed the strike situation with several instructors who at least attempted to maintain good, personable relations.

However, there are those who cannot truthfully deny threats of lowered grades and abusive language upon meeting those students who choose to break the strikeline. This childish approach to an adult situation creates a sense of shame not only for fellow teachers, but for a student's pride in the community college he or she attends. There is in fact no way to prevent people from breaking the strike line, but such hostile confrontations can and have caused several students to become understandably upset.

The strike has brought about a change in attitude of many people, particularly students. It hurts me to see this change in my fellow students who are faced with the delemma of indecision. Many times I've heard "What can we do?" There aren't too many options. Those meeting with the most difficulty are sophomores who need only complete the spring quarter to meet graduation requirements and obtain their associate of arts degree. These can do one of three things:

(1) Transfer out. Several four-year institutions are only in their second week of spring quarter classes. Transferring to another school would mean not falling behind in credits and moving on sooner than planned but without the A.A. degree basis to transfer.

However some schools are well into their spring quarters, and so this arrangement would not apply to some students.

I raise the question "why did the community college faculty association vote to hold classes Monday and begin the official strike Tuesday?" Any student who chooses to transfer out, but has already paid tuition and fees, loses 20 per cent of the cost! One day of scheduled classes results in only an 80 per cent reimbursement of tuition paid. Was this factor taken into consideration as a way of discouraging students to transfer? You better believe it was.

(2) Wait and see. Many students and faculty members are hoping that the strike will last only a short time. Then classes just may resume in order to meet the spring schedule. We would finish the quarter only slightly later than planned.

Yet, I fear that pressure to meet requirements will mean increased tension between students and teachers, and who will receive the short end? No one's to blame, but the hardship falls on everyone. Maybe we can attend summer school and transfer grades, continuing our education in the fall, but who can afford the lost time?

(3) Quit. Already I've heard the fears of not having the finances to last that extra month or so that school may last due to the strike. Should no agreement be made, resulting in cancellation of the entire spring quarter, full reimbursement of tuition will be made, but the time and money spent waiting will be lost.

Why not just get a job and hope to be able to complete your education at a later date? This results in a decline in student enrollment, average education level and the entire education system.

As students, we lose no matter how the situation turns out, and delays mean all the more complications we must face. We took on the decision of gaining adult freedom by seeking an education. With that we realize the responsibility of attending to our own needs and concerns.

Teachers, you ask that we support your cause and fight with you. We want you to consider what you ask of us.

Many students attend school through state-aid programs and maintain our living through the college work-study program. We are paid by the state of Minnesota. This state has some of the best financed public institutions in the country, not to mention one of the highest standards of education ever known. How can you expect us to fight against the opportunity to learn?

State officials, you've backed out on legal commitments to your employees, and we see no sign of state attempts to help negotiations go smoothly. Although you provide us with the system to obtain knowledge, what good is it if we can see no honesty or security in the core of that system?

These words are for all of you: "Until a man has learned to listen, he has no business serving. Until he realizes that every man has something of truth to offer, he does not learn. It is only when he sees how each of his fellows surpasses him that a man begins to be wise, to himself and his fellow men."

There are not only two sides to this statewide strike, the opposing ones that feature instructors in one corner and state officials in the other. Entrapped in the middle are the students who fill your schools. Don't ask us to make a choice. Instead, try to imagine what you would do.

Picketing At Northland In Second Day

bitration and received an arbitration award which the state refused to honor.

"(2) In 1977 we submitted contract negotiations to arbitration again and this time the state illegally reduced the award.

"(3) This year the state has refused to go to arbitration which under state law entitles us to strike. At issue is whether the state will recognize the amounts previously awarded as a basis for determining future salaries. We insist that they do this and this the state has refused to do despite a district court ruling in the faculty's favor."

Gov. Al Quie, who is being urged by the association to stir the state legislature into action on the complaints, has responded by encourageing the faculty members to continue working until the state supreme court issues a ruling on the state's public employee bargaining law. While all parties state they hope the strike does not last long, there is no present hope for an imminent settlement.

State news stories on the strike indicate that the state's community college faculty receives an average basic salary of $17,000 to $17,500. Information secured by the Times from Dr. Easton shows the average salary at Northland to be $19,648. That figure includes the full salary of one member who is on sabatical leave at half salary with a lower cost replacement hired to fill his position.

"The salary range here is from a low of $12,671 to a high of $23,028 with a median salary of $21,275," Dr. Easton said. "There are 11 faculty members at or above the median figure. These figures are based on 19 regular faculty positions, including full salary for the person on sabbitical leave. Our higher median and average, of course, is due to the fact that we have a staff which has generally been here for a number of years and are at or near the salary maximums. These are basic salaries exclusive of fringe benefits."

Statewide the strike affects 18 community colleges with total enrollment of about 30,000 students. Several of the schools are on their spring quarter break this week and the walkout has not been experienced at those schools at this time.

Donations Are Sought For Fire Victims

Donations of clothes, furniture, household items and money are being sought for the Marvin Kleven family who lost their home in a December fire which also took the life of Marvin Kleven.

Boys clothes are needed in sizes nine months to two years; 8-9-10 husky boys and 18-20 big boys. Girls clothes are needed in sizes 8-9-10 regular and women's clothes are needed in size 18. Baby shoes size 3 and up, women's shoes sizes 8 to 9, girls shoes sizes 2½ to 4 and boys shoes sizes 9½ to 10 can also be used.

Anyone with anything to donate may call the Klevens at 436-2618 or bring the goods to the Kleven residence east of Karlstad, one and one-half miles out of town.

Two Area Piano Students Win At State Contest

Andrea Ault

Sandra Rustan

Andrea Ault, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ev Ault of Thief River Falls, was a winner in the Minnesota music teachers association state piano contest held at Normandale community college in Minneapolis March 10. A state winner in the junior B division (11-12 year olds), Andrea played "Sonatina" by Georg Benda. Andrea will now perform in the state honors concert at Northrop auditorium at the University of Minnesota Sunday, June 17. Her piece for the honors concert is "Two Waltzes" by Johannes Brahms.

Chosen alternate in the contest was Sandra Rustan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rustan of Oklee who also competed in the junior B division. Sandra played "Entree" by George F. Handel for competition. In the event that another winner is unable to play in the honors concert, alternate, Sandra will perform.

Both girls are piano students of Marcia Knuttila and have been taking lessons for 3½ years. They advanced to the state after winning in the February 10 district competition. There were 1313 contestants in the state piano contest. In the junior B division in which they competed there were 271 contestants. The top 25 per cent in each of the eight contest divisions will perform in the honors concert.

Northwestern Bell To Reduce Service Rates

Starting March 16, Northwestern Bell will roll back basic local service rates for its Minnesota customers to levels in effect prior to March 4, 1978.

The rate reductions, effective by billing date, were ordered by the Minnesota public service commission (PSC) after it turned down the company's 1978 rate request.

Refunds for the money collected between March 4, 1978 and March 15, 1979 with interest, will appear as a credit on customer statements by billing date starting May 16.

Customers are also being notified by means of a notice in their bills.

County Board Looks At Solid Waste Problem

Alternatives to the solid waste problem were among the items discussed at an adjourned regular meeting of the Pennington county board held Tuesday, March 20. Covered in the discussion were the possibilities of turning the operation over to private enterprise, continuing to haul to Gentilly, recycling, and obtaining at least a site for disposal of large items such as tree trunks, refrigerators, etc. within the county.

Board members felt they should meet with city representatives and other area persons involved in solid waste, examine the alternatives and determine what direction to take in solving the county's solid waste problem. County aduitor, Charles Rodekuhr, was instructed to contact the city council to set up a meeting date.

The board passed a resolution in support of legislation which would allow the use of plastic well casings in Northern Minnesota. Asking the county's support for the proposed legislation was Robert J. Davidson of the Davidson Well Co. who indicated that the southern part of the state was already allowed to use the plastic casings in well drilling and that he felt there would be considerable savings in cost if their use were permitted. Davidson also stated that he believed the plastic casings were more durable and would result in less rust than the steel ones presently used.

Also in attendance at the Tuesday meeting was Chris Twomey, director of the occupational development center (ODC), who requested a county allocation of 30 cents per capita for the center. The county has made that allocation for the last few years and granted Twomey's request with the ODC to receive $4,376.70.

Slow down and live.

Boosters Hear Budget Talks

Thursday's weekly 12 noon Thief River Falls Sports Boosters club luncheon meeting should be an interesting session with Lincoln high school principal Frank Hamerlinck and Franklin middle school principal Dr. Milton Hoff serving as guest speakers.

They'll discuss the budget and budget cuts facing School District 564, particularly in the area of athletic programs.

Budget cuts announced last week for the proposed 1979-80 school year affected Lincoln cross country, wrestling, softball, golf, intramural sports and Prowlins. Budget cuts at Franklin hit boys and girls basketball, football and volleyball.

The meeting is open to the public. Cost of the meal is $2.50.

Region 8AA Structure Changed

Athletic representatives of the eight northern schools in Region 8AA were scheduled to meet in Detroit Lakes today (Wednesday) to discuss tournament precedures for the 1979-80 school year.

Reason for the meeting is the fact that Region 8AA will be split into North and South divisions in 1979-80 instead of four sub regions as it has been since the Class AA expansion by the Minnesota State High School League four years ago.

Schools involved in the North Half of Region 8AA are Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks, Crookston, Bemidji, Moorhead, Detroit Lakes, Fergus Falls and Park Rapids.

Meeting at Detroit Lakes on Feb. 28, athletic directors of the 15 Region 8AA schools favored a North-South split and the proposal was formally approved at a subsequent meeting of the region committee.

With the North-South split approved, it will mean revamping the tournament structure for boys and girls basketball, boys and girls track, baseball and volleyball.

North-South competition in Region 8AA is already held in wrestling and tennis, while a single one-class region tournament is conducted for golf, girls gymnastics and cross country. Hockey and swimming are conducted on a sectional basis.

One of the reasons for the change from Sub region to North-South play was the feeling that there was a distinct lack of enthusiasm, both from the students and general public, for the sub region tournament activities.

Under the North-South split, the South Half of Region 8AA would have seven teams: Brainerd, Little Falls, Sauk Rapids, Alexandria, Melrose, St. Cloud Apollo and St. Cloud Tech. However, the South membership will match the North's eight schools when the MSHSL adds a 16th team to Region 8AA. The MSHSL has not yet announced what school it will be, but prominently mentioned is Cold Spring-Rocori, an extrant in the 1979 Minnesota state high school boys basketball tournament and a power in several athletic endeavors.

Thief River Falls was scheduled to host the 1980 Sub Region 4 girls basketball tournament. The Prowlers will be staging the 1979 Sub Region 4 baseball tournament this spring.

Miscellaneous

+ Detroit Lakes school board denied a request by Jerry Doebbert, a member of the high school faculty, for two days of personal leave so he could officiate the 1979 Minnesota state high school girls basketball tournament. The request was denied since it is a deviation from the Detroit Lakes school district's master contract which states that a teacher cannot take leave for personal gain. But Doebbert said he will officiate the tournament for the third straight year even though he will lose two days of pay.

+ Cliff Morlan of the Bemidji Pioneer reports that Warren basketball center Steve Brekke is headed for Bemidji State University where he'll play for coach Dave Hutchins who has also been talking to Thief River Falls' Steve Enderlein. Northland community college basketball coach Chet Engelman would like to have both Brekke and Enderlein in his line-up next winter.

Finals Held In Big T Hockey Event Monday

Finals of the 1979 Thief River Falls Big T hockey showdown were held Monday in the sports arena.

The annual event, testing skating, shooting and stickhandling drills, is co-sponsored by Thomas Motors and the Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA).

Volunteer help came from Jeff Kosel, Bill Jury, Mark Huot, Wade Hoppe, Bob Fitzgerald, Dave Geatz and Scott Sabo.

Top three place finishers in each of the seven age groups received plaques. Winners were as follows:

8-and-under — 1. Kent Hamre; 2. Aaron Bruzek; 3. Mitchell Lutz.

9-year-olds — 1. Bradley Olson; 2. Steve McGann; 3. Jeff Grand.

10-year-olds — 1. Steve Fellman; 2. Scott Novak; 3. Keith Leander.

11-year-olds — 1. Billy Desrocher; 2. Chad Bottem; 3. Lee Hamre.

12-year-olds — 1. Allan Ness; 2. Ryan Bakke; 3. Rick Spong.

13-year-olds — 1. Tim Bergland; 2. Jeff Storhaug; 3. Chris Jorde.

14-year-olds — 1. Jeff Imgrund; 2. Bruce Johnson; 3. Dale Nelson.

Girls State Tournament To Open Thursday

Last of the 1979 Minnesota State High School League winter sports state tournaments will be played this week when the girls state basketball tournament gets underway Thursday at two sites in the Twin Cities area.

Opening round games in Class AA will be played at the St. Paul Civic Center before the large schools join the Class A teams at Met Sports Center in Bloomington.

Class A

First round games Thursday in Class A met at the Met will match Region 8A champion Fertile-Beltrami against Region 7A winner Moose Lake at 1:05 p.m., Region 2A champion Edgerton Southwest Christian vs. Region 5A winner Albany at 2:45, Region 1A champion Austin Pacelli vs. Region 6A winner New York Mills at 7:05 and Region 3A champion Redwood Falls vs. Region 4A winner Brady at 8:45.

Semifinals will be played Friday beginning at 7:05 p.m. Third place and championship games will be played Saturday afternoon.

Class AA

Opening round games Thursday in Class AA at the Civic Center will match Region 1AA champion Northfield against Region 7AA winner St. Francis at 1:20, Region 2AA champion Shakopee vs. Region 4AA winner Coon Rapids at 3, Region 6AA champion Hopkins Lindbergh vs. Region 8AA winner Melrose at 7:21 and Region 3AA champion St. Paul Central vs. Region 5AA winner Minneapolis North at 9.

Semifinals will be played Friday beginning at 1:05 p.m. Third place and championship games will be played Saturday night.

Relief ace Mike Marshall was drafted by Philadelphia as a shortstop, and played that position four years before becoming a pitcher in 1965.

LHS Graduate At Bemidji State University

Mark Storhaug Is Named All-American Swimmer

Mark Storhaug, a Lincoln high school graduate and a member of the Bemidji State University swimming team, earned All-American honors in two events at the recent NAIA national swimming and diving championships held at Huntsville, Ala.

Storhaug was a sixth place finisher in the grueling 1,650-yard freestyle in 16:40.7 and swam the second leg on the Beavers' 800-yard freestyle relay team that finished fourth in 7:00.3.

Top six place finishers in each event at the NAIA meet were awarded All-American status.

Storhaug, who began competitive swimming in the eighth grade, said the All-American honors are obviously "the highlight of my swimming career."

A fourth place finisher in the NIC conference meet a week earlier in the 1650, Storhaug dropped his time seven seconds at the NAIA event by "improving my last 500." He won that prestigious sixth spot by a mere two-tenths of a second in the final day of the three-day meet March 8-10.

Success can make that demanding mile swim seem a lot easier than it really is. "If you win, it's a pleasure to swim," explained Storhaug whose smaller size is built for the long endurance races instead of the shorter sprints. "But if you don't win, it really takes a toll on you."

Storhaug, a junior who began his collegiate career at the University of North Dakota before transferring to Bemidji earlier this year, also met an NAIA qualifying time in the 500-yard freestyle with a 4:48.08 fifth place finish at the NIC meet. He improved that to 4:47.75 at Huntsville but did not make the NAIA finals.

Bemidji capped an 11-1 regular season dual meet record with an easy NIC championship preformance and a lofty fourth place finish in the 47-team NAIA meet won by perennial power Simon Fraser University of Burnaby, British Columbia. Beavers enjoyed their highest national finish ever.

Storhaug credited a lot of his swimming success to coaches John Kopari at Lincoln high school and Lee Ahlbrecht at Bemidji State. "Kopari is the one that really got me interested about it," he said.

With one more year of collegiate competition, Storhaug would like another shot at NAIA honors. Preparation for that goal will start next September when members of the Bemidji squad gather for pre-season water polo matches.

CARRYING A 23-7-1 record, the Thief River Falls Bantam A hockey team will complete its 1979-80 season by participating in the highly acclaimed world Bantam tournament at International Falls Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Thief River Falls' first round foe in the strong 16-team event is Blaine. Members of the Thief River Falls team, champion in the recent Northern Lites League playoffs, are, front row left to right, Chris Jorde, Rick Langlie, Brent Schmitz, Jeff Storhaug, Mitch Semanko and Jim Geatz; back row, coach Rory Anderson, Tom Ose, Steve Olson, Tim Bergland, Tim Bottem, Jim Gobell, Bruce Johnson and Jeff Imgrund. Missing at the time of the picture were Tom Kenville, Dale Nelson and coach Rick Holmes.

Status Reports Are Presented On Northwestern Minnesota Wildlife

Conserve Our Wildlife is the theme for national wildlife week 1979, being observed March 18-24. Sponsored by the National Wildlife Federation, this 42nd annual observance focuses on the importance of wildlife conservation.

The majestic cougar, shown on this year's poster, reinforces wildlife's claim to everyone's attention.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt proclaimed the first national wildlife restoration week (as it was then called) in 1938.

That observance's poster featured a bird soaring above a barren, desolate landscape, as if looking in vain for a place to light. "Where to Now?" the poster asked.

That first week's theme was a commentary on destruction of habitat. This is still the biggest problem facing wildlife — the loss of habitat.

The following reports have been prepared by Department of Natural Resources wildlife managers Robert Farmes, Thief River Falls; Frank Swenson and Gerald Maertens, Thief Lake wildlife management area; George Davis, Karlstad; and Terry Wolfe, Crookston.

These status reports on a few of the better known mammals and birds of northwestern Minnesota will provide information on the efforts being taken to conserve our wildlife in this region.

Moose

One of northwestern Minnesota's most unique wildlife forms, and our largest game animal, is the moose.

An adult bull may weigh 1,000-2,000 pounds. Adult cows weigh 700-800 pounds. Moose stand about six feet tall at the shoulders.

Minnesota moose range is found in the northeast and northwest. These two herds total about 6,000 animals and give Minnesota one of the largest moose herds in the continental U.S., according to George Davis, DNR wildlife manager at Karlstad.

In northwestern Minnesota the moose is a native species. It was found in good numbers prior to homesteading. Numbers were much reduced by 1920-30. After 1922 all moose hunting seasons were closed until 1971.

A small nucleus of moose remained north of the Red Lakes. With protection and better habitat resulting from farm abandonment in the 1930's, the herd slowly increased. The greatest increase occurred in the 1960's.

This is when the herd started to expand in Roseau, Kittson and Marshall counties. These three counties now contain the bulk of the moose in the northwest. In the early 1960's the northwestern moose numbered around 1,500. By the late 1960's the herd increased to over 2,000. Aerial census indicated a herd of between 2,500-3,000 during the early 1970's. Now population size has declined to 2,000-2,500 moose.

It is felt that the bulk of the decrease is related to habitat loss. Other factors affect moose well being. Moose disease, a brain worm, is fatal. Carried by deer, this leads to high moose mortality where deer are plentiful. Winter ticks result in blood and hair loss which can lead to further problems, such as pneumonia. Moose-human interactions also lead to moose deaths. Vehicle accidents, depredation complaints, fence destruction and moose moving to town all affect moose numbers.

Minnesota has had a moose hunting season biannually since 1971. A season will again be held in October 1979.

MOOSE HUNTING SEASONS SUMMARY

Year	Number of Permits	Moose Taken
1971	250	240
1973	335	306
1975	475	449
1977	630	598

Prairie Chickens

Prairie Chicken populations, in a downward spiral since the late 1800's, have begun to level off, according to Terry Wolfe, DNR wildlife manager at Crookston.

"They haven't been hunted since 1942," said Wolfe, "so we can't blame hunters for the reduced populations. They've had problems holding onto their grass."

Grassland acreage has steadily declined under pressure from the plow, gravel operations, over grazing and brush or timber encroachment. There has been an extreme loss of grassland since 1974 when wheat prices soared.

Prairie chicken numbers appear to have stabilized the last three years. "We are counting in our annual spring census," said Wolfe, "about 800 cock prairie chickens on our main prairie chicken range between Crookston and Fergus Falls. This is a far cry from the wagon loads that went to markets in St. Paul and Chicago in the late 1800's but at least we have a good chance of maintaining some prairie chickens for the future."

Wolfe attributes the stable prairie chicken population to land acquisition efforts of the Department of Natural Resources, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Nature Conservancy, a private conservation group. Many prairie chickens are now using these protected grasslands, though a number are still dependent on private land.

"As the plow moves right up to the wildlife area boundaries, we could see some reduction in prairie chicken numbers," said Wolfe. "We may have to adjust our management. One example — winter food plots are becoming more important each year. We just can't count on much being left accidentally any more."

There has been increased interest in prairie chickens in recent years. The Minnesota prairie chicken society was formed about five years ago to support prairie chickens and other prairie wildlife. It continues to be active in chicken management efforts.

Continued good grassland management on the prairie preserves, such as the prevention of annual grazing and mowing, and occasional controlled burns, will insure prairie chickens remaining a part of our Minnesota prairie heritage.

Deer

White tailed deer in northwestern Minnesota will remain our number one big game animal but wildlife managers do have some concern for future numbers.

A steady decline in deer numbers since 1972 is evident in deer seen in wintering areas and in the hunter take. Wildlife managers attribute the decline mostly to loss of habitat. Winters have been tough also, and hunting pressure has increased.

Winter is a critical period for deer. Cover and food are in short supply. Wildlife managers feel that in northwestern Minnesota blocks of at least one-half section to many sections of timber and brush are necessary to securely winter deer.

Preservation of deer wintering areas is second in priority only to preservation of marshes in northwestern Minnesota. Where possible blocks of timber and brush are being acquired to maintain deer.

Winter weather can be a major factor in the well being of a deer herd. With snowfalls early and heavy last winter deer problems were numerous. Unharvested corn and sunflower fields were common. Many of these provided food for deer that may have starved otherwise.

Well over $200,000 was spent by the DNR in feeding deer and providing browse and trails. Well over 25 dozers were used in the effort. Volunteer efforts were even more valuable if all the time, vehicle use and donated feed were added up. Deer losses still ran between 10 and 50 per cent throughout the northwest.

Snow depths this winter and extreme cold could have some effect on deer numbers. Deer have been able to get to more secure cover this winter, unlike last year when some ended up in building sites, feed lots or open unharvested fields. Wildlife managers expect some fawn loss but it will not be exceptional.

Deer movement has been somewhat restricted by the deep snow — over 30 inches in much of the northwest. The snow was light which helps since deer were able to get through it.

Food plots are also more numerous on state owned wildlife management areas than ever before. Wildlife managers definitely feel these have value for deer and other wildlife, and have been making arrangements to expand this operation. Generally the corn, sunflower or small grain patches are provided through crop leases on state land with neighboring farmers, or in some cases farmers are being paid to provide the winter food.

Deer numbers continue to decline despite wide ranging changes in the deer hunting season. A meeting will be held on April 16 by the DNR at 7:30 p.m. at the Thief River Falls city auditorium to get public input on the deer hunting season and other hunting seasons.

While recognizing that deer hunting is a major factor in our deer herd, wildlife managers also are interested in public involvement and support to preserve the habitat that supports deer.

Ducks, Geese

Duck and goose populations of the future will have their ups and downs, according to Bob Farmes, wildlife manager, Thief River Falls.

On the up side, goose hunting is expected to remain good, as it has for the past several years, and it may improve. On the down side, duck numbers are expected to decline unless new ways are found to preserve their habitat.

Geese generally breed in northern regions, away from man's activities. There is not the competition for land use as there is in areas where ducks nest. Geese are also more easily managed because populations are distinct.

Ducks are highly dependent on prairie potholes, those generally found among farming operations. As land use changes, so do duck numbers.

In recent years wetlands have begun to be recognized for their true worth and are no longer considered wastelands. For example, the value of goose hunting alone at the Horicon Marsh in Wisconsin is $5.2 million annually — about double the yearly agricultural potential of the land. Yet between 200 and 300 thousand acres of wetlands are still being drained annually in the U.S. Wildlife that use these wetlands have diminished substantially as a result.

Minnesota, as well as the Federal Fish and Wildlife Service, is attempting to prevent this loss with wetland acquisition programs. Under the state program 489,000 acres in 915 wildlife management areas have been acquired to date. Sportsmen have contributed some $13 million toward this. Under the federal program 135,488 acres have been acquired as waterfowl production areas and 120,499 acres are under easement. Support is needed to continue these programs.

The water bank is another program that is saving wetlands. Under this program landowners are paid for maintaining wetlands for 10 year periods. So far 1,240 agreements are in effect covering 67,297 acres. Better funding is needed if this program is to be fully effective.

Wetland development was given a boost when the state legislature passed the state duck stamp law. Proceeds from the sale of these stamps give wildlife managers in Minnesota an additional $400,000 annually for wetland development. This has allowed managers to improve and increase waterfowl areas throughout the state.

A pilot study is being undertaken in west central Minnesota in a three county area to look into possible ways of maintaining and improving waterfowl habitat. Hopefully this study will find additional ways to increase duck and goose populations.

Sharp Tailed Grouse

Sharp tailed grouse is a more adaptable bird than the prairie chicken. Though dependent on open grasslands it is able to live in open bogs and uses areas with a fair amount of brush and light timber. For this reason it has fared better than the prairie chicken.

The sharptail is still a game bird in Minnesota. A hunting season has generally been set between mid-September and the end of November. Wildlife managers feel that hunting pressure has little effect on sharptail numbers.

National Wildlife Week

MOOSE, THOUGH "patchy" looking at this time of the year, thrive in northwestern Minnesota where a mixture of timber and brush is available. March 18-24 is being observed as national wildlife week in the United States under the theme "Conserve Our Wildlife."

ABOUT ONE million waterfowl breed in Minnesota each year, which is approximately two per cent of the continental population. There are more waterfowl hunters in Minnesota than all the Canadian prairie provinces combined. About one-quarter of the waterfowl taken in the Mississippi Flyway are taken in Minnesota. National wildlife week 1979 is currently being observed throughout the United States. This year's theme is "Conserve Our Wildlife."

Archery League Regular Season Schedule Will End This Week

Neither leader picked up a win in the tenth week of 1979 Thief River Falls indoor archery league shooting, but the Buck Busters and Game Getters still remain firmly planted atop the target and bowhunter point standings heading into the final week of regular season shooting.

The Buck Busters were held to an 891-all tie against the Bear Busters in target competition, but still own a 7½-point lead over their victors.

Game Getters, despite a 1196-1191 loss to Arctic Cat I, have a 2½-point edge over Arctic Cat II in the bowhunter standings.

Fast Cats defeated the Arctic Arrows 908-874 in the second target match.

In other bowhunter matches it was Team Arctic 1194, Wasatch Warriors 1110; Arctic Cat II 1144, Junior Giants 1141; "Z" Archers 1151, Bowbenders 1127; Bull Skippers 1185, TG Sporting Goods 1092. The Arctic Arrows received a bye while shooting a 1110.

Bowhunter Standings

Game Getters 35, Arctic Cat II 32½, Team Arctic 30, Arctic Cat I 25, Bull Skippers 24, "Z" Archers 21, TG Sporting Goods 18½, Bow Benders 17½, Wasatch Warriors 16½, Junior Giants 14, Arctic Archers 6½.

Area Softball Umpires Will Have Meetings

A correction was announced this week for the spring softball umpires rules meetings for northwestern Minnesota.

Persons interested in serving as a softball umpire this summer are required to attend a rules meeting either Tues., April 3, at Bagley or Mon., April 9, at Crookston. Both meetings start at 7 p.m.

It was reported earlier those meetings would be held this week.

For additional information contact Dennis Bendickson at 681-2181.

CAPITOL CLOSE-UP

BY REP. JOHN CORBID

The House passed the resolution for a constitutional amendment to allow the District of Columbia to have voting members in Congress. The resolution passed with 68 votes, the minimum needed for passage. I supported this resolution because I feel everyone has a right to be a full participant in deciding the future of their country.

The Legislature in joint session elected four regents for the University of Minnesota. The regents were nominated by Congressional district delegations. The regent from our area will be William Dosland of Moorhead.

In committee action, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee is considering a number of bills modifying the state's tresspass laws. One is H.F. No. 60, which better defines agricultural land, as "lands which are plowed, fallow, or contain harvested crop residues, or lands enclosing domestic livestock." While walking on land defined as agricultural would require permission of the owner or tenant, people would be able to walk along and fish for trout within 33 feet of streams or watercourses.

Another bill of interest is H.F. No. 479, relating to health maintenance organizations. While this is viewed an an anti-abortion bill, it simply makes the elective service of performing abortions optional. The clinic would not have to offer elective abortions for insurance or licensing purposes. The bill is currently in the Health and Welfare Committee.

Also in interest this past week, a routine will dealing with the form of the marriage license is being used to re-fight the battle over no-fault divorce. At the present time, in determining property settlements, the courts do not consider which spouse should accept the blame for the dissolution. If we go back to the old law as is begin suggested the courts would be allowed to make a settlement based on who the judge feels is the "guilty" party. I am going to oppose the changes. Marriage is a very private matter between two people and it is not possible for a third party to assess blame and decide how much to punish someone for a broken marriage.

We also had bills this week to increase the penalty for leaving the scene of an accident; a bill to allow adopted children to be eligible to inherit from their natural parents, and a bill to promote additional "sting" operations which seek to break up stolen property fencing rings.

The pace is now very fast as the committees are sending more bills to the floor than can be heard each day. The major tax and spending bills are still in the early stages of formation.

Of course, I'll never be too busy to hear from you, my constituents. Feel free to write to me with your viewpoints at 261 State Office Building, St. Paul, MN 55155, or call me at 612-296-4329.

Six-in-one ...one for all.

Notice of Hearing on Petition for Probate of Will and Appointment of Personal Representative in Supervised Administration and Notice to Creditors

STATE OF MINNESOTA
COUNTY OF PENNINGTON
PROBATE COURT
COUNTY COURT—
PROBATE DIVISION

In Re: Estate of Ella B. Steiger, Deceased

TO ALL INTERESTED PERSONS AND CREDITORS:

Notice by publication is hereby given that on the 2nd day of April, 1979, at 9:30 o'clock A.M., a hearing will be held in the above named Court at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, for the probate of an instrument purporting to be the Will of the above named decedent, and for the appointment of Maurice J. Steiger as personal representative of the estate of the above named decedent in supervised administration. That, if proper, and no objections are filed, said personal representative will be appointed to administer the estate, to collect all assets, pay all legal debts, claims, taxes, and expenses, and sell real and personal property, and do all necessary acts for the estate. Upon completion of the administration, the representative shall file a final account for the allowance and shall distribute the estate to the persons thereunto entitled as ordered by the Court, and close the estate.

Notice is further given that ALL CREDITORS having claims against said estate are required to present the same to said personal representative or to the Clerk of the Court within four months after the date of this notice or said claims will be barred.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere thanks to all relatives and friends for kindness and sympathy shown us during the illness and passing away of our loved one. Special thanks to the Marshall County Nursing staff for all their help and concern, the hospital staff at Thief River Falls, the many cards, gifts, flowers and visits received by "Dad" while a patient at the hospital. They brightened each day for him.

A most sincere thank you to those who participated in the funeral service. To Rev. Eveland for his comforting message and help, to the organist and Mr. and Mrs. Stokke for the beautiful music, to the American Legion post no. 427 for their part, to the pallbearers, the ladies aid for serving lunch and to the Collins Funeral home for their kind and courteous service.

Thanks to those who showed their love and concern by bringing food to our homes, to all who sent cards, flowers, memorials and other kind expressions of sympathy. Your thoughtfulness and kindness will always be remembered. Our prayer is that God will richly bless each and every one of you.

COUNTY OF PENNINGTON
PROBATE COURT
COUNTY COURT
PROBATE DIVISION

In Re: Estate of Alvin G. Olson, Deceased.

TO ALL INTERESTED PERSONS AND CREDITORS:

It Is Ordered and Notice is hereby given that on the 19th day of April, 1979, at 2:00 o'clock P.M., a hearing will be held in the above named Court at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, for the adjudication of intestacy and determination of heirship and for the appointment of Arthur Olson whose address is R. 1, Oklee, Minnesota as personal representative of the estate of the above named decedent in supervised administration and any objection thereto must be filed with the court. That, if proper, and no objections are filed, said personal representative will be appointed to administer the estate, to collect all assets, pay all legal debts, claims, taxes, and expenses, and sell real and personal property, and do all necessary acts for the estate. Upon completion of the administration, the representative shall file a final account for the allowance and shall distribute the estate to the persons thereunto entitled as ordered by the Court, and close the estate.

Notice is further given that ALL CREDITORS having claims against said estate are required to present the same to said personal representative or to the Clerk of the Court within four months after the date of this notice or said claims will be barred.

Dated: March 19, 1979.

Dekkers Named Master Sales Award Winner

Willard A. Dekkers of Thief River Falls was among 40 men selected worldwide as a master salesman of 1978 by Monsanto company. He is a sales representative for the company's crop chemicals division, working out of the company's Fargo, N.D., district office.

Master salesman award has been presented for 17 years and is the company's highest recognition of top performance in its worldwide sales organization. Each sales representative selected receives special honors, including a cash award, custom-tailored jacket and plaques commemorating individual achievements for the year.

As part of the program, Dekkers attended two days of conferences at St. Louis headquarters with top company executives and fellow master salesmen from around the world.

Dekkers joined the firm in 1972. He is a graduate of Calvin college with a B.A. degree in sociology received in 1968.

Lt. Governor Will Speak At Bemidji Meet

Lieutenant Governor Lou Wangberg will discuss the legislative progress of this administration's priority tax and education programs Saturday in Bemidji. He will address the I-R Beltrami county convention, to be held at the VFW club in Bemidji at 1:30 p.m.

"Governor Quie and I are optimistic that our efforts, and the efforts of our legislative staff, expedite the movement of our tax and education proposals through the legislature," he said.

"I'm especially pleased that Governor Quie's kindergarten through third grade proposal, recently introduced in the Senate by Senator Douglas H. Sillers, provides $70 million for instruction improvement during early grades. Resources directed at primary levels are resources that will pay for themselves in secondary years.

"With the session well under way, we are also confident about the passage of a tax cut. Impetus of the legislature toward a tax cut indicates recognition of the mandate by the people of Minnesota for tax relief," he added.

Annual SWCD Banquet Set For April 3

Annual cooperator and affiliate membership banquet of the Pennington soil and water conservation district will be held Tuesday, April 3, at 6:30 p.m. in the United Methodist church of Thief River Falls.

A turkey dinner will be followed by a slide program entitled "Deep in the Heart of Africa" presented by Maynard Scilley, state soil scientist. Awards will be given to the conservation farmer, Mr. and Mrs. Doug Peterson, and the farmyard beautification winners, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Miller.

Banquet tickets are $4.50 and may be purchased at the door or by contacting the Pennington soil and water conservation district at 1305 Dale st. in Thief River Falls. Everyone is welcome.

Farmstead shelterbelts help control wind erosion and protect building sites.

Marlo Erickson Named to Who's Who in Music

"Who's Who in Music" for 1978-79 will carry the name of Marlo Erickson from Lincoln senior high school in Thief River Falls. She has been selected as being among the country's most outstanding high school music students.

Douglas Engstrom, instrumental music director, nominated Marlo on her music ability, academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and future potential.

Slow down and live.

Dinner guests Sunday at the Melvin Grinde home in Thief River Falls were Mr. and Mrs. Homer Grinde and Brian God must have known we'd have frustrations. That's why He gave us the capacity to walk away from them. . . even on crutches.

Often in walking away from our frustrations we find ourselves. We discover spiritual depths we never knew we had. Finding oneself is part of the deeper quest — finding God.

We are hot alone. Life is the Creator's gift. To fulfill its potentials we need His help — especially when our own hopes dissolve in disappointment.

Bring your frustrations to church. Learn how to walk away from them with courage and faith.

That man stands mighty straight who has learned to believe in himself . . . and in God.

CAR TELEPHONE

The Wikstrom Telephone Company, Inc. is planning to install mobile telephone service that will cover the area of Kittson, central and eastern Marshall, Roseau, Lake of the Woods, and Pennington counties. This system will be UHF. The service that we install will cover the area as stated above, plus any other area offering UHF. Before a system can be installed, we have to obtain an FCC license and approval of rates from the Minnesota Public Service Commission. Before those can be obtained, it is required that we have signed up enough users to support the system. Anyone interested in mobile telephone service, contact the Wikstrom Telephone Co., Inc., at Karlstad, Minnesota, 436-2121.

Sincerely,
Wikstrom Telephone Co., Inc.

SOME PEOPLE HAVE WAITED SINCE 1946 FOR HOME PRICES TO GO DOWN.
(They're Still Waiting.)

We don't have a crystal ball. And we don't like inflation. But if we had to guess where home prices are going, we'd guess it's in the same direction as the past 30-some years—up.

Our homes offer exceptional value: energy-saving design, quality materials throughout, a number of exclusive features, comfortable floor plans, and handsome good looks.

We offer you two affordable ways to build your home: 1. Have rough-erected, you finish, and 2. Have built completely for you.

And we offer a brand-new 80-page color catalog to show you the 60 single-family homes we offer. It's free.

Call or write today for your copy. The home you buy now may cost more tomorrow. But when it's a Midwestern Home, you know it'll keep its value.

The Smoke Alarm--Fire's Early Warning Signal

A Service Of Underwriters Laboratories Inc.

It doesn't take the scene of utter desolation such as the aftermath of a forest fire for people to realize the destruction that fire can cause.

The mere thought of the damage an unchecked fire in your own home could do to human life and property is usually enough to make even a strong person quake.

Although fire prevention is the best way to protect your family from the terror of fire, fires still occur. Therefore, early detection is the key.

Underwriters Laboratories Inc. (UL), an independent, not-for-profit organization testing for public safety since 1894 believes that the installation of fire detectors in the home is a good investment to protect your family.

A smoke detector is particularly effective in detecting fires in their early stages. Smoke detectors, as their name implies, are designed to detect the presence of smoke particles in the atmosphere. In the early stages of fires, smoke often develops before there is any appreciable increase in temperature, and smoke inhalation is a major cause of fire deaths.

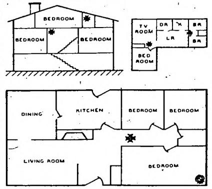
When smoke is sensed, a UL Listed smoke detector will emit a loud audible alarm. The alarm becomes of increased importance when it is realized that a significant percentage of residential fire victims are asleep when fires originate.

For effective protection, smoke detectors should be installed outside each separate sleeping area, and on each additional story of the family living unit.

Maintaining the units in proper working order is crucial. Follow the manufacturer's instructions concerning how and when to clean the unit. As an added safeguard, UL recommends that the detectors be tested weekly. When feasible, it is also recommended that a maintenance contract be obtained with the installer.

Installation of detectors is not the total answer. An emergency evacuation plan for all occupants should also be established and practiced for use in the event that an alarm sounds.

Look for the UL Listed Mark when purchasing a smoke detector. It means that design of the product has met nationally recognized standards.



In a single level home (bottom), a smoke detector (cross) should be located outside the sleeping area. A smoke detector should be provided to protect each sleeping area in multi-level homes (top) or homes where the sleeping areas are separated. In addition, a detector should be placed at the head of the basement stairs.

Rationing: Think About It

Following editorial is from the Christian Science Monitor:

The problem is nobody even likes to think about gas rationing. The public has heard so much talk in recent years about impending oil shortages, while gasoline has continued to flow freely at the pumps, that any unpleasant suggestion that emergency conservation measures and mandatory rationing may become necessary is quickly dismissed as a distasteful topic better put off until tomorrow.

This attitude and the recognition that a national rationing plan will hardly be politically popular are no doubt partly responsible for the Carter administration's regrettable delay in submitting such stand-by provisions for congressional approval. By law, an emergency conservation plan was to have gone to Congress by June, 1976, but the White House is only now completing its work on the measure. The earliest it could be operational would be next fall.

The outlook for speedy acceptance of the Carter plan by Congress is less than reassuring. Members of the Senate subcommittee on energy conservation warn that the contingency proposals will be an explosive issue and that Congress may not approve them. Further delay would seem foolhardy indeed in light of the already reduced oil supply from Iran and the projection of some energy officials that even with a resumption of Iranian oil the US may experience spot fuel shortages this summer.

Compounding the problem is the continuing high demand for gasoline among Americans who, despite the introduction of smaller cars and lower speed limits, are consuming much more fuel today than they were at the time of the Arab embargo in 1973. Major oil companies complain they are having difficulty keeping up with demand, and several have started limiting the amount of gasoline they sell to dealers. This latter move, at least, is a step in the right direction.

Consumers and oil companies alike ought not to wait for a fuel emergency or a mandatory government program to start looking for places where fuel savings can be made. The Carter contingency plan offers some helpful pointers for a start. In addition to rationing gas by coupon, it would require service stations to close on weekends, require managers of large buildings to cut heating and hot water supplies, ban all unessential after-hours lighting in commercial buildings, and require employers to reduce the parking spaces available for employee parking.

To forestall the need for such mandatory measures individual families might also formulate their own home conservation programs. Drivers could help by curbing unnecessary driving and by strictly adhering to the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit. Those states seeking to raise the speed limit to 65 m.p.h. ought to ask themselves whether that would be fair to people in other parts of the country and to their own citizens who might be deprived thereby.

Government-imposed gas rationing is an unpleasant prospect. But it will be an increasingly likely one unless Americans show greater restraint than they have to date.

City Living Handy, But . . .

Ever wonder why people live in the rural areas when the big city is supposed to be filled with so many attractions? Marcia Stockman Koelln of Beresford, N.D., writing a letter to the editor of a farm publication, comes pretty close to summing up the reasons as follows:

Growing up in the country is something a farm kid doesn't really appreciate until she marries and moves off to a city apartment. Then, as she lays in bed at night and hears the neighbors' voices drifting up from the parking lot, she yearns for the noise of frogs croaking down by the pond. She wishes she could listen to the evening whipporwill by night and the bob-white's call by day, instead of the continuous beat of the stereo upstairs.

Sure, the grocery store is within walking distance, but who wants to meditate on the beauty of God's world while walking a cement city block? And it would be a lot more casual to go jogging in view of birds and rabbits than before the eyes of my curious neighbors.

There are no hills to climb, fields to run in, creeks to wade through, fences to scramble over, ponds to fish out, hay mows to play in, horses to ride. Worst of all, we can't walk down to the bridge and lazily toss pebbles at the turtles.

Now the once-burdensome garden that kept Mom's kids busy is considered a luxury. Vegetables picked in the shade of the supermarket simply don't have that juicy, sun-ripened taste that's now almost a memory. Never mind the worms and bugs and weeds; oh, for beans to snap, a bucket of ripe tomatoes. Heaven would be fresh corn on the cob.

Don't misunderstand me — there are advantages to city life. My friends are near me here in town and it's really quite handy. Handy for them to drop by when I decide to sleep late or when my kitchen is filled with unwashed dishes. . .They can usually keep a close tab on what kind of a person I really am.

Some people like city life; it's convenient. Me, I'll live with it until my money tree grows large enough. Then I'll buy a spot of ground in the country where I can hang my wash outside and not worry about my family's holey underwear.

A Cruel Charade

Edward P. Morgan, chief correspondent for a Washington-based group called "In the Public Interest", wrote the following column recently:

I may be wrong and I hope I am but the Carter administration's decision to spend an extra billion, more or less, on reviving civil defense strikes me as a cruel charade, akin to the fiasco of trying to immunize the public against swine flu.

Promotion of air raid shelters was popular in the late 1950s and early 60s, including do-it-yourself basement havens stocked with food and water. There were inspiring manifestations of man's love for man then with a number of householders declaring they would shoot anybody seeking protection in their respective shelters.

The officially-inspired craze subsided with the realization that there was not guaranteed protection against nuclear holocaust and attendant poisoning of the atmosphere with radioactivity. Now, however, the gambit has been revived, pushed forward, apparently, by a curious combination of political and psychological warfare.

It is said the administration hopes its plans will ease the militant conservatives' opposition to the possibly impending agreement on a SALT II treaty, embracing a new phase of arms control between the two superpowers, and that it will also serve as a signal to the Russians that anything they can do (in civil defense) we can do better.

Militant militarists and armchair strategists have been playing dubious games for years with our survivability in a nuclear exchange. Some experts estimate that without an evacuation plan, more than half our 220 million population might perish, whereas with a plan, concentrated on clearing big cities, some 150 million lives might be saved. All such figures are theoretical and even taking the most optomistic, what do they prove? What kind of society would we have with urban centers flattened and nearly half the population dead?

Can you picture the panic in traffic jams as unregimented Americans try to flee the cities? As for impressing the Russians, reliable reports indicate that their own civil defense preparations are exaggerated and that if we went ahead on a major scale it might undermine rather than promote our security — if that's the word — by causing the Kremlin rulers to reason that they had better consider a first strike before we try one.

When I was in China last year I was depressed to discover that the People's Republic was diverting much of its own substance to digging shelters in the big cities. This, officials told me, was to notify the Russians they were ready for anything. But they had no explanation of how shelters could withstand a direct hit or give more than temporary protection against radioactive fallout.

The head of the Pentagon's Defense Civil Preparedness Agency, Bardyl Tirana, is a young, intelligent, flexible civilian who is a far cry from the orthodox bureaucrat. Maybe he can keep the renewed civil defense effort within reasonable bounds but the militant pressures against him will be enormous.

It seems to me that rather than drop a billion or more on a defense plan which is hardly defensible, it would be the better part of wisdom to invest that money in redoubled efforts toward arms reduction and disarmament. To twist a sports maxim, in other words, an all-out offense is the best defense against nuclear holocaust.

Legislative Report
Marv Hanson
District 1 State Senator

The legislative pace steadily continues but I note a different approach to legislative responsibilities this year. I believe that legislators are looking at their proposals and the programs already enacted in a cautious manner. They are being examined very closely to insure that we are responsive to the needs of the people of Minnesota and effective in the delivery of state services.

I believe it is most appropriate that the legislature reflect more on what has been enacted and look very closely at new proposals to fully determine what the impact of them will be. The concerns of Minnesota citizens will be better met if we do so.

This past week, I introduced a bill making transfers between spouses, whether by gift or through inheritance, free from tax. We are all aware of the problems of transferring small businesses and farms and savings built through hard work on to future generations. We all know that the family works together. Past law has been in error with its presumption that spouses do not contribute to the building of a farm, a business, or an estate.

My bill would provide that there would be no tax payable whatsoever in the transfer of assets between spouses. This bill recognizes, especially so, on behalf of wives, that they contributed to their spouses' estates. There is no reason why we should tax what the spouse receives after the long years of work that have been put in.

I'm also working with legislators from other farm areas to strengthen our restrictions against the purchase of farm land by aliens. Minnesota was the first to pass a strict law prohibiting these purchases in 1977. However, we keyed that legislation off what federal legislation and regulations permitted.

We now find that there is no enforcement whatsoever of the federal laws and regulations and that those provisions have permitted certain purchases to continue. We will be introducing legislation which will tighten up our law further. And I shall report on that when we have it completed.

A matter came up wich you may have read about in the papers — the cost overruns on the new maximum security facility in Oak Park Heights is extremely disturbing to me. And I am greatly disappointed in the officials of our corrections department on this. I just cannot understand how they will permit this project to go forward with cost overruns of the extent reported without consulting the governor and the legislature.

Inflation, delay in starting construction, and space changes were cited as causes of the overrun, but they do not fully answer the questions raised. It seems to me that at the first indication that there were going to be overruns, the work should have been halted. It was purely irresponsible to continue on with this program with the likelihood of these overruns coming in. It just results in an additional burden on the taxpayers of Minnesota. We cannot have our state agencies administered in this fashion.

The legislative small business task force reported this past week with several good proposals. The first would be the establishment of a business assistant bureau which would aid small businesses in dealing with government regulations and paper work.

It also recommended a central licensing division of state government. This would provide that businesses could go to one agency to receive whatever licenses are necessary. The report further recommends that the legislature work to reduce the number of licenses necessary to do business in the state of Minnesota.

—A reduction in the corporate tax on the first $50,000 dollar income and the current 12 per cent to six per cent was also proposed in the report. This reduction would aid our small businesses and strengthen the business community of our rural towns. Enactment of these proposals would be of benefit to our rural communities.

If you have comments or questions on these measures, or any other current Minnesota issue, please write me at Room 23J Capitol Building, Saint Paul, Minnesota 55155, or call (612) 296-4835.

Today's Version Of A Classic

When the chef of the famous Waldorf hotel created the classic Waldorf Salad for the opening of the hotel in 1893, the recipe called for equal parts of raw apples and celery, bound with mayonnaise. Since then many variations have been popular, including this version prepared with Jell-O raspberry flavor gelatin. Now, raisins and chopped walnuts are added for texture and crunch in a molded salad for five people to enjoy.

MOLDED WALDORF SALAD

1 package (3 oz.) raspberry flavor gelatin
1 cup boiling water
3/4 cup cold water
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 cup diced peeled apple
1/2 cup thinly sliced celery
2 tablespoons raisins
2 tablespoons chopped walnuts

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add cold water and lemon juice; chill until thickened. Stir in apple, celery, raisins and nuts. Pour into a 2-1/2- or 3-cup mold. Chill until firm, about 3 hours. Unmold. Makes about 2-1/2 cups or 5 servings.

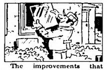
TIPS ON TAXES



Insulation sale! 15% off!

That's the effect of the new income tax credit for home improvements that save energy. Fifteen per cent of the cost up to a total cost of $2,000 may be subtracted from the federal income tax that would otherwise be due. The maximum credit is $300.

The improvements that qualify for the credit include the addition of fiber glass, rock wool, or other insulation, storm windows or doors, caulking, weatherstripping, night setback thermostats, and replacement burners for furnaces or boilers.

If insulation is installed by a contractor, the credit may be taken for the entire cost, labor as well as materials. The credit is based upon the cost of materials for do-it-yourself work.

Renters as well as owners are eligible. The credit is for improvements made to a taxpayer's principal residence, either a house or an apartment but not a vacation home. The dwelling must have been built before April 20, 1977.

Melissa Carlson of Thief River Falls spent the weekend with mother Norma Carlson.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Nelson of Clearbrook were last Thursday afternoon callers at the Melvin Nelson home.

Hilma Drotts Notes Birthday

Wednesday afternoon relatives and friends came to help Hilma Drotts celebrate her birthday at her home. Included in the potluck luncheon was the birthday cake baked by Mrs. Mae Osborne and Hilda Larson. Hilma received many nice cards and gifts as a remembrance of the day. Attending were Alma Drotts of Numedal, Kimberly Hoefer of rural Thief River Falls, Mrs. Mae Osborne, Hilda Larson, Mrs. Ingeborg Beckman, Mrs. Elvira Samuelson, Mrs. Elaine Ranum. Hilma also received three long distance phone calls extending birthday wishes. They were from her sister and brother, Ruth and Albert Drotts of Minneapolis and a niece and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Jake Mizell of So Carolina.

Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Greenly of Dassel came Saturday and spent until Sunday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ida Gustafson.

Town & Country Club Notes 19th Birthday

The Viking Town & Country Garden club met at Lon's in Thief River Falls March 8, where they enjoyed a noon luncheon in honor of the club's 19th birthday. A decorated birthday cake was baked by Mrs. Earl Erickson. A business meeting was held and the members discussed the workshop which will be held at Roseau March 31.

Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Halward Anderson visited with Mrs. Hulda Christianson at her home in Thief River Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Danny Sustad, Dayna and Dawn spent Sunday evening at the Marshall Ness home of Newfolden.

Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Malberg, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Malberg of Thief River Falls visited and were luncheon guests Sunday afternoon at the Egbert Malberg home.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Nelson were coffee guests at the Emil Zavoral home in Thief River Falls on Thursday.

Vows Spoken

Miss Becky Krohn of Viking and Steven Mikkelson of Lake Park exchanged marriage vows at a three o'clock afternoon ceremony at Zion Lutheran church in Viking Saturday, Mar. 10. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Duane Krohn of Viking and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Mikkelson of Lake Park. Following the reception at the church, the newlyweds opened their many lovely wedding gifts at the home of the bride's parents, after which the Krohn's hosted a buffet supper to about 50 relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Jacobson, Tamie and Kim, also Jerry Elberg of Minot, N.D., came Wednesday and were house guests at the Duane Krohn home until Sunday.

Special Notice

There will be a blood pressure and foot clinic to be held at the Viking community center Thursday, March 15, from 1-2 p.m. There will be a charge of $1 for each individual.

Mrs. Audrey Anderson and Mrs. Bonnie Traun attended a home decorating party held at the Lyle Jergenson home in Warren Wednesday evening.

Special Notice

All senior citizens 60 years or older in the Viking area are invited to a social gathering at the Viking community center Wednesday, March 21 at 2 p.m. Come prepared to do your own thing. Lunch will be served at the close of the afternoon.

After the Krohn and Mikkelson wedding Saturday afternoon, visitors at the Mrs. Ida Gustafson home were Mr. and Mrs. Donovan Olson, Jill and Troy of Warroad, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Krohn of Williams, and Mr. and Mrs. Dany Ekre of Shevland.

Birthday

Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Swenson of Viking, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Swenson and family of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bergeron and Kristi of Argyle were supper guests at the Edward Bjorgaard home in honor of their son, Russel's fifth birthday.

Birthday

Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Samuelson, Kristi and Lowell of Brookings, S.D., came Saturday, March 3, and were guests at the Arne Samuelson home until the following Tuesday. Sunday, March 4, Mr. and Mrs. Arne Samuelson, Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Samuelson, Kristi and Lowell, together with other guests, were afternoon and supper guests at the Earl Hoefer home of rural Thief River Falls. The occasion was to celebrate Kim Hoefer's fourth birthday. Kim had two birthday cakes and received several cards and many nice gifts making it a very special occasion.

Birthdays

A birthday party was given for Mrs. Wallace Hanson at her home Saturday afternoon. The birthday cake was baked by her aunt, Hilda Larson. Coming to help her celebrate were Mrs. Percy Stokke of Newfolden, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gustafson, Hilda Larson, Mrs. John Gustafson, Jan and Sandy.

Sunday the March birthdays of the Gustafson family were celebrated at the Larry Gustafson home of Thief River Falls honoring their daughter Stacy and Mrs. Wallace Hanson. The one o'clock birthday dinner was co-hosted by Mrs. Larry Gustafson and Mrs. Wallace Hanson. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Hanson, Jan, Nancy and Ann, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gustafson, Mr. and Mrs. John Gustafson, Julie, Scot, Jan and Sandy and Hilda Larson of Viking, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Brinkman, Billy and David of Crookston, Mr. and Mrs. LeWayne Gustafson, Chad and Jeremy, Mr. and Mrs. Kent Hudson of Grand Forks, Dean Johnson of Newfolden, Mrs. Margaret Pederson, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Gustafson, Stacy, Susan and Tony of Thief River Falls. In the afternoon, lunch was served featuring two birthday cakes which had been baked by Mrs. Wallace Hanson and Mrs. Larry Gustafson.

Birthday

Mrs. Florence Drotts was honored for her birthday on Sunday when relatives came to her home in Thief River Falls to help celebrate the occasion. A decorated birthday cake centered the candlelighted table and a potluck supper was served. Those attending were Clarence Tangquist, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Grandstrand of Viking, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Glaude of Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Linder, Theadore, Marsha, Jennifer and Ann of Plummer, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tangquist, Jason and Mark, Mrs. Myrtle Sackett, Mr. and Mrs. Rodger Sackett and Ronica, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Peters of Thief River Falls, Mrs. Rita Galliher of Moorhead. Florence received many lovely cards and gifts to remember the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Swenson left on an extended vacation January 11. They drove to Longmont, Colo., where they visited with Mrs. Swenson's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Norbert Nowacki over the weekend. Monday they drove to Las Vegas, Nev., spending a day and then going on to Los Angeles, Calif. There they visited with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Swenson at Burbank and with Mr. and Mrs. Morris Swenson at Arleta, spending ten days visiting there. There was snow on the ground all the way until they were almost in Los Angeles. They spent one day seeing Disneyland, along with a lot of other sight seeing. The 30th of January, they drove to Mesa, Ariz., where they were joined by Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Nowacki from Argyle. Mrs. Nowacki is Mrs. Swenson's sister. While at Mesa they visited with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Olson from Viking, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Elseth from Newfolden, Mr. and Mrs. Milford Anderson of Warren, also the Lewis Haugs, Otto Haugs and the Paul Haugs, all of Grafton, N.D. The Dale Haug family of St. Cloud, the Swensons and the Nowackis returned home March 8 at the John Nowacki home at Fargo, N.D. Friday the Swenson's drove to Grand Forks and got to see their new grandson that was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Swenson on the 12th of February. The Swensons are glad to be back but would like it a lot better if there was a lot less snow as they had to spend Friday night at the Charles Swenson's home as the road was blocked to their place.

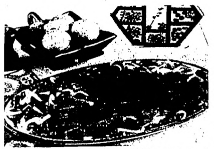
Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Skjerven of Viking, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Skjerven and Kurt of Newfolden and Mrs. Myrtle Sackett of Thief River Falls were entertained to Sunday dinner at the home of Mrs. Alice Swanson in Thief River Falls.

Keith Grandstrand, Jeremy and Jason also Angie and Stacy Sinn of Thief River Falls spent Saturday evening at the Melvin Grandstrand home.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Halvorson, Yvette, Kent and Rebecca of Barnsville came Friday and spent over the weekend at the Mrs. Hannah Halvorson home. Also there overnight Friday was Danny Halvorson. Other callers on Saturday included Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Halvorson, Jeff and Janene of Thief River Falls, Mrs. Gene Halvorson, Danny, Nancy and Mark.

Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Olson of Thief River Falls visited at the Gene Nelson home.

Mrs. Clara Hanson visited and was a coffee guest at the Mrs. Ida Gustafson home Thursday afternoon.



CHOOSE BEEF CHUCK BLADE STEAK to cut back on cost without cutting back on flavor or nutrition.

A careful survey of the meat counter shows that even with the overall rise in beef prices, there are still economical beef buys. Beef blade steak is a delicious example of how you can continue to put beef on your table without upsetting the budget.

You'll recognize this beef steak as simply a thinner version of the popular blade roast or 7-bone pot-roast. Although cut from the less tender chuck section, blade steak will be tender and tasty when slowly braised in a small amount of liquid, says the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

This is an especially flavorful entree featuring beef blade steak.

Braised Beef Steak and Beans

Brown 1 beef blade steak, cut ¾ inch thick, in 2 tablespoons cooking fat. Pour off drippings. Combine 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon sugar, ⅛ teaspoon pepper and ⅛ teaspoon savory; sprinkle half over meat. Add ¼ cup water, cover tightly and cook slowly 45 minutes. Turn meat; sprinkle with remaining seasonings. Add 1 can (16 ounces) drained red or pinto beans, 1½ cups julienne strips celery and 1 sliced onion; cook slowly, covered, 30 minutes. Stir in 1 large green pepper, cut in 1-inch pieces, and cook 15 minutes or until meat and vegetables are tender. 4 to 6 servings.

WASHINGTON EVENTS AFFECTING OUR COMMUNITY

Our savings could mean more if our legislators let an airline do more.

A number of concerned congressmen and senators are working on ways to help protect the public against erosion in the value of our savings.

One way they've found is to permit the merger of two highly efficient U.S. airlines, one primarily in the domestic travel business, the other carrying people overseas.

Each of these airlines is an efficient operation that is known to serve its passengers well. Together, experts say, they will be able to serve the country well.

If National Airlines and Pan Am are permitted to merge, the new airline will be far more competitive, and that translates into lower fares and better service for the flying public. Since Pan Am and National have many common airport stations, linking the two can save space at airports, and since both carriers have small work forces, there will be jobs for all current employees, plus opportunities for new jobs.

In addition, the New Pan Am will be able to compete more effectively with foreign flag carriers and so attract more tourism via a U.S. flag carrier, improving our balance of payments.

Many people curious as to where their legislators stand on this issue are writing their senators at the U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510, and their congressmen and women at the U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515.

Plummer

Mrs. Walter C. Peterson, Plummer, 465-3415

Legion Birthday Party

Saturday evening the Plummer American Legion Auxiliary Unit 623 entertained for the Legion's 60th birthday for all Legionaires and Auxiliary members and their partners with a potluck supper being served after a social hour. Mrs. Roger Skjerven welcomed the guests and 9th District Commander Robert Reeve and his wife who is 9th District Vice President spoke briefly and thanked the Unit for inviting them to attend. Commander Art Hanson also thanked the unit in behalf of the Legion Post members. A decorated birthday cake was served at the close of the dinner, after which a hilarious program "The History of Plummer" was given with Mrs. Floyd Hesse as Master of Ceremonies. As Plummer is celebrating its 75 year anniversary scenes were of the first settlers coming here for land, school room scenes, barn dance with lanterns and the latest disco dancing, Shirley Temple dancing, and best of all a mock wedding. Various business places were mentioned and some good jokes. Those participating were Diane Grinde, Doris Malwitz, Vickie Hesse, Crystal Martell, Diana Simpson, Jolayne Simpson, Connie Malwitz, Brenda Hesse, Alma Hanson, Art Hanson, Polly Skjerven, Jodi Malwitz, Nancy Jo Hesse, Rosemary Eskeli. "What" And "Why" Of Burial Vaults

The burial vault provides positive protection for the casket.

Ask the average American what a burial vault is, and you will probably end up with some divergent . . . and surprising . . . responses. Yet, traditionally, Americans have chosen underground burial as their preference for final disposition, and the burial vault (like the casket) is an important part of the burial process and traditional funeral service, offering an added measure of consolation for many families.

What is a burial vault? Very simply, a burial vault is an outer burial receptacle that receives the casket. Most cemeteries require some form of outer burial receptacle that will withstand the weight of the earth above it, principally for routine upkeep of the grave. The minimum outer burial receptacle, called a grave box, is an unsealed enclosure, usually of concrete, with a base and a cover. The most commonly accepted form of outer burial receptacle, however, is the burial vault, which provides sealed protection for the casket.

The quality burial vault, according to David E. Lawson, Director of Research for Wilbert, a Broadview, Illinois-based licensor of burial vaults, is a hermetically-sealed unit that protects against water and the elements. Burial vaults are made from various materials including metal and plastic. Wilbert burial vaults are constructed of high strength concrete and weigh in excess of one ton each; a special sealing design and compound merges the base and cover of each burial vault to form an airtight unit.

Protective features aside, burial vaults can be quite striking visually, too, and are available in a wide variety of styles, colors, and design features. Wilbert brand name burial vaults, for instance, employ a liner which is bonded to the inner concrete surface; lining materials include copper and stainless steel. A new molded plastic liner—called Marbelon—resembles Venetian marble.

For many people, their first introduction to a burial vault comes without warning. When a family member or friend dies, responsibilities often fall on the unexperienced. During this particular time of need, the competent, professional experience of the local funeral director becomes most important. The funeral director will familiarize the family with the funeral service, providing detailed information concerning the selection of the casket and the burial vault. Besides assisting families in planning appropriate funeral service arrangements, he or she is also experienced in handling related matters such as Social Security and Veterans' benefits.

Wilbert offers a free booklet entitled "FACTS every family should know," which details, in straightforward language, information families will find helpful at the time of a death in the family or of a friend. For a free copy, write Wilbert, P.O. Box 147 N. Forest Park, IL 60130.

"Everybody is Somebody in Thief River Falls"

Published Twice A Week

THIEF RIVER FALLS TIMES

Volume 68 (USPS 627-360) Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota Monday, March 26, 1979 Number 25

FROSTED PUMPKIN is this tiny skater from the cast of the Thief River Falls recreational skating association's ice revue to be presented Saturday and Sunday in the local sports arena. She huddled with her dad for warmth and reassurance during a photo session for ice revue skaters on Thursday. Jack O'Lantern outfits are among the many costumes created for the show which has the general theme, "Most Wonderful Times of the Year".

NOT SO HAPPY New Year is KayeLynn Wagner, three-year-old performer in the Thief River Falls recreational skating association's ice show. Her apprehension was caused by the close proximity of Father Time, to be skated in the show by Dr. Charles Samuelson. A large number of acts will be presented at the show to display the skating talents of the many skaters participating in the recreational skating program. "Most Wonderful Times of the Year" is the general theme for the ice show to be presented Saturday and Sunday.

Attempting The Impossible

Linda Worth Influence Felt In Skating Show

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

"To achieve all that is possible we must attempt the impossible — To be as much as we can be, we must dream of being more."

These words from a poster on the wall of the Roger Worth home comprise one of the "crutches" which Mrs. Roger (Linda) Worth claims she needs once in awhile. When things aren't going entirely the way she would like them to go, Linda goes to the mottos and quotes she has received as gifts for renewal of purpose.

When the annual ice show of the Thief River Falls recreational skating association is presented Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon at the Thief River Falls sports arena, the influence of Linda Worth will be on display. If it is not exhibited directly in the form of the students she teaches — which it will be in part of the show — it will be there because of the persistence, patience and insistence she has put forth in behalf of the program.

Mrs. Worth expects to leave this community in the near future. He husband has been named president of Scorpion Industries at Crosby and the family will make its home in that area. The scope of her interest in skating will likely continue to be felt here for some time to come, however, as she goes on to teach in the Brainerd program.

Linda professes a love affair with the Thief River Falls community, a place where she says feels more like home than anywhere else she has ever lived. She says that people of this area, from adults down through the younger children, have a sense of appraciation which is a precious human value.

"Many of them have been through difficult times and they don't take anything for granted," she said. "They express their appreciation for everything and they expect nothing to be given to them without effort. I think the reason our skaters here excel to the extent that they do is that they don't realize they can't do the things they are doing. They don't believe in things being impossible so they go ahead and make them happen. Our skaters are attracting widespread attention for their development in just five short years."

Mrs. Worth said that it has long been her belief that basic testing is the backbone of an effective skating program. She has worked to develop the local system to the point where the basic testing can be run locally without the expense of bringing in outside judges. As she prepares to leave the community, "that goal has almost arrived.

"Our present skating program has been highly

GUEST PERFORMER in the Thief River Falls recreational skating association's ice revue Saturday and Sunday will be Gary Knox, a native of Miami, Manitoba, and a student at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks. Knox has been a skating professional for the local association this year and will be teaching in the program here next year.

ASC Set-Aside Program Can Help Farmers

On February 15, the Pennington county agricultural stabilization and conservation service (ASCS) began accepting applications for the 1979 wheat and feed grain program. Harold Kalsnes, chairman of the ASC committee, said the program gives farmers the opportunity to adjust their grain production and increase the price they will get for it.

"The importance of farmers using the program cannot be over-emphasized," Kalsnes said. "Strong participation is necessary to begin balancing supply with demand so that the market will pay a profitable price. Producers need to participate to reduce the ending stocks of grain and strengthen the market.

"Farmers cannot look at the program solely in terms of immediate cash. They should also take a longer-range view. This is the only way we can bring long-term adjustment in grains," he said.

Producers who sign up agree to take out of production one acre for every 10 planted in 1979 to corn or two acres of every 10 planted to wheat and barley; and reduce the crop acreage by this set-aside amount.

Program benefits include price support loans on all eligible commodities produced, deficiency and disaster payments for barley, corn and wheat on the participating farm. "The program is voluntary," Kalsnes said, "however, farmers must file their intentions to participate during the signup period to be eligible for program benefits." The signup period will be conducted until April 30.

TRFalls Group Formed For Abused Women

A group has been formed in Thief River Falls for women in the area who have been or are now experienceing abuse. Sponsors of the group are women who have been victimized in the past and have found remedies for their particular situations.

Group members may include women who have experienced verbal abuse, slapping, beating or rape. The next meeting will be tonight (Monday) at 7:30 p.m. Amyone wishing to attend should call or write Doris Heroff, Box 8, St. Hilaire, MN

Quevedo Found Not Guilty In District Court

District court jury in Pennington county district court Wednesday found Anthony Quevedo not guilty on a charge of attempted second degree murder. He was released the same day from the Pennington county law enforcement center where he had been held in lieu of bond prior to the trial.

Quevedo had been charged in a stabbing incident on Main avenue in Thief River Falls late in 1978. Trial of the case before Judge Robert Peterson began Tuesday morning and the jury returned the not guilty verdict at 5:10 p.m. Wednesday after about two and one-half hours of deliberation.

Workshop To Be Offered On Sales Skills

Sales technique workshop will be offered through the adult education department of the Thief River Falls AVTI April 10 and 17. The workshop will be led by AVTI sales and marketing instructor, Dave Lysaker, with both sessions running from 7 to 10 p.m.

Cost of the workshop is $5

Four Programs On Cancer Set At Northland

Four programs on "The Nature of Cancer", covering what it is, how to recognize a suspicious condition, how it spreads, the why of getting it to treatment early and how it is treated, are scheduled for April 3, 5, 10 and 12 from 7 to 8 p.m. in room B37 of Northland community college.

Two programs on breast cancer are scheduled for April 3 and 5 from 8 to 9 p.m. Nurses from the county nurses office will be present to instruct breast self-examination to all those wishing this instruction. Dr. Earl Dagg or one of his associates from Northwestern hospital services radiology department will cover other methods used in diagnosis, such as mammography and thermography, when these are employed and how they are used safely.

Two programs on uterine and ovarian cancer will be conducted April 10 and 12 from 8 to 9 p.m.

Cancers of the mouth, throat and lung will be covered April 17 and again April 19 from 7 to 8 p.m., with colon and rectal cancer discussed from 8 to 9 p.m.

There will be one program on other less common cancers such as leukemia and Hodgkins disease, from 7 to 8 p.m. on April 24. A doctor will be present.

The last program of the series, "How to Protect Yourself Against Cancer", will be a summary of the methods of detection along with a film showing cancer examinations as done in the doctor's office. A doctor will be present to answer questions.

Some of the programs are being repeated to give more people a chance to work this instruction in with their other schedules. They are one hour programs and can be taken any way that it works out best for the individual. All instruction is free.

"Each year the month of April is designated by the Congress as cancer control month in an effort to make everyone aware of the importance of the need to be alert in regard to this disease," according to William Vollan, Pennington county cancer society chairman.

"We, ourselves, play a very important part in the cure of cancer. We live with our bodies every day of the year. If we have an understanding of the disease and its early symptoms, we can call a suspicious indication to the attention of our doctor and have it checked out.

"In spite of the great strides that have been made in cancer treatment in the last few years, early recognition and treatment still remain the most important part of the whole process leading to its cure," Vollan said.

Striker Says Teachers Face Issue In Strike

COMMUNITY COLLEGES MEA/NEA ON STRIKE

PROFESSIONALISM is at stake in the strike by community college faculty members against the state of Minnesota, according to Tom Johnson, member of the Northland community college faculty in Thief River Falls. He is shown talking to a student on the picket line at Northland.

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Tom Johnson is a third generation teacher out of the union-oriented community of International Falls who believes the members of his chosen profession haven't been treated as professionals and that money is more of a symbol than it is an issue.

Tom Johnson is a first year faculty member at Northland community college, filling in for Tyrone Birkeland during the latter's year of sabbatical leave. He is committed to teaching by virtue of years of study and current work being done on a thesis for his doctorate. It is painful for him, he says, not to teach.

Yet Tom Johnson puts in duty time on the picket line at Northland community college as he participates in a strike he openly admits having voted to help create. In so doing, he encourages students to stay away from school and discourages non-striking employees from going to work. These are things a picket does.

But he does them out of a sense of what he believes is right in the long run for teachers and in an attempt to help right a wrong which he feels has been done to the teaching profession.

"I can see the situation getting around to that point where people can't afford to get into teaching any more," he said, noting that his grandfather left teaching because it didn't provide him with a living and his father went from teaching into administration for the same reason.

"I'm not going to claim that we are underpaid or anything," he said, "but I do feel that my reason for going out on strike is a professional reason. Despite the fact that I am only here for a year, I would like to be a teacher. I would like to break that family string of having to leave the profession because I can't afford to live in it."

Johnson says that he feels the way the bargaining has been done by the state has resulted in teachers not being treated as professionals. "Regardless of what profession you choose, you have to believe that it has a certain amount of stature.

Faculty Viewpoint:

Instructor Says Strike Followed Anguished Hours

(Editor's Note: Because a public opinion letter expressing the student viewpoint in regard to the faculty strike against Minnesota community colleges began on the front page of last Wednesday's Times, this letter from faculty member John Steidl is being given comparative consideration.)

-To-the-Editor:

After reading accounts of the MCCFA strike efforts and their effects in Wednesday's paper I am prompted to respond.

If there was any intention of offering a balanced picture, the combined presentation fell short. The total effect of the three articles was to show striking faculty, as usual, as selfish and short-sighted makers of waves.

Ignoring the issues and principals, economic and political, I would like to respond on a human and personal level. The impression seems to be that the faculty members participating in the strike simply got up and walked out in a fit of pique. More to the point, nearly all the faculty have families, people dependent upon the faculty person's job and continued income.

I want everyone to be aware of the anguished hours of debate and indecision that each of us alone and all of us together went through before we decided to strike. We have put our jobs, our futures, the futures of our families and our continued residence in a community we have come to consider our home, on the line. A person does not lightly consider throwing away all they have and all they have made.

In addition, many of us arrived together to begin work in the third floor of old Lincoln at Thief River Falls State

School Projects Phone Savings

NEW TELEPHONE SYSTEM has been installed in the Thief River Falls school district service center to replace equipment which was beginning to give trouble. Receptionist and switchboard operator Kathy Hanson is shown with the new computerized switching equipment. Installation of the new equipment is projected to save the district approximately $70,000 over a 10-year period.

Installation of a new telephone system for School District 564 in Thief River Falls is expected to save the district approximately $70,000 over a 10-year period, according to Harry Nelson, business manager for the district.

The new computerized equipment is the latest available in the Northwestern Bell system, according to a spokesman for that company, and projected cost savings to Northwestern Bell through reduced maintenance are being passed along to the school district. Not only will the anticipated hours of service time be reduced, but cost of repairs for the new system is considerably less than for the former system, the telephone spokesman said.

School District 564 will spread cost of the installation ($13,748.35) over a 60-month period and will be able to pay for the installation out of capital outlay funds, Nelson said.

Under the 60-month contract the school district will pay $2,224.15 per month for telephone service — a reduction of nearly $200 per month from the rate of $2,442.60 paid for the former

Annual Meeting Of RL Electric Co-op Planned

Red Lake Electric Cooperative will hold its 41st annual meeting Wednesday, April 4 in the Municipal auditorium in Thief River Falls.

President of the board, Raymond Parnow, will preside over the meeting. Beside the regular business session consisting of election of three directors for three-year terms on the board there will be reports of the officers, entertainment, registration favors, prizes and a free lunch after the meeting.

Capital credit payments will be made to those who earned credits in the year 1965. Also, capital credit assignments for the year of 1978 will be available at the desk. The cash payment to be made at this time is 50 per cent of the balance of the year 1965 which will amount to approximately $50,000. We encourage and urge early registration to pick up capital credit checks or assignments for 1978.

Member registration will begin at 10 a.m. with free coffee and doughnuts served at this time. Musical entertainment will be furnished from 12:30 to 1 p.m. by the Paul Mutnansky family band. Official meeting with all the members will be called to order at 1 p.m. to vote on directors, receive reports and other business matters that pertain to the operation of the coopertive. Local entertainment and presentations are scheduled for the afternoon along with the business session.

The board of directors and officers of the cooperative are Raymond Parnow, president; Richard Weiss, vice-president; Millard Dailey, secretary-treasurer; Lanis Karel, Helmer Lind, Norman Dufault, Robert Olson, Verner Arveson, and Veral Mosbeck. Charles M. Kleven is the cooperative manager and Jaroslav Kruta is the cooperative attorney

Valerie Lorenson And Dean Rokke Vows Spoken

Marriage vows were exchanged Saturday, March 3, at the First Lutheran church in Middle River by Valerie Kay Lorenson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lorenson of Middle River, and Dean Scott Rokke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orvald Rokke of Newfolden.

Rev. Donald Fredine officiated at the double ring ceremony before an altar graced with potted white mums. Approximately 150 relatives and friends were in attendance. Mrs. Dan Geer, a friend of the bride's family, was the organist. She played the traditional wedding marches and during the ceremony, she sang "The Wedding Song" "The Lord's Prayer," and "Sunrise, Sunset" was sung by the Jesus Style Singers, a First Lutheran musical group, of which the bride had been a member.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her step-father and given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a floor-length gown, designed in simple lines with a matching train. The molded bodice featured long, fitted sleeves with flared cuffs, a scooped neckline and empire waistline, all edged with a dainty lace in daisy pattern. Her veil of bridal illusion was held by a cap-styled headpiece. She carried a cascade of five yellow roses accented with white feathered carnations and greenery. Her love-knot necklace was a gift from the groom.

The bride's personal attendant was Nancy Peterson of Badger.

Maid of honor was Patty Sorter, Middle River, a friend of the bride. Kim Rokke, a sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. They wore pastel blue floor-length gowns with lace edged, square necklines, inset yokes and full skirts with ruffled hemlines. In their hair, they wore a small floral cluster, corresponding with the yellow mini-mums and blue carnations in their nosegay bouquets.

Kara Gram, Middle River, a cousin of the bride, served as flower girl. Her gown, similar to those worn by the bride's attendants, was of pastel blue with white lace trim. She carried a basket filled with button mums and carnations. Michael Rokke, Newfolden, a cousin of the groom, carried the rings on a white satin pillow.

Todd Swenson, Newfolden, attended the groom as best man. Serving as groomsman was Orin Olson, Middle River, a friend. The ushers were Joel Olson, a friend of the groom, and Mike Lorenson, a brother of the bride. Both reside at Middle River. All the men of the wedding party, together with the ring bearer, wore light blue tuxedos with navy blue velvet trim, and navy blue bow ties. Their white boutonnieres, tipped in blue, accented their white ruffled shirts, edged in blue. The groom's boutonniere was a single yellow rose.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Lorenson wore a floor-length gown of deep aqua blue with a sheer matching cape. Mrs. Rokke was attired in a burgundy polyester A-line gown. Their identical corsages were white feathered carnations complented by a solitary yellow rose accented with gold striped ribbon.

Honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. Gust Qualey, Middle River, grandparents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Rokke, Warren, grandparents of the groom.

A reception in the church parlors followed the ceremony. Host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Keith Gram, uncle and aunt of the bride. Tracey Lorenson registered the guests. Punch was served by Robbie Lorenson and Jan Qualey as Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Haugen, great-uncle and aunt of the bride, arranged the gifts.

Highlighting the serving table was a wedding cake, baked and decorated by the groom's aunt, Mrs. Arne Tuura. The red wedding cake was iced in white, decorated with flowers in the bridal theme, and topped with a miniature bride and groom ornament. The cake was cut and served by Mrs. Leo Grochow and Mrs. Arnold Lorenson, aunts of the couple. Mrs Howard Langlie and Mrs Sheldon Qualey poured.

Waitresses at the bridal table were Kim Skoglund, Becky Jesme, Dawn Anderson, Vicki McKeever, Terri Burda and Lynnae Ness. Friends of the bride's family were in charge of the kitchen.

The couple will make their home on a farm west of Newfolden. The groom is employed by the American Crystal company, Drayton, N.D. Photo, Middle River Record.

Homemakers Of Rocksbury Make Fake Flowers

Rocksbury homemakers group met recently at the Oakland Park Nursing home with Bea Erickson and Gina Gunderson as hostesses.

The lesson, "Drying Flowers," was given by Julia Finstad and Dolly Mead. During the craft period, artificial flowers were made using burlap, styrofoam, yarn and fabrics. Silk roses were also assembled from materials in a kit.

On display was a quilt made by some of the members and donated to Oakland Park Nursing home. It was noted that the quilt will be used for a money-making project with proceeds to go for items wanted by the residents.

Door prizes were won by Hildur Lian and Inga Geving.

Present at the meeting were fourteen members and two guests: Mrs. Olsgaard of Moorhead and Mrs. DuChamp of Thief River Falls.

Hanson Places In District Competition

Second place winner in the district one business and professional women's (BPW) club young career woman competition Saturday was the Thief River Falls contestant, Lorna Hanson. Lorna advanced to the district competition, held at Crookston in conjunction with the BPW spring conference, after winning the local contest March 13. Hanson is employed as jail coordinator for the Pennington county sheriff's department.

Thief River Falls was one of four district one BPW member clubs to enter a contestant in the young career woman competition. The candidates were judged on past accomplishments, a personal interview with three judges, participation in a group interaction session and on a prepared speech on the topic, "Threshhold to New Horizons."

For her participation in the district contest Lorna received a certificate of recognition and should the first place winner be unable to compete in the state young career woman competition, Hanson would take her place.

KITCHEN KARNIVAL

Featuring recipes from the Kitchen of

Mrs. John Tofte
Route 2
Thief River Falls

Taco Salad

- 1 head lettuce
- 1 lb. hamburger, browned
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 3 tomatoes, chopped
- 12 oz. pkg. grated cheddar cheese
- 7 oz. pkg. taco flavored doritos chips, crumbled
- 8 oz., bottle wishbone California onion dressing
- ½ cup green peppers, chopped.

Method: Brown hamburger until crumbly, and drain well. Tear lettuce into bite size pieces. Combine all ingredients, and toss, seasoning with salt and pepper.

This salad may be made ahead of time. However do not add the doritos or salad dressing until serving as doritos will become soggy.

The Toftes reside on route two with their children, Heidi, nine, and Aaron, 8. They are members of St. Bernard's Catholic church. Mrs. Tofte (Nancy) stated that she was involved in a number of activities. During her spare time she enjoyes macrame, needle point, knitting, cross country skiing, and swimming.

Tofte is president of Brodin Sheet Metal, Inc.

Library Week Book And Author Dinner Slated

Plans for the first national library week book and author dinner have been announced by the librarians of Thief River Falls, sponsors of the event.

Featured speaker will be Art Lee, author of "Lutefisk Ghetto; Life in a Norwegian-American Town" and professor of history at Bemidji state university.

The dinner will take place Saturday, April 7 at 6:30 p.m. at Zion Lutheran church in Thief River Falls. Tickets are $5 and must be purchased by April 4. Menu includes meatballs, potatoes and gravy as well as such Norwegian favorites as lefse and fruit soup.

Tickets may be purchased from any of the librarians: Julie Anne Chase, Thief River Falls public library; Judy Rosetta, Northland community college librarian; Martin Keegan, elementary school librarian; Jane Oberg, Franklin middle school; and Virgil Burger, Lincoln high school.

More information can be obtained by calling the Northwest regional library at 681-4325.

Town Talker Gives Advice On Crank Calls

Best way to handle crank phone calls is to hang up on the callers before they have a chance to hook you, Char Niemann, Northwestern Bell telephone company service representative of Detroit Lakes, suggested in a talk to the Thief River Falls senior citizen group. Niemann is a member of the Town Talkers, the company's volunteer speakers bureau.

Niemann explained that the crank caller thrives on the excitement, anger and apprehension of the victim.

"Don't give these cranks the opportunity to hook you. As soon as you recognize this call as being unusual, hang up. If the caller persists and calls a second, third and fourth time, continue to hang up immediately," Niemann urged.

The telephone company representative contended that in the majority of cases, hanging up quickly will discourage the crank caller, but admitted that it isn't always that easy. If a threat is made, Niemann said, the police should be notified. If obscene or nuisance calls persist, the telephone company should be called.

"The telephone company will, at your request, do all it can reasonably do to cooperate with authorities in apprehending such offenders," Niemann stated.

Senior citizens were informed that the telephone company has technical procedures to cope with such calls, and in a good percentage of cases the calls are being tracked to their origin.

Offer Senior Citizens Help With Forms

Help will be provided for senior citizens in filling out forms for a property tax refund Wednesday, March 28, and Thursday, March 29. Persons will be on hand from 9 a.m. at 12 noon Wednesday and from 1 to 4 p.m. Thursday in the city auditorium meeting room to aid senior citizens in applying for a refund.

Senior citizens may be eligible for a refund whether they pay property tax or rent. When coming to apply for a refund property owners should bring proof of income and a property tax statement and renters will need proof of income and a certificate of rent paid (CRP) form filled in by the landlord.

Present Awards At 4-H Leader Council Meeting

Awards were presented to county club members at the March 4-H leader's council meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Stucy of the Deer Park area presented a $50 scholarship to Jeri Lundin. Jeri is a freshman at Northland community college planning to go into home economics-foods. She was a Happy Acres 4-H member for 10 years in foods, clothing, home environment and photography projects and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Lundin.

Stucy food science scholarship is given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Stucy by their daughter, Faye, for all the help and encouragement they gave her during her 4-H years. Faye was a Deer Park 4-H'er during the 60's excelling in foods and public speaking. Now she is teaching food and nutrition at California state university in Chico.

The "I Dare You" award was presented to Lee Furuseth of the City View 4-H and Janeen Rooker of the New Solum 4-H. They were picked by the county 4-H awards committee. Award is given to young people who have demonstrated qualities of constructive leadership, excellence in character, and personal development.

Awards are given by the American Youth foundation in memory of William Danforth who had a strong belief in and investment in the youth of this nation. Lee, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Furuseth, is a 10 year 4-H member who had had main interests in leadership and gardening. Janeen, also a 10 year 4-H member and the dauther of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Rooker, has concentrated in leadership and foods. Both are freshmen at Northland college and currently enrolled in 4-H.

Local Students To Attend Model U.N. Assembly

Selected to represtnt Lincoln high school at the model United Nations assembly in Winnipeg, Manitoba April 5-7 are Danica Bergland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bergland, and Joel Hallstrom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Hallstrom. The event is held annually by the Winnipeg Rotary Club with the local Rotary sponsoring the Lincoln student representatives. Darwin Boutiette, social science instructor, will accompany the students to the assembly which will be held at the Red River Valley community college in Winnipeg.

Purpose of the assembly is to give students first hand experience in the workings of the United Nations, to establish an understanding and acceptance of the responsibility of the individual citizen for the success of the U.N. and to help the students better understand the U.N. as an instrument for world peace. The model assembly provides each student with an opportunity to examine their nation's foreign policy and to become more familiar with the workings of other nations.

Bergland and Hallstrom have been assigned to represent the country of Hungary and must work with foreign policies that concert the apartheid in Namibia and, nuclear disarmament (creating an international commission). The two Lincoln students are preparing amendments to proposed resolutions and will present them, acting as Hungarians.

Approximately 400 students, representing 153 schools, are expected to be in attendance at the three-day event.

County 4-Hers Demonstrate Favorite Foods

Everything from "Monster Cookies" to "Rabbit 'n Gravy" was exhibited by 4-H members at the favorite food show held recently at the Thief River Falls city auditorium.

Members chose a favorite recipe, prepared the food item and planned a menu around the food item, then exhibited the food together with an appropriate place setting and centerpiece at the food show. Entrants were judged on their food item, menu and table setting, and how much they knew about the preparation of their food item and the importance of nutritious food.

Some 4-H'ers chose to give working demonstrations where they showed preparation and uses of their food items. Ruth Dobias and Lynn Mosbeck of Black River showed crepe making, Melodee Rupprecht of Silverton showed the use of a microwave oven, Kim Battleson and Penny Jorde of Silverton made corn dogs, Pam Bjerken and Mary Courneya of Steiner made pancakes, and Collette Thune and Gretchen McEwen of Happy Acres made crepes.

Other 4-H'ers that took part included Julie and Roy Dobias, Joni Mosbeck, Craig Erickson, Kyle Kisch and Edna Johnson of Black River; Maria Edington, Stephanie Dagen and Coreen Larson of City View; Dale Lundeen and Arlan Hofstad of Deer Park; Todd and Troy Carlson, Tamara Alberg and Susie and Jackie Thune of Happy Acres; Bonita Johnson, Jodie Seaverson and Thomas Mickelson of Kratka;

Also Kay Lynn Kainz of Mavie; Janeen Rooker and Cheryl Van Horn of New Solum; Jennifer Westlin, Danielle Anderson and Brenda Senum of Papa Bear; Kimberly Carlson of Satellite; Kristi Rupprecht, Lisa and Lana Wagner, Julie and Susan Peterson, Debbie and Karen Langenfeld and Sue Spengler of Silverton; Kristine Sorteberg, Peggy Hamre and Faye Erickson of Smiley; Debra and Joni Courneya, Tami Jorde, Larueen Muzzy and Monica Rausch of Steiner.

Dr. David Brown of Goodridge will chair the rules committee with Dr. Arnold Berg of Thief River Falls heading the constitution committee and Frank Hamerlinck of Thief River Falls serving as parliamentarian.

Women Abuse To Be Topic Of Conference

"Confronting Woman Abuse" is the title of a conference to be held in Chicago, Illinois April 23-24, sponsored by women's services, Loop Center YWCA. The conference provides an opportunity for grassroots workers and professionals who work with abused women to meet, share knowledge and concerns, dilemmas and solutions.

Small groups will focus on acquiring and strengthening skills while exploring the ways society perpetuates violence. The purpose of the conference is to develop a network of services for women throughout the Midwest.

Resource people who will be conducting the workshops are from Minnesota, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Missouri and New York. Preregistration by mail is required. The fee is $25 to $75 depending on ability to pay. A bus will be chartered from Minneapolis and people wishing to car-pool should contact Doris Heroff of St. Hilaire, MN 56754, phone 964-5438. Further information and registration forms are also available from Doris Heroff.

Penn Allays Rumors About Arctic Sale

In response to inquires received from the press, John C. Penn, president of Arctic Enterprises, Inc., issued the following statement too late for inclusion in Wednesday's Times:

"We have been advised that rumors are circulating suggesting that Arctic may be acquired by another major corporation. While we receive inquiries from time to time and have recently been contacted on behalf of another firm, no offer has been received and no negotiations are now in process.

"Our board of directors and management have always had an 'open-door policy' to proposals that would benefit our shareholders, our employees and our business, and that policy is unchanged."

School Law Workshop Set For April 17

School law workshop will be held Tuesday, April 17, for region I and II superintendents, principals, school board members and special education directors. The workshop, sponsored by the Northwest Minnesota educational cooperative service unit (NWECSU), will run from 4 to 8:30 p.m. at Lon's Restaurant in Thief River Falls and includes dinner. Cost is $8 a person with registrations to be received by April 11.

The evening program will open with an address by attorney William F. Messinger entitled "The Changing Legal Aspects of Educating Handicapped Children." Messinger will describe the combined effects of recent state and federal legislation on the education of handicapped children and the major changes it has produced in our schools. Following his presentation Messinger will answer questions from the audience.

Also on the evenings program is Dr. Von Valletta, Minnesota deputy commissioner of education, whose topic is "The Next Five Years: New, Leadership, Changing Services and a Financial Forecast." In her presentation, Valletta will outline the significant changes on the horizon for our schools in the next several years, particularly in light of declining enrollments, increased parental involvement and leadership evolution and will answer any audience questions.

After going through seven to eight years of school I have made a tremendous commitment in time, and yet I find myself being very apologetic at times about being a teacher.

"If the teachers at Northland had refused to strike, and if we just continued with things the way they were, I think we may have been helping our students at this particular point in time. But untimately we would be giving them the message that teaching just isn't that important."

He recalled the president of the student body at Lakewood community college as having stated, in effect, "If our faculty wouldn't have gone on strike this time, I would have been ashamed of them."

Johnson points to the number of dollars being considered to justify his claim that the strike isn't a money issue, but that money is a symbol in the issue. If what is at stake is seven per cent of $2,000 over a two-year period or $140 a year, he said, he estimates he has lost that much already in the strike and he is the lowest paid by far of all the members of the Northland faculty.

"Nobody goes into teaching for the money," he said. "Teachers traditionally have been the last ones to benefit from prosperity and the first ones to suffer from it. We haven't been treated with any respect from the state level in our negotiations and I think more and more people tend to think that the bottom line is money. I'm already starting to wonder if maybe I would be better off going into another field. Right now the market is glutted and that's part of our problem — there are just too many of us."

Johnson has no difficulty in using the words "strike" and "professional" together. "I think they belong together. I think in the current situation that the term 'professional' is what is beginning to disappear. We start getting back to that image of the poor, pathetic school teacher — the most powerless person in town. If education is power, but the educator is absolutely powerless, it doesn't do much or say much for education," Johnson said.

Johnson says that being on the picket line has been no difficulty for him. What does bother, he said, is that there has been a polarization between the people who went in and the people who stayed out. "I think the people going in (crossing the picket lines to work) feel their jobs are being threatened," he said. "I don't think there is a single person on the picket line who would like to see anyone lose their job, and I really don't think that is going to happen."

But feelings run high when freedoms are restricted or threatened in any manner and one can expect polarization to take place. It will be difficult when settlement comes — as eventually it must — for those who have been harrassed by picketing to quickly forgive and forget.

"Settlement will be like the end of a war," Johnson said. "We're going to throw out our picket signs. We'll be glad to burn those things and to forget everything that happened during the strike. We're trying not to get to a point where we can't restore prior relationships. For instance, I consider Rich (featured in Wednesday's Times as a non-striking member of the Northland faculty) as a friend, and when this is all over I intend to be the first one to shake hands and tell him I understand and respect him for standing up for what he believes in."

Johnson said that violence in this strike would be impossible and even the threat of violence would be impossible. If any grade threats were made, he said, they have been made jokingly. "We have discussed it, and even as a joke it would be out of place at this time," he said. "Students who have defied the strike are often acting out their parents' opinions. Part of our job is developing critical thinking, and we can't expect them to be thinking critically about something they have never encountered before."

There is no hesitation on Johnson's part to describe the strike action as a union activity and the strikers as union members. He refers to other MEA members as "members of the same union" and said the college faculty group expects cooperation from other MEA members. It is not enough, he feels, to close down classes and college-related activities.

"In terms of a show of strength, we (the college faculty association) have never had a show of strength. If we were shutting off the gas, the town would miss it. We don't have much that we can deny people. Our product is pretty intangible. About all we do have is what is being offered at the Northland facility. To show that we do have some strength, we have to disrupt normalcy a little bit."

To that extent, pickets discourage use of the Northland facility by any people at any time during the duration of the strike.

Johnson emphasized that he is not a spokesman for the faculty organization, but is rather expressing his personal viewpoint on the situation. He expects the strike to be settled before it results in the loss of the spring quarter of classes, a condition he says would be disastrous. If settlement is to come, however, he maintains it must come strom the state. And if it is settled equitably, he said, he would not expect recurrence of the strike in future years.

Instructor Says Strike Followed Much Anguish

Junior College in the fall of 1967 — some earlier. We have given a lot for the college and the students for the past twelve years, through thick and thin.

We have seen enrollment climb and fall and climb again. We have felt fatherly and friendly toward literally hundreds of students over the years, and many of us are torn in every sense over what is happening. None of us want to be on strike. Not for ourselves, nor for our families, but most of all because our integrity as teachers abhors the disservice to our students.

Sometimes, however, a person is forced into a fight, and then "a man has gotta do what a man has gotta do."

Sincerely

School Dist. Phone System To Save Money

system. After the five-year contract which includes installment payments on the equipment installation, the monthly rate will drop to $1,244.50 for substantially greater monthly savings.

"We had been considering making a change in the system for some time because we were beginning to have a few problems with it," Nelson said. "The school board wanted any change to be cost effective and the telephone company helped work out the program which was actually approved last fall. Installation took place just recently and we have been trying to become familiar with what it has to offer and how to use it to best advantage."

Nelson noted that there were some initial problems which were quickly taken care of and that those problems were compounded by other technical difficulties not related to the new installation. Kathy Hanson serves as main operator of the equipment with work-study students handling the operation in the late afternoon.

B. R. Johnsrud Rites Held At Grand Rapids

Bennett R. Johnsrud, 78, of 907 Pokegama Avenue, Grand Rapids, and formerly of Holt, died Tuesday at the Itasca Memorial hospital in Grand Rapids.

Funeral services for Bennett R. Johnsrud were held Friday at 2 p.m., at the Rowe Funeral home in Grand Rapids with Rev. Edmund Bentrup officiating. Interment will be in the Itasca cemetery at Grand Rapids.

Bennett R. Johnsrud was born March 13, 1901 at Holt. He attended schools at Thief River Falls and was married here on Dec. 23, 1922 to Lillian O. Johnsrud. Bennett was a millwright on construction and his work took him to many places in the United States. Since 1953, he had made his home in Grand Rapids. He retired in 1966.

He is survived by his wife, a son, Duane Johnsrud, Grand Rapids, and five grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by one daughter, three brothers and a sister.

Fanne Marie Lassilla Hagen Dies In Hovland

Fanne Marie Lassilla Hagen, 53, of Hovland, sister of Mrs. Carl Fromm of St. Hilaire, died unexpectedly Wednesday afternoon, February 7. She had been in failing health for the past year and a half, and in March of last year, her illness was diagnosed as cancer. Since then, she had been hospitalized for only two weeks, returning to her home in Hovland on January 30 from St. Mary's hospital in Duluth.

Funeral services for Mrs. Hagen were held the following Saturday at Trinity Lutheran church in Hovland. Interment will be in the church cemetery.

Mrs. Hagen, the former Fanne Lassilla was born Oct. 4, 1925 at Gatzke to Isaac and Hilma Anderson Lassilla. Shortly afterwards, her mother died and she was reared in orphanages, first at Wild Rice and later at Lake Park. In June of 1933, she was adopted by Hilmer and Christine Aakvik.

She attended Chicago Bay school and was graduated as valedictorian from Cook County high school.

She was married to Clarence Hagen in 1944 at Hovland and had since made her home there. In addition to being a housewife and working for a short time for the State Forestry at Hovland, she helped the sick, crippled and ill in that community.

She was a member of Trinity Lutheran church and a past Sunday school teacher.

In addition to her husband and adopted parents, she is survived by two sons: Gene and Ralph, both of Grand Marais; two daughters: Loretta (Lori) Hagen of Duluth; and Mrs. Tony (Dorothy) Jackopich of Hovland; three grandchildren: April, Misty and Jeremy; and her sister Mrs. Carl (Anne) Fromm of St. Hilaire.

John Sorum Of Excel Township Dies March 23

John T. Sorum, 83, a lifetime resident of Excel township, Marshall county, died Friday evening at Northwestern hospital.

Funeral services for John T. Sorum will be held Tuesday at 11 a.m., at the Green Funeral chapel with Rev. Jay Borchert officiating. Interment will be in the Holt cemetery.

Nettie Lund Services Held In Greenbush

Funeral services for Mrs. Christian (Nettie) Lund were held last Wednesday afternoon at 2 p.m. at the United Free Lutheran church in Greenbush. She had died Sunday morning, March 18 at the age of 102 years, three months and 21 days.

Rev. Burton Rygh officiated at the services in which the United laides' trio sang and Dewey Melby was soloist. Organist was Mrs. Gerald Dvergsten. Interment will be in the Zion church cemetery near Greenbush. Collins Funeral home of Greenbush was in charge of arrangements.

Named honorary pallbearers were her friends from the Greenbush nursing home. Casketbearers were Otto and Selmer Waage, Floyd and Helroy Wiskow, Henry Flaten and Gerald Dvergsten.

Mrs. Lund, formerly Nettie Olson, was born Nov. 27, 1876 in Milwaukee, Wis. to the late Solomon and Nicoline Olson. When she reached the age of two, the family moved to the Morris area where Nettie attended school and grew to womanhood. On July 6, 1902 she married Christian H. Lund at Morris. The couple lived in Morris and later in St. Paul before taking up residence on a farm in Barnett township of Roseau county, near Greenbush, in 1914.

Engaged in farming for thirty years, Christian Lund passed away in July of 1946, after which Nettie moved into Greenbush and took up dressmaking for ladies in the community. She entered the Greenbush nursing home in October of 1966 and had resided there since.

Nettie Lund was actively involed with the Zion Lutheran church, serving as church organist for several years. She also participated in the ladies' aid as well as other church activities.

Surviving are several nieces, nephews and other relatives, as well as grand-nephews Omer and Maynard Olson of Greenbush.

She was preceded in death by her husband, parents and nine brothers.

Rites Tuesday For Mrs. Joe Peterson, 72

Mrs. Joe (Pearle) Peterson, 72, of this city, who resided at 527 South Crocker, died Friday morning at Northwestern hospital, following a lengthy illness.

Funeral services for Mrs. Joe Peterson will be held Tuesday at 2 p.m., at Trinity Lutheran church. Rev. Berton Hushagen will officiate. Mrs. Walter Larson will serve as organist and Mrs. Elaine Idso will be the soloist. Interment will be in Greenwood cemetery.

Pallbearers will be Arnold Johnson, Klem Gigstad, Durlyn Robinson, Ardine Sandberg, Roger Tunberg and Darrel Bakke.

The body is reposing at the Green Funeral home and will repose at the church for one hour prior to the time of services.

Mrs. Peterson, the former Pearle Deloris Hams, was born Sept. 5, 1906 in Roseau county, near Badger, to Oliver and Lydia Hams. She attended school and grew to womanhood in the Badger community. From 1926 until 1946, she was employed in a grocery store in Karlstad.

She was married at Karlstad on Dec. 6, 1946 to Joe Peterson. Following their marriage, the couple farmed east of Crookston. While living there, she was baptized and confirmed at Trinity Lutheran church.

In 1950, they moved to Brooks where they farmed until moving to Thief River Falls in September of 1956. She was employed in this city at Danny's Eastside Superette from 1956 until 1970.

She was a member of Trinity Lutheran church and its Priscilla circle.

Surviving are her husband, and three grandchildren: Mrs. Jane Holmberg and Joan Peterson, both of Minnespolis, and Patrick Peterson of Karlstad.

Also surviving are her mother, Mrs. Lydia Hams, Roseau; two brothers: Lawrence Hams, International Falls, and Harlan Hams, Hibbing; five sisters: Mrs. Myrtle Gustafson, Badger; Mrs. Ivar (Nora) Petterson, Lake Bronson; Mrs. Carlton (Edna) Reiden, Ellsworth, Wis.; Mrs. Hubert (Edith) Penas, Roseau; and Mrs. Ellen Mattson, Williamsburg, Iowa.

She was preceded in death by one son, Henry Peterson, Jr.; her father, and one brother, Edward Hams.

6,000 Visited At Pioneer Village

Report that about 6,000 visitors had toured the Pennington pioneer village was given Sunday when a postponed annual meeting of the Pennington county historical Society was held at the Asphult church at the pioneer village in Thief River Falls.

Inga Geving, president of the society, made the report and said that curators and many volunteers had helped to tell the story of the various buildings and items in the museum. Students from local schools and colleges came to learn of pioneer life, she said, and they often return for further insight into early days of people in this county. Former residents also seem to enjoy a chance to find reminders of past years in this area and perhaps even find items that at one time were known to them.

Treasurer Vi Lindberg noted that the beginning and ending balance of $4,700 did not indicate the work done by the society during the year. Several special gifts had been received, including grants from Pennington county and the L. B. Hartz foundation, which permitted the pioneer village grounds to be fenced at a cost of about $11,000. The Asphult church in the pioneer village was reshingled and other buildings were renovated. The board voted to retain the admission fee of 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for students.

One Norwegian language church service was held, several hymn sings were conducted, numerous gatherings were held in the church basement and worker recognition and other social meetings were scheduled.

Projects for the coming year include work on a second volume of the county history book and furnishing the house donated by Northwestern Bell Telephone company with household fixtures and display of old telephone equipment. A much needed but expensive project is the construction of a shelter for the society's collection of antique farm machinery.

Phil Bergland and Rev. James Bernauer were elected to the board of directors to succeed Ernest Swanson of Goodridge and Albert Koop of Thief River Falls. Officers reelected were Mrs. Geving as president, Margaret Weigelt as vice president and Vi Lindberg as secretary-treasurer. Other directors are Marv Enerson, Odin Hanson and Randall Noper.

Linda Worth Influence Felt In Ice Show

dependent upon class assistants," she said. "These skaters who have gained experience and passed a number of tests have put in countless hours with the instructional program and helped hundreds of youngsters improve their skating skills. They are a talented local resource with the kind of attitude you like to see in young people."

The local program has changed over the five-year history. For the first two years there were a large number of skaters in the opening clinic session, fewer in the lessons during the year and even less in the show. Now the numbers taking lessons during the year exceed the clinic numbers and the show is the highlight event for all of the participants. Demand for private lessons has also increased a great deal.

"Thief River Falls skaters have thrived on hard work," Linda said. "They have been willing to subject themselves to discipline and they have had the enthusiasm and courage to pursue a dream. Whatever attitude they have shows in the way they perform on the ice."

Linda speculates that the recreational skating program in its five years has touched 1,500 different people of all age levels and virtually all degrees of skating intersest and ability. She believes that a full program should offer basics for all those who have any interest in skating, even those who just want to learn stops and starts for occasional skating.

Another of Linda's "crutch sayings" is a short line on a plaque stating, "Love lifts what it touches." She applies that ethic to her teaching. In school she effectively avoided any and all education courses because she didn't want to become involved in teaching in any way. Now she has found instructing to be a high point in her life and wishes she had been more professionally prepared for it.

Linda started skating at about age five in Chicago and started taking group lessons at about age 13. She used to ride a number of city buses to get to the skating arena. Then she switched to dance, especially ballet. But all along she knew what she really wanted to do was to choregraph ice dance. Now she is doing part of that for the local ice show.

An injury that she received at least in part due to improperly fitted skates has made her empathic on the importance of that aspect of skating. She also stresses proper warm-up, diet which provides or is supplemented with B and C vitamins, and not training past the point of fatigue.

As she leaves the local program, she sees a number of areas of work undone which she hopes can receive attention. She would like to see more social dance on ice for any age, simply for enjoyment. This healthy activity is growing in worldwide practice.

Linda would also like to see speed skating developed for all ages and more opportunity for fun-type hockey for all ages. She would like to see a precision skating team developed — comprised of both boys and girls but in the tradition of precision movement performed locally by the Lincoln high school Prowlins. Need for a "rough and ready hour" is also here, she says, for some skaters who aren't too concerned about technique or style but just want to "put on their skates and go like thunder."

Perhaps some of these may evolve as the program develops. If it does, it may well be the results of interest seeds planted by Linda Worth. As another motto in the Worth home states, in a quote from the book "Jonathan Livingston Seagull":

"It's good to be a seeker, but sooner or later you have to be a finder. And then it is well to give what you have found, a gift into the world for whoever will accept it."

Nazi Holcaust Is Conference Topic April 5

SAMUEL J. GENEREUX, agent for National Farmers Union Insurance companies at Thief River Falls, has won election to the company's president's council for outstanding sales and service to policyowners over the past 18 months. Genereux has been a Farmers Union agent since 1958. It is the twelfth time he has won election to the honor group and attended the company's mile high training conference. More than 900 farmers union agents compete for president's council honors each year. The council is chosen from the top two per cent of all agents in 25 states.

Gov't. Workers Gain From Real Wage Insurance

One aspect of "real wage insurance" that has largely escaped attention is the benefit it would provide to federal workers. Federal employees have been held to a 5.5 per cent pay increase in fiscal 1979, ending September 30 of this year. But now President Carter has asked for a "real wage insurance" tax credit plan to compensate workers for inflation rates over seven per cent.

Only workers who receive raises of less than seven per cent would be eligible. This category would defintely include over four million civilian and military employees, from army privates to the commander-in-chief, as well as 535 U.S. Senators and Representaives who would get to vote on the real wage insurance plan.

The credit would be a percentage of the first $20,000 of wages; the percentage would equal the difference between the actual inflation rate (up to 10 per cent) and seven per cent. Thus a worker earning $20,000 in 1979 would receive an extra $100 if inflation turns out to be 7.5 per cent, as the administration forecasts, or $600 if inflation hits 10 per cent.

Chamber of commerce of the United States, which opposes the "real wage insurance" proposal, has estimated the cost of this hidden pay raise for federal workers at anywhere from $500 million to $3 billion, depending on inflation.

To Build New Bridge Over Bostic Creek

Up for bids the week of April 9 will be federal-aid improvements on county road 70 in Lake of the Woods county, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) announced, acting for the county.

Improvements call for a bridge to be built on county road 70 over Bostick Creek, 13 miles northwest of Baudette.

Bids will be received until 1:30 p.m., Monday, April 9, by county auditor Dean E. Irlbeck at the Lake of the Woods county courthouse in Baudette.

Kittson Co. Contract Bridge To Be Built

Contracts totaling $653,536 for federal-aid improvements in Kittson, Stearns and Wabasha counties have been awarded, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) announced, acting for the counties.

In Kittson County, Swingen Construction company of Fargo, N.D., was awarded a $134,245 contract for a bridge to be built on township road 253 over the south branch Two Rivers, 6.8 miles southeast of Hallock.

Work is scheduled to begin April 16 and to be completed within 70 working days.

Check Home For Carbon Monoxide Gas

Insulation, weather-stripping, caulking and storm windows are a part of every Minnesota homeowner's arsenal against rising fuel costs and drafty rooms.

Each crack we plug or window draft we stop means savings in heating and air conditioning dollars. It also means less fresh air is available in our homes for people and our fuel-burning appliances, according to the Minnesota safety council.

Add a fireplace, a kitchen exhaust fan and a vented dryer, and those newly plugged cracks are even more important because these power ventilators suck air from inside until something has to give — often the fireplace chimney or furnace flue backs up and instead of venting out, becomes a fresh air intake.

The danger comes from carbon monoxide gas (CO), a poison produced by fireplaces, charcoal, autos and imporperly vented furnaces. Under normal conditions, CO is vented to the outside and is diluted harmlessly. Plugged flues, chimneys or down drafts can, however, be serious and even a furnace in good condition can produce CO if there is insufficient air.

To help protect against CO poisoning, check furnace operation with the fireplace and all vent fans operating, especially after weather-proofing your home. If the furnace continues to expell flue products up the stack, enough fresh air is being provided. If not, a fresh air supply to the furnace area is needed.

Your local utility, heating contractor or building code official can help you diagnose a CO problem and provide fresh air intake solutions.

For more information on carbon monoxide and its hazards around the home, write the Minnesota safety council at 145 Hamm Building, St. Paul, Minnesota 55102, or its northern area service at 318 Missabe Building, Duluth 55802.

Hear Insurance Complaint Wed.

Brian Pennington, insurance investigator, representing the Minnesota state insurance division in hearing complaints about insurance claims and policies, will be available to the public in Thief River Falls at the Minnesota employment services office from 1:30 to 4 p.m. on Wednesday, April 4. This service is free and no appointements were required or made. Early attendance with all related insurance papers will help Pennington in interviewing all complainants on a first-come, first serve basis.

Complaints may also be made by mail to: State Insurance Division, 500 Metro Square Building, 7th and Robert streets, St. Paul, MN 55101.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor

It is not surprising that minority views on the community college faculty strike should be considered more newsworthy than those of the majority. We hope, however, that in the interest of fairness the Times will be willing to give equal space to other opinions.

Of the more than four hundred students who normally attend Northland, only a handful crossed the picket lines. Some have picketed with us, brought us coffee and cookies, contacted their legislators or expressed support in other ways. It would seem appropriate that their views be expressed in a front-page story, too.

Of the 19 full-time faculty members employed at the college this year, only one person's views were reported extensively. Like Mr. Lyttle, we appreciate our current working conditions, many of which were achieved at the bargaining table by our MEA-affiliated faculty association. There was an interesting omission in Mr. Lyttle's statements, however. As distasteful as the MEA-MCCFA may be to him, we haven't noticed his refusing any of the salary increases his colleagues have negotiated for him. Will the Times also give equal space to our president, Dr. Allen Nichols, to present the majority views of the faculty?

Enclosed is an editorial from the Baudette Region which presents quite an accurate analysis of the strike situation. Since you often print editorials from other newspapers, we hope that you will include this in one of your next editions.

Yours truly,
-s-Allen M. Nichols

FIRST PLACE AWARD WINNER AMONG MINNESOTA NEWSPAPERS FOR FARM NEWS COVERAGE IN 1962 AND 1965

FACTUAL NEWS REPORTING EFFECTIVE ADVERTISING

Repairing Relationships

Following editorial appeared recently in the St. Paul Pioneer Press:

Hunting requires lots of land. Farmers own lots of land, but they don't particularly enjoy having hordes of gun-carrying hunters crisscrossing their fields, blazing away at just about anything that happens to move.

Who can blame them? Show us a hunter who doesn't mind if strangers walk through his backyard and we'll show you a hunter who lives in an apartment.

"It's not a new problem, but it is something that is growing more difficult as urban sprawl spills over onto more and more farmland. Minnesota legislators thought they had a handle on the sportsman-farmer impasse last year when they passed a trespassing law which banned sportsmen from crossing agricultural land without the owner's permission.

But then the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) stepped in and said that agricultural lands were only those fields where crops are growing or livestock is roaming. Remove the crop and livestock and it's open range, as far as sportsmen were concerned.

Farmers were understandably upset, and there's a movement afoot in the legislature to tighten the trespass laws once again.

If you happen to be a devoted, conscientious sportsman, you have a problem. The owner of that pheasant-infested field over there may not be home — or he may live miles away. Hunters tracking a wounded deer, for instance, would find it impossible to get permission for each piece of property the animal crossed. So hunters might just as well stay home.

On the other hand, why should a farmer be required to open up his back yard to any armed person who shows up with a black lab and a muddy four-wheel-drive pickup? Especially since the amount of vandalism in rural areas during the hunting season is skyrocketing.

The Minnesota legislature ought to give rural property owners the same trespass protection city dwellers demand. Then it will be up to avid sportsmen to convince farmers that the days of hunter arrogance, carelessness and vandalism are over.

Repairing that tattered relationship may require a great deal of patience on the parts of sportsmen, but, then, farmers have demonstrated a fair share of patience with hunters over the years.

Bureaucrats Thwarting Cuts

Following editorial is from the St. Cloud Times:

The governor and the Legislature should take a firm hand in making sure that the state bureaucracy follows their directives to cut back.

Recent reports have revealed a number of bureaucratic maneuvers that have thwarted efforts to reduce the state payroll as much as intended. About four-fifths of the state's operating cost is payroll cost, so austerity programs have aimed at reducing that payroll.

However, to protect the jobs of some persons within some agencies, some administrators have succeeded in making payroll reduction only on paper. Former Gov. Rudy Perpich ordered cutbacks on the regular payroll, so some agencies transferred employees from the regular payroll to the seasonal payroll category.

Another agency tried to satisfy its 29-position cut requirement by eliminating positions that, when created, had been intended to be temporary. The positions were due to disappear regardless.

On bureaucratic paper, these moves satisfied the cutback demands, to some degree. However, for another kind of paper — tax dollars — the maneuvers did little. The same number of dollars are spent for positions in the seasonal category as in the regular payroll category.

Granted, it is difficult for agency administrators to lay off individuals they know and like. However, that is part of their duty to their employers, the people, when the employers call for it.

Sexless Dictionary

Quest for the elusive thing called "equality" under the banner of a nebulous term called "women's liberation" has spawned a whole new flock of definitions for titles and descriptions which were once in common usage.

To help a bewildered public understand and become a part of the elimination of sex-related connotations from the language, author John D. Hancock has written a book ($2.50 per copy from Neuter Press, 3439 Janice Way, Palo Alto, Calif. 94303). Some examples of how the book can be of help include the following definitions:

Personhole cover, n. a lid for a personhole.

Personhattan, n. an island in New York which once sold for $24.

Fisherperson's Warf, n. A San Francisco bay-front landmark.

Campfire person's, n. a club for adolescents.

Aperson corner, n. in fundapersonstalist churches, an "Aperson Corner" is occupied by members who urge the speaker with an occasional fervent "Hallelujah!" or "Aperson!"

Best Person, n. the one who gets through the marriage ceremony unmarried.

Trueperson, Harry S., n. President of the United States, 1945-53. A former Senator from the State of Personouri.

Persons, n. a restroom door sign.

Person goose, n. the imaginary compiler of a collection of various 18th century nursery rhymes, e.g. "Baa, baa, black persons, have you any wool?" "Yes person, yes person, three bags full. One for my person, one for my person, and one for the little person who cries in the lane."

Please . . . Give Us Less

Following comments were written as an open letter to legislators by Henry Heuser Sr., president of Henry Vogt Machine company, and appeared in the Clark (S.D.) Courier:

"Dear Sirs:

"My message, in brief, to you is — please give us less of it. I refer of course, to the control of people's lives, the magnitude of the federal government and the level of taxation that is gradually wrecking a great America.

"Who do you think you are? Are you really smart enough to design our automobiles, tell the farmer how to raise his crops, establish minimum wages and tell us when to retire? Do you really know enough to tell us where and how to build our plants, price our gas and oil, regulate each package in the grocery and tell us how and where to educate our children?

"You're supposed to take care of the affairs of state, maintain our defenses and protect our rights as individuals under our Constitution. But instead, you've got your millions of bureaucrats meddling in every detail of our lives and spending some 60 to 70 billion dollars each year more than you've got the guts to take in with taxes. So you've been printing more money, instead.

"As a result, you're the key to the greatest spiral of inflation the world has ever known and you keep making it worse under the ridiculous theory that uncontrolled spending somehow increases employment. Get off of it, will you? Haven't you yet awakened to the fact that you can't spend us into prosperity?

"You run the most inefficient operation in the history of the world. You employ more people to generate more paper to make more rules to harass us working people more than ever before in history. You dole out more money to undeserving recipients who make absolutely no contribution to our standard of living, than ever previously conceived by man.

"Those of us who work a full week and make a contribution to the strength of America are catching on to your gimmick. We're beginning to understand that the greater inflation is and the larger the figures are on our paychecks, the bigger your cut is getting. We're catching on the fact that with a 'progressive' income tax, you're taking away from us more and more and leaving us less to take home to run our homes and pay those inflated bills.

"Give us a little less, please. Start repealing laws instead of adding more, more and still more. Stop controlling our lives. We've got good sense. We know a good cereal from a bad cereal. We don't need always more bureaus and commissions to protect us from ourselves. We don't need 'federal grants' to get back a part of our own money all wrapped up in red tape that you took away in the first place. We know how to help our poor, run our schools, build our city and raise our families.

"Thank you for all your kind thoughts and dedicated public service. Now give us a little less, please.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Three men and a dog were at a table playing cards. "That must be a very smart dog," remarked a passerby. "Not so smart," one of the players mumbled. "When he gets a good hand he wags his tail."

Polaris Plans Alaska Test For '80 Model

Perhaps the most intensive field test of a snowmobile ever conducted by a factory team was secheduled to be launched March 26 when a team of six Polaris drivers planned to leave Point Barrow, Alaska — 150 miles inside the Arctic Circle — and head south through some of the most rugged terrain that is regularly transversed by snowmobile.

The expedition, headed by Bowman Crosby, Polaris' national service manager based in Minneapolis, plans to travel cross country as far as possible, barring the very real possibility of being caught in one of the severe late winter storms that commonly sweep the area.

According to Crosby, the test trip differs from other snowmobile endurance tests because it is being conducted under the actual conditions that Alaska snowmobilers face every day and, he emphasizes, it is not a race.

"We're not just running around an oval track," he said. "Our team will travel from village to village, most of the time without benefit of trails. In many places we may have to carve a trail through the bush; snow in the mountain passes may be as deep as 30 feet. We'll continue the test as long as the elements allow and are confident that we will learn more each day about the durability of the machines.

"The test will closely parallel the way that trappers and native Alaska hunters use snowmobiles. The machines will not be specially prepared in any way. As a result, we expect to encounter the same problems that our Alaska customers encounter. Dependability in a snowmobile is a necessity in terrain where nature's hospitality can be a healthy serving of blizzards."

Five men from Minnesota and Alaska will accompany Crosby: Ron Allen assistant marketing manager of Polar Equipment, the Alaska distributor for Polaris snowmobiles; Ray Monsrud, of Polaris' engineering department in Roseau; Jerry Bassett, editor of "Snow Goer" magazine, Minneapolis; Moss Anvil, Jr., mechanic for Swanson Brothers, the Polaris dealer in Bethel, AL; Lorry Schuerch, Kiana, AL, native guide; and Lester Wilde, Mountain Village, AL, native guide.

The team will be driving five Polaris Galaxy 340 snowmobiles and one Galaxy 440. The latter will be equipped with electric start and a citizens band radio for communications with a private plane, provided by Polar Equipment, which will be checking the caravan's progress from time to time.

Two machines will tow sleds, one with fuel and the other with essential survival gear. "We are prepared to spend up to five days in the wilderness, if necessary," Crosby said. Most nights, however, the party plans to sleep in schools or churches in the tiny villages.

If weather permits, the group will cut across vast stretches of tundra, skirt the Bering Sea and follow mountain valleys.

The snowmobilers expect to encounter average temperatures of 20 below zero during the days, with nighttime temperatures dipping even lower. Since they plan to follow the coastline, often whipped by winds from Siberia, wind-chills of 50 below are not uncommon.

The crew will be wearing Polaris clothing exclusively. The "Cold Cutter", a new jacket in Polaris' 1980 clothing line, and pants from the "Safari" suit, is the designated uniform of the day. Sleeping bags supplied by Comfy, an operation of the sportswear division of Raven Industries, are guaranteed to 40 below.

4H CLUB

Smiley

The Smiley 4-H club held its monthly meeting on March 13 in the courthouse meeting room. President Charlie Simenson called the meeting to order. Flag pledges were given and roll call response was to name your favorite TV program. The secretary and treasurer's reports were read and approved.

Old business: The Share-the-Fun contest will be held Friday, April 6 at the City Auditorium. Acts will also be allowed. Ten 4-H members are able to set up, perform, and take down the set.

New business: The 4-H News Letter was discussed. The 4-H Carnival will be held April 21 at the City Auditorium. Each club should make their own game if possible. Any 4-H member can enter the National 4-H Poster Art Program. Three top posters from Pennington County go on to state competition. State winners will then go on to the nationals. Junior Leadership Conference will be held June 18-22. Any junior leader may apply. Applications are due April 11.

Faye Erickson gave a project talk on how to set the table correctly. John Hamre gave a talk on transplanting.

Howard Person, the associate county extension agent, was our guest and talked about livestock records.

The Don LaFave family served lunch.

Black River

Black River 4-H club met at the Black River church on March 20 for their monthly meeting. Flag pledges were said. Roll call was taken with the response of "do you think March will go out like a lamb or a lion?" The secretary's report was read and approved.

Old business: Congratulations to everybody who participated in the Red River Valley winter shows. They include Lynn, Jodi and Gene Mosbeck, Tim and Tina Kruse, Ruth and Roy Dobias, Wanda Sylvester and Brian Noreen. A thank you also goes to the people who participated in the Favorite Food show. That list includes Joni and Lynn Mosbeck, Ruth, Roy and Julie Dobias, Craig Erickson, Kyle Kisch and Edna Johnson. Another thank you comes from Alma Dobias and Lorraine Mosbeck for paying their way into the Leaders Banquet. Any project changes you must make should be in by April 1.

New business: There will be a Share the Fun meeting after the 4-H meeting. For all Junior Leaders, sign up for the Junior Leaders conference if you're 14 or over. The 4-H carnival will be April 21.

A demonstration was given by Brian Noreen on beef and project talks were given by Joni Mosbeck on child care and Lynn Mosbeck on foods.

A program was given by Tina Kruse on how would you feel if you were a piece of grass, comb, mitten; etc... Tricia Kruse read a poem.

Lunch was served by the Forest Hamm family.

Present at the meeting were 15 4-H members, nine 4-H parents and four visitors.

February Milk Production Up From Year Ago

February milk production of 88.5 million gallons marked a turning point for the nation's fourth leading dairy state, reports the Minnesota department of agriculture.

This was the first time in 15 months that Minnesota milk production had increased on a year-ago comparison. Production had declined steadily since October of 1977, each month reflecting 26 to 35-year lows.

February production was almost 600,000 gallons higher than last year, and accounted for over 8.1 per cent of national milk production.

Minnesota's February milk production also was the most valuable on record for that month, an estimated $84.47 million, based on the preliminary market price average of $11.10 per 100 pounds (95.4 cents per gallon).

Dairy farmers had 845,000 milk cows on the production line during Feburary, matching the all-time low for the month reached last year. That was down 5,000 milk cows from this January.

Despite the high percentage of first lactation replacement cows in the production line currently after several years of weather and economics forced culling, the average production per cow in Minnesota this February was 900 pounds of milk or nearly 105 gallons. That was almost a gallon higher than last year per cow and the fourth highest on record for February.

The average market value of Minnesota milk cows as a production asset during February is estimated at $880 per cow. That means that the 845,000 milk cows in Minnesota's diary herds have a collective asset value of about $743.6 million, according to the Minnesota Department of agriculture.

Koop Herd Is Top On Test For January

Top herd in the Pennington county diary herd improvement association (SHIA) for the month of January was Marvin Koop's 30-cow herd, according to Jerry Hamre, DHIA supervisor. Koop's herd averaged 55.1 pounds of milk and 1.97 pounds of butterfat a day in January. Second place herd for the month was Orlan Stolaas' which averaged 55.0 pounds of milk and 1.92 pounds of butterfat.

Also among the top ten herds for January were the following with diary milk and butterfat production listed respectively: Roy Nelson, 47.5 and 1.72; Duane Krohn, 46.8 and 1.75; Knute Nesland, 46.7 and 1.74; Mylo Carlson, 45.4 and 1.74; Darrow Lundeen & Sons, 45.2 and 1.75; Myron Erickson, 45.1 and 1.72; Clarence Swanson, 43.7 and 1.54; Ray & Roger Walter, 43.6 and 1.78.

The number of dry cows in the herd affects the herd average, pointed out Hamre, since the amount of milk and butterfat produced is averaged out over all the cows. This gives the farmer a record of the earning power of the herd for the month but if too many dry cows are included in the herd, the monthly average may be low even though the cows which are milking are high producers.

During the month of January 28 SHIA herds were on test and there were four owner-sampler herds. Twenty-five cows completed 305-day records of more than 600 pounds of butterfat with herds and number of cows from the herd achieving the 600 pound record listed below: Chervestad Farms, two; Gordon Wetterlund & Son, two; John Hess, one; Myron Erickson, one; Chester Gast, one; Mylo Carlson, three; Warren & Lowell Hamrick, five; Duane Vatsaas, five; Martin Hanson, one; Swanson Brothers, one; Marvin Koop, one; Knute Nesland, two.

Epilepsy Office Branch To Give Better Service

Minnesota Epilepsy league, a statewide United Way agency, has expanded its Minneapolis-based offices to the Griggs-Midway building in St. Paul to better serve outstate residents affected by epilepsy.

Entitled "PEP", which stands for "people who have epilepsy are people," the project approaches the psychosocial problems of epilepsy from a comprehensive team approach, employing the services of a family counselor, a recreational therapist and an employment guidance counselor.

PEP is administered by Carol Banister, executive director of the Minnesota Epilepsy league, and works in cooperation with TAPS training and placement services — an employment service for persons with epilepsy.

Services offered by PEP include individual, family and group counseling; recreational and leisure activities and retreats; employment assistance; and skills training programs in such areas as communication and parenting.

CHECK WITH US ABOUT OUR SALE ON MODEL 290 JOHN DEERE SWATHERS

20-Foot-Cut 290 Goes Into Full Endways Transport Without Unhitching

Narrow roads, long distances between fields, and 20-ft. cutting width combine to make moving from one field to the next a difficult undertaking with many swathers.

Not so with a John Deere extra-value pull-type. You can switch to full endways transport by yourself in minutes. Without uncoupling the tractor, PTO or hydraulic hoses. Merely move the right-side tire to the end position, unpin the caster wheel, unlock the tongue, pull ahead, and relock the pin. You're on your way.

That's just one of the deluxe windrower features you get in the economy-priced 290.

Simple and streamlined design pays you real dividends in low maintenance and long service.

Float springs let cutterbar float over stones and mounds. The cutterbar acts as a full-width skidshoe — so cutterbar can ride over obstructions anywhere in the cutting path, without gouging.

A high-floatation tire on the right side provides extra float for soft conditions and helps minimize side draft.

Hydraulic reel-height adjustment is at your fingertips. Reel can be moved ahead or back, and speed adjusted to match conditions. A remote hydraulic cylinder raises the platform.

The 290 lays well-formed windrows. The nearly 4 foot-wide opening is left of center to lay windrows that are out of the way of tractor tires on the following round.

Grand Forks Hosts Sportsman's Show

Growing popularity of weekend camping and the continual decrease in the size of American cars has had a major effect on the recreational vehicles (RV) and boating industries. The two industries have a history of quick response to consumer needs and demands. And Grand Forks area outdoor enthusiasts can see the latest innovations of both industries at the Grand Forks sportsman's boat, camping and vacation show March 29-April 1 at the Grand Forks arena.

Following the Motor City lead, camper trailers will be available in smaller sizes. One of the smallest weighs only 590 pounds, and others are also small enough to be towed by sub-compact cars without special equipment. This includes towing mirrors since some of the fold-down models are only 40 inches high when packed together for travel.

The RV industry continues to find ways of putting more and more into less and less space, making camper trailers more homey and luxurious than people could imagine several years ago. Plus these compact, portable camper trailers are moving away from their "tent on wheels" image with constantly improved solid folding trailers. These models include double-paneled folding walls and sliding windows, glide out stoves for cooking outdoors or indoors (they raise up to normal working height when used indoors), glide out beds, portable toilets, portable refrigerators (which can be moved into the towing vehicle and plugged into the cigarette lighter to provide cold storage while traveling), and optional crank lift systems for easy set up.

These types of camper trailers appeal to many people because of their economy in both purchase price and for low cost family weekends. Most states, as well as Canada,, are rapidly developing campsites, with emphasis on locations near major population areas. Plus weekend camping is a spur of the moment activity that doesn't take months or weeks of preparation.

In the motorhome and fifth wheeler categories surveys have shown that both customers and dealers wanted more counter space in the kitchen, more bathroom hardware, more and better lighting and larger dinettes with more leg room. Solutions for those needs will be found in the '79 models — larger counters with optional extensions will be available; more conveniences in the bathroom, additional hooks, towel rods, cupholders, etc.; high intensity lamps strategically located near seating and sleeping areas; and more roomy dining areas.

Several manufacturers are making an extra effort to create more comfort for tall people, with higher ceilings, larger beds and shower stalls that the tall folks can actually stand up in.

Good things are coming in smaller packages for boating enthusiasts, too. The boating industry is also scaling down craft size while continuing to increase the number of features available.

There are several new trailerable compact cruisers and smaller runabouts suitable for teaming up with smaller cars. And cabins with walk-around decks are becoming more prevalent in mid-size to small cruisers.

When it comes to fishing and sport boats, there is a marketing trend toward completely equipped boats. Manufacturers have found prospective buyers are sometimes hesitant to invest in a small boat when they must buy all equipment separately. And boat producers are increasing their use of professional fishermen as consultants in the design of fishing craft.

In general, those close to the industry say boat buyers will find fewer options available this year, but that is nothing to fear since more of last year's options will be built in as standard equipment this year.

Most changes in outboard motors deal with internal engineering and include such things as noise control, smoother idling, lower idling without killing the engine, more thrust without increasing the size of the motor, integral fuel tanks for the small four-horsepower outboards for additional portability, and increased gearcase durability. The most noticeable external modifications include improvements on remote control equipment so less movement by the boat's operator is necessary to engage the motor and control the craft. Many outboards feature more tilt to shallow water drive brackets, giving fishermen more range. And several manufacturers are using larger diameter drive shafts for more strength to help fishermen who may find themselves in a tough spot-like hung up on the rocks.

The popular bass boat is expected to keep its share of the boat market, and because of their dual uses (fishing and water skiing), the trend from trihedral to deep-V hulls in the bass boat is expected to continue.

There are productions that aluminum boats will gain in popularity this year. Makers of these boats have always provided adequate flotation for swamped boats, and new flotation requirements by the Coast Guard should help the aluminum boat industry in sales since it has always been a leader in foam flotation technology.

When it comes to the larger boats and cruisers, more are being designed to carry their thrust power in the rear, instead of filling up the cockpit. Builders are turning to outboards and sterndrives that will do the job in the back out of the way, and using the extra space for mini-staterooms.

These and other innovations can be seen at the Grand Forks sportsman's show. Doors open 5 to 11 p.m. Thursday and Friday, noon to 11 p.m. Saturday and noon to 9 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for children under 12, with pre-schoolers admitted free.

Select 8AA Tournament Sites, Dates

Sites and dates for 1979-80 North Half Region 8AA tournaments were set Wednesday during a meeting of athletic representatives at Detroit Lakes.

Athletic directors Russ Smith of Thief River Falls, Larry Selk of East Grand Forks and Bun Fortier of Bemidji argued against implementation of the North and South sub region alignment for 1979-80 that will do away with the present four sub region tournaments for boys and girls basketball, volleyball, baseball and boys and girls track because there is still some opposition to the plan from the coaches.

"We wanted to put it off a year," said Smith. "We like it the way it was where we would be host to the sub region every four years."

However, the North and South plan, already in use for wrestling and tennis, will likely be used next year when Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks, Crookston, Bemidji, Moorhead, Detroit Lakes, Fergus Falls and Park Rapids compete in the North while Brainerd, Little Falls, Sauk Rapids, Alexandria, Melrose, St. Cloud Apollo, St. Cloud Tech and newcomer Cold Spring Rocori make up the South.

North and South will stage their own sub region tournaments, with the winners squaring off in a one-game state tournament-qualifying showdown.

If, as expected, the North-South alignment is approved, the 1980 North Half Region 8AA boys basketball tournament will be played Feb. 19, 21, 22 and 23 at Moorhead State University. The Region 8AA championship playoff game will be played Feb. 29 at St. Cloud State University. A tournament seeding meeting for the North will be held Feb. 11 at Mahnomen.

North Sub Region 8AA girls basketball tournament in 1980 will be played March 4, 6, 7 and 8 at Detroit Lakes. A site hasn't been picked for the March 14 Region 8AA championship game. The North tournament seeding meeting will be held Feb. 26 at Detroit Lakes.

In volleyball, the North Half Region 8AA tournament will be played Nov. 3 and 8 at Moorhead high school. The Nov. 10 Region 8AA championship match will be played at the home site of the North winner.

Boys and girls North Half Region 8AA track meet is scheduled May 16 at Moorhead high school, site of the Region 8AA finals May 24.

Baseball situation hasn't been settled yet, although the Region 8AA championship playoff game will be played May 27 at the site of the North winner.

Those sites and dates are for the 1979-80 school year. Thief River Falls will be staging the 1979 Region 8AA Sub Region 4 baseball tournament, Thurs., May 24, and Bemidji will host the 1979 Sub Region 4 boys and girls track meet Thurs., May 17.

Miscellaneous

+Dick Juillerat, head basketball coach at Brainerd high school and a native of Indiana, was quoted as follows at the recent Minnesota state high school basketball tournament: "I feel the offensive skill of Indiana basketball players is five years ahead of Minnesota. I think the game attitude in respect to intelligence to react to offensive and defensive situations is more than five years behind in Minnesota." When he came to Minnesota 10 years ago, Juillerat said he felt the Minnesota tournament "was a joke" compared to the one in Indiana.

NCC Program Breaks .500 Mark

Fourteen years of intercollegiate competition has finally brought the Northland community college basketball program won-lost record above the .500 mark for the first time in history. The Northmen finished the 1978-79 season with a 16-7 record, lifting Northland's all-time mark to 155 wins against 150 losses. That includes an 83-78 record against Northwest Division foes and a 73-72 effort in nonconference play.

The recently-completed winter campaign also netted Northland a share of the Northwest Division title — the school's fourth crown in the past six years — and a spot in the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) state tournament where the season ended with an 86-68 first round loss to Golden Valley Lutheran.

"When all things are considered I was satisfied," said Northland coach Chet Engelman as he looked back at the 1978-79 season. "Obviously we would have liked to win in the state tournament, too, but at the start of the year we would have been happy to just get there."

Vince Parker, a 5-5 guard from Inkster, Mich., paced a talented group of freshmen that played a key role in Northland's success. Parker, while serving as floor leader, scored a team-high 280 points, handed out a team-leading 66 assists and came up with 71 loose ball recoveries. Those numbers helped earn him most valuable player honors. He also helped set three school records, including most loose ball recoveries in a season (707), best single season recovery avdrage (30.7) and most recoveries in a game (50).

"Our freshmen played really well" acknowledged Engelman, "and our sophomores came through and played well, too."

Scotty Gilbert, Mike Carriere, Joe Kraska, Kurt Sigl and Tom Jordan all contributed as freshmen, with Gilbert's 12.9 scoring average, tops on a very balanced squad. Keith Charbonneau, Jerry Hooten, Doug Engelman, Jon Nelson and captain Jeff Neelan all performed well as sophomores. Neeland tied a school mark with an 8-for-8 field goal night against Fergus Falls. Charbonneau was credited with a team-leading 81 loose ball recoveries and Hooten was right behind with 80. Neelan also led the Northland rebounders with 180 in 22 games, an averge of eight per game. Nelson had 166 caroms and Hooten 158.

"We were not a very strong rebounding team," admitted Engelman, "but we shot well (47 per cent as a team from the field)."

Northland's balanced offense, which included Gilbert's 12.9 average, Parker 12.7, Charbonneau 12.5, Nelson 11.3, Hooten 9.3 and Neelan 8.9, scored an average of 92.3 points per game. Opponents scored at an 82.2 clip.

"The scores would tend to indicate we didn't play much defense," noted Engelman. "But there were times when we did a good job defensively. Our kids worked hard. We had trouble occasionally like everybody does maintaining our concentration."

Engelman completed his ninth year as Northland coach with a 131-79 record. His Northmen are 108-33 over the past six years.

Northland's wins this winter came against Winnipeg Gustos 106-86 Sisler, Man. 96-87, Portage, Man 116-80 (in the Red River tournament), Red River community college of Winnipeg 109-52 and 109-47, Lakewood 92-70, Inver Hills 99-91, Crookston 91-87 and 88-78, Itasca 97-85 and Hibbing 117-88. Losses came at the hands of Lake Region 86-73 and 97-80, Bottineau 97-85, Normandale 93-85, Mesabi 76-65, Fergus Falls 103-79 and Golden Valley Lutheran 86-68.

"We hope to be better next year," said Engelman. "We have some good freshmen returning and we hope to be tough on the recruiting. A lot is going to depend on how the recruiting goes, but I'm optimistic about the recruiting."

State All-Star Football Game Scheduled To Be Played July 27

Norm Van Brocklin will return to Minnesota next summer as honorary coach for the 1979 Minnesota high school all-star football game to be played on the evening of Fri., July 27, at Parade Stadium in downtown Minneapolis.

Van Brocklin will be the featured speaker at a luncheon honoring the players and coaches Wed., July 25, at the Leamington hotel. The luncheon is being sponsored by the Greater Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce and is open to the public.

Van Brocklin will also be involved with other promotional activities, according to Thomas Pressler, president of the Human Growth Foundation which is co-sponsoring the game with Minnesota high school football coaches association. "We're very pleased to have a man of Mr. Van Brocklin's stature agree to serve as Honorary coach," Pressler said.

Van Brocklin was recently named offensive backfield coach at Georgia Tech. where he will assist head coach Pepper Rodgers.

Van Brocklin coached the Minnesota Vikings from 1961-66 and was head coach of the Atlanta Falcons from 1968-1974. During his playing days, he was an outstanding pro quarterback and is a member of the NFL Hall of Fame. He now lives in the Atlanta area where he has a pecan farm.

The all-star game annually matches North and South teams made up of outstanding graduating high school seniors. The foundation recently became involved with the game to enhance its identity and raise funds. The foundation is a nonprofit organization concerned with the process of growth, particularly in young children. "This game will help us in furthering our research, educational and program services," Pressler said.

In their 18-year history, the Twins have scored 11 runs in an inning on three occasions and once tallied ten runs in an inning.

New York Mills Girls Capture Third Crown

New York Mills and St. Paul Central were winners in the 1979 Minnesota state high school girls basketball tournament completed Saturday at Met Sports Center in Bloomington.

Class A

New York Mills, paced by record-setting junior Janet Karvonen, won its third straight Class A championship.

First round scores Thursday found Moose Lake knocking off Fertile-Beltrami 64-61 in overtime, Albany edged Edgerton Southwest Christian 43-41, New York Mills handled Austin Pacelli 60-36 and Brady downed Redwood Falls 60-48.

In Friday's semifinals, Albany beat Moose Lake 80-47 in New York Mills out-scored Brady 70-50.

New York Mills won the title Saturday by decisioning Albany 61-52.

Brady beat Moose Lake 64-48 for third place.

In consolation play, Edgertown defeated Fertile-Beltrami 60-53, Redwood Falls stopped Austin Pacelli 59-52 and Edgerton slipped by Redwood Falls 66-65.

Class AA

St. Paul Central captured championship honors in Class AA by beating Northfield 55-46 in Saturday's title game.

First round scores saw Northfield double St. Francis 50-25, Coon Rpaids shaded Shakopee 41-40, Melrose got by Hopkins Lindbergh 35-28 and St. Paul Central beat Minneapolis North 60-50.

In the semifinals, Northfield upended Coon Rapids 57-50 and St. Paul Central handled Melrose 57-33.

Melrose came back to beat Coon Rapids 42-39 for third place.

In the consolation bracket, Lindbergh eliminated Minneapolis North 46-40, Shakopee sidelined St. Francis 45-26 and Lindberg beat Shakopee 45-38.

ALL EVENTS winner in the 1979 Thief River Falls women's bowling association city tournament was Dollie Newland with a 1,875-pin total. Runner-up was Edie Brandl[with 1,785 pins.

SINGLES champion in the 1979 Thief River Falls women's bowling association city tournament was Donna Wachsmuth with a 694-pin performance. Lynette Lane was a close second with a 650.

DNR Selects Director Of Fish, Wildlife

Charles (Chuck) Burrows, fisheries supervisor for the Department of Natural Resources, has been appointed director of the DNR fish and wildlife division. It was announced by commissioner of natural resources Joseph Alexander.

Burrows, 60, came to the department as a fisheries biologist in 1947 from the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service in California.

In his 31 years of service with the department, he held positions of district biologist, fisheries research supervisor, assistant fisheries supervisor and chief of fisheries. His appointment to the latter position occurred in 1973.

He spent the war years in the tactical fleets of the Pacific, and served a post war period in the naval reserve. He retired from the naval service with the rank of captain.

Burrows received his natural resources training at the University of Minnesota. Undergraduate work was in wildlife management with graduate work in fishery biology.

Moorhead State University Study . . .

Baseball Crowds, Sites Don't Determine Winners

Is there a home field advantage? Do big crowds produce winning teams?

As Yogi Berra once said about his sport of baseball, "You can observe a lot by watching."

And that's what Dr. Ben Judd, an associate professor of psychology at Moorhead State University, did.

Ploughing through a foot-thick pile of computer statistics from 1,800 major league baseball games, Judd tried to determine whether home field advantage was fact or fast talk and if big crowds can really spawn a winning ball club.

His conclusion: hardly ever, on both counts. At least in baseball.

Judd expects to field some verbal beanballs from home team apologists, embattled coaches and die-hard traditionalists. But even he was surprised by the results of the research, which he originally presented to a convention of sports psychologists in Austin, Texas. Judd and his cohort in the study Dr. Paul Paulus of the University of Texas, Arlington, expect to publish their results soon.

For the two psychologists the study was meant to examine how social pressure affects performance — a purely academic pursuit. For Judd, a baseball fan, it was an opportunity to mix scholarship and a pastime.

Despite their findings, though, sports mythology, press clippings and even some laboratory studies tend to support the battered-about platitude that packed grandstands and cheering crowds produce winning teams.

"It seems obvious," Judd said, "that people get more excited, work harder and do better at some things when they have an aduience. The incentive is there to put on a good show. Crowds stir the adrenaline."

Take cockroaches, Judd said. In simple tasks like running a-maze cockroches in the aboratory perform better in front of an audience of fellow insects. (A professor at the University of Michigan conducted such a study with a specially-built maze that included tiny box seats for the bugs.)

Same with people, he said. In the laboratory, solving simple puzzles and tasks, people perform better with an audience.

But there's a point when the crowd becomes distracting, Judd said. For example, students who take college board exams in crowded rooms turn in slightly lower scores than students taking the test in smaller groups.

In exaggerated circumstances, crowds can be darn-right oppressive, he said. Prisoners in overpopulated federal penitentiaries tend to have higher blood pressure than their counterparts in less crowded prisons. Animals are more susceptible to disease and death when overcrowded for long periods.

So how do crowds affect baseball players?

Judd, referring back to the cockroach studies, said that the insects performed worse in front of an audience when the mazes became more difficult. Other laboratory experiments with people showed the same.

The conclusion we draw from that, Judd said, is that an audience becomes more distracting as the task increases in complexity. Simply put, he said, it's easier to pound a nail in public than play a violin.

If baseball is a complex task, then you'd expect the ballplayers to falter in front of large crowds. If it's a simple task, their performance should improve.

Either way, Judd found no evidence that crowd size has any affect on the outcome of a game — not even in a pressure cooker like Yankee Stadium.

So much for theory and laboratory experiments.

Of the 1,800 major league games played in 1973, the focus of Judd's study, crowd size didn't show up as a factor in who won the games.

Take the Minnesota Twins. Playing at home, they won 53 per cent of their games in front of audiences of 10,000 or less, but won only 33 per cent when the crowd was over 20,000.

That — playing worse in front of larger audiences — is a skewed example. Better quality teams draw larger crowds and that could easily explain the Twins' troubles in front of crowds. With most teams in the study, crowds size didn't show up as a factor in who won the game.

In any case, Judd said, the desire to perform better for large adulences would apparently influence both teams, not just the home team, nullifying any team's advantage.

In an earlier study by a University of Illinois professor on how crowds affect Little League players, the conclusion was the same. The Little Leaguers didn't perform any differently in front of big or small crowds. But, the study showed, they did hit better when they played a more challenging team, evidence of a phenomenon called rising to the occasion.

As for home field advantage, pshaw.

Gleaning through his statistics, Judd said that as few as one percent of any team's winnings might be attributed to the so-called home team favor. On the average, major league teams win 51 per cent of their home games and 49 per cent of their road games.

Visitor's fatigue, an unfamiliar field and jeering fans didn't weight the statistics in favor of the home team, he said.

The Twins that year won 45 per cent of their home games, but 53 per cent of their away games. Most teams, however, showed little difference.

Upshot of all this, Judd said, is that professional baseball players are highly trained to perform under pressure and regardless of the crowd or staduim, they do their job well on the average. Good coaching and good training inspire the players to concentrate on the game and eliminate distractions.

The real world, Judd said, just isn't as simple as the laboratory, and this study, he added, is a classic example of that.

Cockroaches and people might perform in measurable ways under controlled laboratory conditions. But you take a study like this out to the ballpark, everything from the weather to the hotdog vendor seem to have an influence on the game.

"I don't know what all the factors are that make a winning team — talent, salaries, who ate what for breakfast or the color of the bleachers. But overall, crowds and the ball park don't seem to win baseball games."

Judd's research doesn't stand alone. Two psychologists from the University of Chicago and Temple University published an account in 1977 and also concluded that home field advantage wasn't much of a factor in baseball. But they also discovered that in indoor sports like basketball and hockey, some teams win more than 60 per cent of their home games.

That last fact might hold open the gates for more cliches and cop outs from the sports world. But at least in baseball, Judd said, the blame can't be shifted to where the game was played or how many people watched it.

Dogs Killing Deer In State

Free-running dogs, mostly household pets, are killing deer in southwestern Minnesota this winter, the Department of Natural Resources reports.

Maynard Nelson, DNR regional administrator at New Ulm, said at least 15 dead deer that had been pulled down by dogs have been found by local conservation officers so far.

On March 9 he called central headquarters in St. Paul to report that he had a truck with seven dead deer parked outside of his office.

"The problem began to get serious about two weeks ago," said Nelson. "We have an average of 18 inches os snow and it is crusted, so that dogs can run along on the surface while the deer with their sharp hooves break through and are unable to out-run them."

He said the problem is widespread in southwestern Minnesota, particularly along stream valleys where the deer are concentrated. He added that the deer population in the southwest is currently at a high level.

State conservation officers say dog predation problems now exist throughout most of the state. They said crusting conditions occur every year during the early spring due to the melting and alternate freezing of the snow surface.

Under state law conservation officers are required to kill any dogs observed chasing deer. DNR enforcement officials urged dog owners to keep their pets confined until the onset of warmer weather reduces snow depth to levels that will allow deer to outrun the odgs.

They said even small dogs will cause deer to panic and run. Due to their weakened physical condition in the winter they will frequently die of exhaustion even though they have not been bitten.

Met Stadium Announcer Recalls Many Highlights

When the Minnesota Twins open their 1979 home season against the California Angels on April 17, some Met Stadium patrons may be buying scorecards to familiarize themselves with the several new faces in the home dugout.

No roster will be needed when it comes to identifying the public address announcer, however. The occupant of that position, Bob Casey, has anchored the Met's mike since it was turned on for Minneapolis Miller baseball in 1956. Before that, Casey worked Millers' games for five years at old Nicollet Park.

"Nicollet was great for baseball. Anything could happen there," said Casey. "The park had a lot of character. They said that a ball hit on the roof in a certain spot would cause all the toilets in the place to flush."

Since the Met opened, Casey has missed only one game, that being to attend his son Mike's college graduation in 1975. With that track record, Bob is naturally a walking encyclopedia of Twins' games.

Around the American League there are few announcers who are truly distinctive in reputation. Bob Shepard of the Yankees is one. The Boston Red Sox' Sherman Feller is another. Casey, with his booming baritone chords, certainly belongs up there will the all-timers.

"We were playing Baltimore back in '69 or '70, and Clay Dalrymple comes up as a pinch-hitter," recalled Casey. "I didn't start the announcement until he was in the batter's box, and I was hurrying so much to get it in that I announced him as Clay Dairy-maple. Ron Perranoski had just started his windup and he fell right off the mound he was laughing so hard. Another time, a guy named Pepper came up to pinch-hit for the Tigers. I couldn't find his first name anywhere, so finally I announced him as Salty Pepper. He looked up at the press box, the pitch came in, he was called out on strikes and I never saw him again."

One of the great Casey stories concerns a bomb scare during a game with Boston in the early seventies. As the story goes, Bob was made aware of the situation and then made the following announcement: "Ladies and gentlemen, we are halting the game at this point and ask that you pay attention to this announcement. We request that you remain calm and do no panic, but we have just been informed by the Bloomington police that in fifteen minutes there will be an ex-PLO-sion!"

"What I remember most about the bomb scare is that when I had finished with the instructions to clear the stands, I got up to leave and the federal man there told me I had to stay because I was in charge of communications," remembered Casey. "And then he left!"

With ballpark experience like that behind him, Casey readies himself for his 29th straight year of batting orders and pitching changes.

– State Symbols

Legend of Minnesota is pictured by many symbols all around the state. Perhaps the most famous are the statues of Paul Bunyan and Babe the Blue Ox at Bemidji. Thousands of visitors take pictures of Paul and Babe each year.

At Baudette, Willie Walleye welcomes you to Lake of the Woods, walleye capitol of the world. Willie weighs 9,852 pounds and is 40 feet long.

In the Crane Lake area near Two Harbors you will see the statue of the Voyageur outside the Voyageur museum.

World's largest pelican can be seen at Pelican Rapids.

State bird is the loon, and at Vergas the world's largest loon stands on the shore of Long Lake.

Paul Bunyan is the theme of two other symbols. At Akeley you will find Paul Bunyan's cradle and at Hackensack you will find Paul Bunyan's sweetheart.

In St. Paul the world's tallest Indian is located in the Memorial concourse of the St. Paul city hall and the court house. It weighs 55 tons and stands 44 feet tall.

Alexandria features the world's largest Viking.

Blackduck

Blackduck is one of our favorite areas and on the highway entering town you'll find the largest blackduck in Minnesota.

As you know, the walleye is the state fish and the loon is the state bird. Why not have the wood-tick as the state insect? We would be known as the loon-a-tick state.

Why Not Name a Lake?

Minnesota is a land of more than 10,000 lakes. Many of these lakes have names that have little meaning. There are many Long lakes. Why not rename some of these lakes and honor people who helped make Minnesota famous as an outdoor paradise?

Here are a couple of ideas:

The man who helped develope the snowmobile is a Minnesotan. He is Edgar Hetteen who devoted 20 years to the snowmobile. He is an executive for Arctic Enterprises in Thief River Falls. Why not have a Lake Hetteen?

Another Minnesotan, Ralph Samuelson, invented the water ski 54 years ago at Lake City where the Mississippi widens into Lake Pepin. Today only Florida has more water skis per capita than Minnesota. Why not a Lake Samuelson?

Years ago when Minnesota Outdoors was a television show, we named several lakes around the state. Did you know that there is Lake WTCN in the Outing-Emily area? Lake Robertson is located in the Paul Bunyan Forest. There is Lake Ed Shave along the Echo Trail in the Ely area. It was named after outdoor writer Ed Shave who had many friends in Minnesota.

Twins' opening day record over theyears is 9-9, including 7-7 on the road and a split of four home season-openers.

AMTRAK Reductions

Energy is one of the biggest concerns today, and new alternatives to our current dependence on the automobile need to be explored. There is also a need to upgrade and maintain current transportation systems, particularly the railroads.

Rail transit in the past has been an effective means of travel. Almost all areas of the country are linked together by a network of rails, better known as Amtrak. But recently the U.S. Department of Transportation proposed a plan that would negatively effect 43 per cent of Amtrak's basic route system, thus impacting a high number of large and small communities.

The reason for this proposed reduction in service, according to the Department of Transportation, is to reduce the spending deficit of Amtrak. The Minnesota Association of Railroad Passengers has stated that such a reduction would result in approximately a 15 per cent savings in the net deficit for fiscal year 1980, and other organizations have estimated the net savings as low as only 8 per cent.

I support any measure that attempts to weed out unnecessary Federal expenditures, but I don't believe this fits into that category. I am not convinced that these cutbacks will demonstrate a significant amount of savings in fiscal 1980, and I don't believe that this small amount of savings is justified by a 43 per cent reduction in service.

In Minnesota, the impact would affect adversely both routes currently serving the Seventh District. The North Coast Hiawatha, which travels through the Seventh District counties of Morrison, Todd, Wadena, Otter Tail, Becker, and Clay, would be eliminated altogether, while the Empire Builder, which operates through Clay, Wilkin, Traverse, Grant, Stevens, and Swift Counties, would have service reduced. Both routes currently connect the Seventh District with the eastern United States by traveling through Minneapolis-St. Paul, and to the West Coast by traveling through North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, and Washington.

The current administration, and the Department of Energy are urging the American people to conserve energy by using public transportation, but if this effort is to be successful, we must maintain effective alternatives to the automobile. The Department of Transportation's proposed Amtrak reduction is inconsistent with these energy conservation policies, and will work against the goal of energy conservation by reducing car traffic. This action will also force those poeple who consider the railroad as a viable alternative to pay the high prices demanded by gasoline stations.

We must also look to the future. With the uncertain availability of gasoline, and higher prices, more people envision the need for greater public transportation in the years to come. This system does need improvement, and more people need to be encouraged to use it, but if the rail routes are reduced by 43 per cent now, I can't see how we will be able to fill the bill in years to come. It will cost more to reinstitute the system, than it will to maintain it.

For these reasons, I am cosponsoring a bill introduced by Congressman James Jefford to oppose final recommendations by the Department of Transportation to reduce Amtrak service. An effective rail system is a necessity for this country, and I am hopeful that passage of this bill by Congress will insure, and guarantee, this form of transportation for years to come.

It's Safety First For 4-H Cyclists

CHICAGO Half a million people are seriously injured in bicycle-related accidents every year. And a majority of them are children under the age of 14.

Two leading causes of bicycle accidents are poor "bike driving" skills and faulty equipment. For these reasons the national 4-H bicycle program, supported by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, encourages young people to improve their bike handling abilities and their knowledge of safety and maintenance procedures.

4-H cyclists from 9 to 19 learn-by-doing to practice some basic safety rules:

- Observe all traffic laws and signals, just as automobiles must do.
- Drive near the curb in the same direction as traffic. Girls and boys should not drive bikes in traffic until they can understand and obey traffic rules.
- Walk don't drive a bicycle across busy intersections and left-turn corners.
- Don't carry a passenger or try stunts.
- Avoid driving in wet weather. When wet, handbrakes may require a long distance to stop.
- Don't wear loose clothing or long coats that can catch in pedals or wheels. Leg clips or bands keep pants legs from tangling in the chain.
- Keep all bicycle parts properly adjusted and in good operating condition.

Bicycle safety checks, skill driving contests and trouble-shooting events are educational and fun for 4-H members of all ages. Older 4-H'ers often become involved in community service activities. For example, some of last year's national winners in the bicycle program conducted monthly bike courses for the retarded, organized charity bike-a-thons and launched wide-reaching safety campaigns.

One youth wrote a speech on safety, tape-recorded it and connected the message to "Billy, the Talking Bicycle." The device was a big hit with elementary school children in the county, who were later tested on what they had learned.

All six national winners received $1,000 scholarships donated by Goodyear. The company also provides medals of honor for four 4-H members in each county and a $50 U.S. savings bond for one 4-H'er per state. 14 sectional winners receive expense-paid trips to the 58th National 4-H Congress in Chicago Nov. 25-29.

Winners are chosen by the Cooperative Extension Service, which conducts the program, and awards are arranged by National 4-H Council.

County agents can furnish more information on the 4-H bicycle program.

The majority of serious bicycle accidents involve children under the age of 14. That's why proper "bike driving" skills and "rules of the road" are top priority learning objectives in the national 4-H bicycle program, supported by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company. Young cyclists 9-19 participate in 4-H bicycle projects and activities supervised by the Cooperative Extension Service.

$100 Million Asked By University For Building Programs

Six new buildings totalling $34 million are among the items in a $100 million capital request by the University of Minnesota outlined recently for Gov. Albert H. Quie and members of his administration.

President C. Peter Magrath and vice president Donald P. Brown said that each of the major projects has already received partial legislative approval in the form of money for planning and for working drawings.

The current request goes to both the 1979 and 1980 sessions of the Minnesota legislature.

A $17.2 million underground building with experimental solar heating and lighting is the major item in the request. The earth-sheltered structure is intended to be energy self-sufficient, Brown said.

The building is expensive, he said, because it has to meet specifications for the laboratory needs of the civil and mineral engineering department, which will be housed in the structure.

Brown said that the building would be a national demonstration project and would use federal and private money to pay for experiments in solar heating and natural lighting.

A mall would cover much of the building, which would use solar collectors mounted on the field house adjacent to the proposed structure, Brown said. About 95 per cent of the building would be underground.

A $12.5 million large-animal hospital for the college of veterinary medicine on the St. Paul campus would include new and remodeled space, Brown said.

The request for the St. Paul campus included $676,000 for working drawings for an animal science building that would eventually cost $16.9 million.

The request also lists a proposed $7 million vocational - technical education building and a $1.7 million poultry research and teaching facility for the St. Paul campus.

In his opening remarks and in response to a question from Lt. Gov. Lou Wangberg at the close of the three-hour session, Magrath said that remodeling of older buildings would become the institution's long-range priority if all the proposed projects were approved.

The current request includes $9.4 million in remodeling and rehabilitation money for Twin Cities campus buildings.

Magrath said that the proposed $3 million building for the school of business and economics on the Duluth campus would complete the major construction planned for that campus.

In discussing the Duluth building, Brown said that it would cost $312,000 more than the $3 million proposed because of premiums being paid to contractors for skilled labor in the Duluth area.

Brown proposed a "contingency appropriation" for the extra amount, which, he said, was necessary to let bids on schedule.

A $3.4 million physical education and outdoor recreation complex is proposed for the two-year technical campus at Crookston, Magrath said. The request also includes $44,000 for working drawings and planning money for an agriculture addition to Owen Hall, and $64,400 for acquisition of acreage for an agricultural demonstration project.

The Morris campus is basically a developed campus and new funds will be for remodeling and renovation, Magrath said. The request includes $551,540 for expansion of the computer center and construction of a greenhouse.

Future construction costs for the health sciences in the Twin Cities will focus on the remodeling of vacated space, Magrath said.

The current request includes $5.4 million for remodeling vacated clinic space for the school of public health and the departments of anesthesiology and microbiology. The outpatient clinics were moved into unit B-C of the health sciences complex.

The request also includes $1.7 million for a classroom addition for farm machinery repair classes, a building for showing livestock, and renovation of a plant services area on the Waseca campus.

North Central Sets Records

North Central Airlines established new records in February as passenger miles flown and passenger boardings climbed 48 and 26 per cent, reported David E. Moran, vice president of traffic and sales.

In February, the airline flew 189 million passenger miles, compared with 128 million one year ago, and carried 561,217 passengers, up from 445,013 in February 1978. North Central office in Thief River Falls reported 1,081 boardings in February and 1,171 in January compared to 927 in February of 1978.

SPRING CHICKS who will be skating in the Thief River Falls recreational skating association's ice revue Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon include (left to right) Dena Sund, Petrina Kuyath and Becky Leander.

Kennedy Lions To Hold Home And Hobby Show

President Robert Dahl of the Kennedy Lions announced recently that the 17th annual home and hobby show plans are progressing nicely. All commercial booths have been sold and many exhibit confirmations have been received. The showing will run from Thursday, March 29 through Sunday, April 1.

Dahl also announced that P.K.M. and Ottertail power companies will display a joint informational energy exhibit.

Again this year the second annual Micro-Mini national sanctioned tractor pull will be held Saturday afternoon, March 31, at 1 p.m. at the community center.

Arrangements have been made for demonstrations in microwave cooking by Faith Finney of East Grand Forks, rosemaling by Miram Juhl from Lake Bronson, and a painting demonstration featuring Artists Unlimited of Lake Bronson.

The Lions will be serving lunch on all days. All people interested in exhibiting can contact Glen Lundberg, Bervin Collin or Byron Bowman for information.

CCC Releases Farm Reserve Oats For Sale

Oats in the farmer-owned reserve was released for sale effective immediately by Stewart Smith, acting executive vice-president of the commodity credit corporation (CCC). Farmers may sell their reserve oats after repaying their CCC price support loans.

Release of the reserve does not require farmers to redeem or sell their grain at this time.

Smith said the national average market price for oats is $1.29 per bushel, exactly 125 per cent of the $1.03 national loan rate, and the price level at which the commodity is released from the reserve. More than 42 million bushels of oats are in the reserve.

Farmers with grain in the reserve receive storage payments annually in advance from the U.S. department of agriculture (USDA). Upon payment of the loan, farmers can keep the storage payments earned through the date of repayment or, if the loan is not repaid, the end of April.

On April 30, USDA will review the average price for oats to determine if the release authorization should remain in effect. If release continues, storage payments will stop in those states where the price remains above the release level.

Data used by CCC in determining the release level include a daily report by agricultural marketing service (AMS) which shows prices bid by buyers at selected markets, and a month-end economics, statistics and cooperatives service (ESCS) report of prices received by farmers, showing the previous month's average price and the current mid-month price.

Chicago and Minneapolis are the daily markets reviewed by CCC for oats. The five-day average of the Chicago and Minneapolis market prices, adjusted to reflect prices received by farmers, was the basis for recent action.

Wycliffe Meet April 5th At Grand Forks

Wycliffe banquet to be held at the Ramada Inn at Grand Forks, N.D., on April 5 at 7 p.m. will celebrate the completion of Wycliffe's 100th New Testament. Actual copies of Amuesha (Ah-moo-ay' sha) New Testaments, translated by Martha Duff Tripp and Mary Ruth Wise who have worked with this tribal group from Peru for several years, will be shown.

The program will feature Frank Doejaaren, missionary guest speaker, who will present the highlights of Wycliffe's ministry, personal tribal experiences, and the accelerated program of Wycliffe as it expands or moves into Surinam, Ghana, Cameroon, Bangladesh and Parkistan.

The banquet and program are sponsored by Wycliffe Associates, the lay ministry for Wycliffe Bible Translators. Contact David Stromlund at 681-5416 for reservations and complimentary tickets.

Some 93 million Americans, or 43 per cent of the nation's population, are potential recipients of Veterans Administration benefits.

Grain Storage Workshop Here Next Tuesday

Grain producers are invited to participate in a grain storage management workshop to be offered by the Pennington county extension service on Tuesday, April 3, from 10 to 3 p.m. at the Best Western motel in Thief River Falls.

"Management of grain in storage is a key factor affecting prices received by farmers at the market place," stated Terry Courneya, Pennington county extension director. "This workshop is designed to point out the management practices farmers can use to reduce losses from insects and spoilage while grain is in storage. Spring is a critical time for storage management and sound storage practices should be employed to maintain grain quality."

Speakers for the program will include: Harold Cloud, extension engineer, discussing grain temperature, moisture migration, and aeration management; Richard Meronuck, extension plant pathologist will cover significance of mold and spoilage in grain deterioration; Phil Harein, extension entomologist, will provide information on control of stored grain insects.

Other resource persons for discussion during the program are Phil Bergland, Pennington county ASCS executive director; Bryon Hallada, Thief River Falls Farmers Co-op Elevator manager; and William Penning, area extension agent in farm management.

Townships In State Increase Their Spending

Minnesota's 1,793 townships increased their 1978 spending over fiscal 1977 spending by 13.8 per cent for a total increase of $5.6 million, according to a report from the office of Arne Carlson, state auditor.

"On the other side, the 811,751 people residing in Minnesota townships paid $20.33 per capita in net property taxes during 1978 as opposed to $77.45 being paid by residents of Minnesota cities," Carlson said.

Township expenditures totaled $46.7 million, compared to $41.1 million in the previous year. Road and bridge equipment purchased, road maintenance and construction costs accounted for 63 per cent of total expenditures. General government expenditures were 15 per cent, and fire protection amounted to 8.3 per cent. Of the total, $9.4 million was for capital outlays, with 73 per cent going for road construction and road equipment.

"The report shows townships rely on state and federal grants and aids more than on local taxes," Carlson said. The three major sources of township revenues were state aids and grants, 42.9 per cent; taxes, 34.3 per cent; and federal revenue sharing, 10.5 per cent, according to the report.

The townships levied $21.5 million in taxes collectible for the period, compared to $18.5 million for fiscal 1977. Total township revenue was $48.1 million during the period, compared to $18.5 million for fiscal 1977. Total township revenue was $48.1 million during the period, compared to $43.6 million in fiscal 1977.

Only 74 of the 1,793 townships had outstanding bonded indebtedness, which totaled $10.4 million, compared to $9 million for fiscal 1977.

The annual report covers the revenues, expenditures, indebtedness, taxable valuations and tax levies of Minnesota townships for the fiscal year ended March 1, 1978. Residents of townships make up about one-fifth of the population of the state.

Copies of the complete report are available through county auditors and in some libraries.

MSU Students To Present Concerts Here

Concert choir and chamber singers from Moorhead state university will make a three-day performing tour in Minnesota, North Dakota and Canada the first week in April, returning to MSU for a home concert April 8. Thief River Falls is the first of their planned stops with concerts scheduled at 11 a.m. Wednesday, April 4, at Northland community college and at 7:30 p.m. at Trinity Lutheran church.

Among the members of the choral groups, which are under the direction of Dr. David Ferreira, are three area students: Debra Flage of Red Lake Falls and Dave Poole, and Judy Stoffel, Thief River Falls.

COUNTY CONVENTION of the Pennington county Independent-Republican party was held Tuesday evening in the meeting room of the Thief River Falls city auditorium. Vern Neppl, state I-R chairman, was guest speaker for the event, summarizing party victories in the 1978 Minnesota elections, predicting further success in the future and answering questions about party organization and operation. County officials in the photo are (left to right) Sharon Howard, Goodridge, county chairwoman; Yvonne Bredeson, convention secretary; and Stanley Mortenson, temporary convention chairman while county chairman Ev Ault was called from the session to attend another meeting.

Council Resolves Zoning Along First St., Hwy. 59

Planning commission recommendations stemming from a hearing held by the commission March 19 on rezoning requests involving land in the vincinity of highway 59 and First St. came before the Thief River Falls city council at that group's Tuesday, March 27 meeting. Two of the three recommendations presented were followed by the council resulting in the proposed Holiday gas station site remaining a C-2 (highway commercial) classification; lots 2 and 3, which are owned by Ellsworth Jorgenson, being changed to an R-2 (medium density residential) classification; and lots 4 through 8 remaining under C-2 (highway commercial) classifications.

The Holiday site remained a C-2 classification at the recommendation of the planning commission in a six to one vote with alderman Don Goodrich abstaining and alderman Bill Penning voting no in deference to property owners who request a down zoning, the split vote in the planning commission on the matter and his impression of good planning statndards which do not encourage the location of commercial property next to residential lots.

Present to witness the council action, which gives them the go-ahead for their construction project, were Holiday representatives Jerry Jensen and Brad Steinman.

Despite the planning commission recommendation that lots 4 through 8 be rezoned C-1 to serve as a buffer between the C-2 Holiday property and the residential property in the highway 59 and First street area, Mayor Bob Carlson was forced to vacate his chair in order to second a motion made by alderman Penning to rezone the area. That motion failed in a five to two vote with alderman Goodrich again abstaining because of personal interest in the outcome of the matter. The majority of the council was apparently not in favor of the rezoning since area property owners Al Rouse, Ev Ault and L.B. Hartz wanted their property to remain C-2.

With lots 4 through 8 to remain C-2, city planner Jack Quinlivan cautioned the council against spot zoning and the lack of an adequate buffer when it considered the re-zoning of property owned by Ellsworth Jorgenson to an R-2 classification. But, following the planning commission recommendation, the specified area was re-zoned R-2 with the Jorgenson residence then becoming a conforming use. Jorgenson should now encounter no problems in his plans to make substantial improvements in his property but may encounter difficulties with a lack of a buffer between his residential lot and C-2 property.

In other matters, the council voted five to three to accept the bids of Butler Machinery of Fargo for a 25 yard packer unit and Joe Raymond for a 34,000-pound rear axle diesel truck chassis despite the fact that the truck specs called for a 38,000-pound rear axle. Members casting dissenting votes, alderman Goodrich, Restad and Engelstad, felt that the city should readvertise with revised specs. However the majority of the council felt the city should take advantage of Raymond's $25,444.44 bid on a 1979 model truck which can be delivered in the middle of May, probably saving the city money in actual purchase price over the 1980 models likely to be bid if the city readvertised.

Savings are also expected in fuel during the three months additional use because of the early delivery date. The fuel savings would result because the new truck burns diesel rather than gas as the present vehicles do.

Vernon Lee and Dan Helle of the Pennington county fair board were also present at the Tuesday council meeting to come to an agreement with the city about a bill for $1,557.89 for work done at the fairgrounds in 1977. In a split vote, the council resolved to forgive everything in the 1977 bill except materials costs of $845.89 and to forgive a bill for labor provided by city forces in 1978. The finance committee was also instructed to meet with the fair board to work out an agreement regarding a limit on in-kind

PLACEMENT OF RAFTERS for the clubhouse building at the Marshallton gun club 12 miles northwest of Thief River Falls took place late last week as the new operation prepares for its first season of trapshooting activity. Owner Jim Heckroth has been holding Sunday afternoon shooting for the hardy individuals who have braved the elements to fire a few shells. The clubhouse will overlook the line of traps installed at the club and serve as headquarters for a number of major trapshooting events throughout the summer. The Thief River Falls trap club will shoot its league matches at the Marshallton facilities.

I-R Convention Adopts Variety Of Resolutions

Delegates attending the Pennington county Independent-Republican convention Tuesday evening in the meeting room of the Thief River Falls city auditorium adopted a number of resolutions and heard a talk by state party chairman Vern Neppl.

Presiding at the meeting was Ev Ault, county chairman. Mrs. Yvonne Bredeson served as convention secretary with Mrs. Gladys Barron and Mrs. Jodie Williamson handling registration. Mrs. Sharon Howard of Goodridge is county chairwoman.

"State chairman Neppl commended the Steventh Congressional district for electing a number of Independent-Republicans to state legislative office in reviewing gains made by the party in the last election. He cited the election of two state senators and the governor-lieutenant governor team as major I-R victories.

Expressing optimism for future party successes, he cautioned that the party must avoid interior conflicts which destroy party unity. He said that the Independent-Republicans' successes in the 1978 elections can be attributed in part to taking advantage of loss of leadership and internal problems in the opposition DFL party.

Neppl also answered questions regarding the state organization and handling of office procedures by several of the newly-elected officials. He said that Gov. Al Quie and Senators Rudy Boschwitz and Dave Durenberger had received huge volumes of mail following their election and that organization of office staff to handle the volume took time. As a result, all three men were sometimes late in replying to correspondence from their constituents, he said.

Resolutions adopted at the county convention covered a wide variety of topics from taxes to education to farm programs and conservation.

Resolutions on education called for leaving the school breakfast program as an option to the local school districts and repeal of federal aid to education in favor of a general state aid distribution based on the equalization aid formula.

The state legislature was encouraged to pass laws making initiative and referendum possible and to return to biennial sessions. The legislative body was also chided for its willingness to impose costly programs on local government in a resolution which would require the legislature to fund mandated programs in their entirety.

Other resolutions asked that the required adoption of state building code by all counties and cities in the state be repealed and requested that all buildings in compliance with codes at the time they are built not be required to meet all new rules and regulations.

The legislature was also encouraged by resolutions to adopt inheritance tax laws encouraging continuation of small businesses and family farms and vastly revise presently existing exemptions from inheritance taxes so they will be consistent with 1979

School Buildings Subject Of Report

Members of the Thief River Falls board of education heard a state official tell them of unsatisfactory facilities in the local district at the regular meeting held Monday evening in the school district service center.

Fred Christiansen, director of the school facilities planning and operations section of the Minnesota department of education, stated that major portions of Lincoln high school and Knox and St. Hilaire elementary schools would be better replaced than extensively repaired.

Christiansen's inspection of buildings in the district and report to the board followed an inspection and report on Lincoln high school by a representative of the Armstrong, Torseth, Skold & Rydeen architectural firm. The architects' representative had suggested that the building be studied with a view toward program as well as structural stability, energy conservation and compliance with state directives on facilities for the handicapped.

A summary sheet prepared by the architectural firm provided figures reinforced in Christiansen's presentation. Those figures show that in the Lincoln building, 23,720 square feet of building on three levels was built in 1910; 8,450 feet of space on two levels was built in 1919; 66,200 feet of space on two levels was built in 1938; 1,296 feet of space on the ground floor was added in 1945; 5,220 square feet of space on the ground floor was built in 1950; and 27,544 square feet of space in two levels was built in 1956.

The central theme of Christiansen's presentation was that it costs less money to build new facilities over a span of time than to attempt adequate repair and maintenance of older structures. He said his inspection showed Knox and St. Hilaire schools to be in that category.

At the April 23 school board meeting an informational package will be presented by Dr. William Corliss, superintendent of schools, outlining for the board a number of alternatives to be considered in developing a board policy on school district facilities.

Summer school was authorized for the June 18-July 27 period with one afternoon session to be scheduled to replace a morning session lost due to the July 4 holiday. Thirty sessions must be held for the school district to qualify for state aid for the summer session.

Board chairman and clerk were authorized to sign a student teaching agreement with Bemidji state university and the AVTI administration was authorized to advertise for bids on carpentry tools to be re-sold to students in the AVTI carpentry classes.

Food service at the AVTI was scheduled to be discontinued following completion of

First Dividend Declared By Arctic Board

Directors of Arctic Enterprises, Inc., declared a dividend of 10 cents per share of common stock, five cents of which is payable July 15, 1979, to shareholders of record July 1, 1979, and five cents of which is payable Jan. 15, 1980, to shareholders of record Jan. 1, 1980. The action came at a meeting of the board on Tuesday.

Arctic president John C. Penn said that this action came as the result of the company's long-discussed dividend policy, and that it is the intention of the board of directors to continue dividend payments in the future. It is the first dividend voted in the company's history.

Based on the present total of approximately 3,100,000 shares of stock outstanding, the declared dividend represents a total of $310,000 — divided into $155,000 payments in July of this year and January of 1980. Arctic Enterprises was founded in 1962 and payment of dividends has been discussed the last two annual reports of the corporation.

UFF-DA DAYS grand prize winner, Mrs. Neva Appel of St. Hilaire, is pictured receiving $1,000 in Uff-Da bucks redeemable at local participating stores. Making the presentation following a Monday drawing was Ken Meyer, chairman of the 1979 Uff-Da Days committee. List of 15 other prize winners is included in this issue.

Soil And Water Agencies Seek To Air Views

Soil and water conservation agencies in Minnesota are increasing their efforts to bring information on natural resource concerns to residents of the state. The result should be increased participation from the public in setting directions for conservation programs, according to Vern Reinert, executive director of the Minnesota soil and water conservation board.

Under provisions of the 1977 soil and water resources conservation act, the conservation board received a $170,000 grant from the U.S. soil conservation service to study resource problems and solicit public input. First phase of the process occurred in 1978 when 5,200 people attended 299 meetings to express what they saw as resource concerns in their county.

According to Reinert, the resource agencies are now writing alternative programs to address these concerns, and will bring the programs back to the public for comment and revision. Concerns expressed at the meetings include soil erosion, water quality, flooding, prime farmland, land use and wetlands and wildlife.

Reinert said the board has contracted with a Minneapolis advertising agency to secure maximum public participation in the second round of meetings scheduled for September. "The agency will assist the board and the soil conservation service distribute resource information", he said. "This information is necessary to help the public effectively participate in determining what kind of programs they want."

"One of the questions to be brought to the public", Reinert said, "is who should be funding conservation programs. Depending on the problem, the federal, state or local government may be providing funds. In cases where the problem is occurring on private land, the individual landowner may also be contributing money. One of the things we need to determine is who should be paying to control which problems, and what portion of the total cost they should contribute."

"When this process is completed," said Reinert, "there should be one comprehensive plan that ties the federal, state, and local conservation agencies into a coordinated course of action:"

U of M Fifth In Receipt Of Federal Funds

University of Minnesota ranked fifth among American universities in the amount of federal money received during fiscal year 1977, president C. Peter Magrath said recently.

Magrath told the Minnesota senate education subcommittee that the university received $92.7 million in federal funds, an increase of $5.7 million over the previous year.

Universitites receiving more federal income than Minnesota were Howard, $115.9 million; the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, $109.4 million; University of Washington, $96.9 million; and the University of California, Los Angeles, $96.4 million.

Universities ranking behind Minnesota included Stanford, Harvard, the University of California-San Diego, University of Michigan and Columbia.

The university's increase in federal funding over the previous year was the largest among the top 12 with only Minnesota, UCLA and MIT experiencing increases in federal funds.

Magrath said that Minnesota ranked seventh in 1976 with $86.9 million in federal income putting it behind Howard, MIT, Washington, the University of Wisconsin, Madison, UCLA and Stanford in that year.

Magrath said that the figures include the $8.3 million federal share of the new pharmacy-nursing building which is under construction as part of the health sciences complex on the Twin Cities campus.

The list was compiled by assistant vice president George Robb from figures provided by the national science foundation.

Most of the income from the federal government was for agriculture, the health sciences, and the institute of technology, said Magrath, who released the figures during a presentation on the university's request for increases for health sciences and agriculture.

Lyle French, vice president for health sciences, asked for state money to pick up some of the decreases anticipated in federal appropriations to the schools of medicine, dentistry and public health.

William F. Hueg, deputy vice president for agriculture, forestry and home economics, asked for increases in funding for agricultural research which, he said, pays off in returns to Minnesota farmers and agribusiness.

Robb compiled more details on the rankings for members of the subcommittee.

His figures show that the University of Minnesota ranked second in federal obligations in 1971 when the first building of the health sciences complex was funded. The amount of federal money coming to the university, in that year, was $72.5 million.

Robb said that the University of Wisconsin-Madison ranked ahead of the university in 1976 when it received funding for a health sciences building.

The university ranked fifth also during 1975 with $73.6 million and in 1972 with $64.2 million, Robb said. The institution's lowest ranking in the past ten years was eleventh in 1970. It was ranked 16th in 1966, the earliest figures provided.

the current school year. The AVTI and Northland community college will be combining food service next fall in a shared facility now under construction.

Resignations were received from Daine Godschalx, instructor at Franklin middle school, effective June 2, and Richard Clark, custodian at St. Hilaire, effective March 23. Hired were Daniel Vrudny, industrial arts teacher at Franklin middle school, effective March 26 as a long-term substitute and Norman Halsa as an AVTI auto mechanics instructor effective Aug. 30, 1979.

Extension of Everett Marshall's leave of absence for another five years was approved and authorization was given to place Phyllis Dalager on unrequested leave of absence as elementary music instructor.

Also approved was establishment of a passbook savings account for the school district sinking fund at First Northwestern state bank with authorized signatures of Dr. Corliss, Harry Nelson or Susan Brekke. The account is for the 1978-79 school year and two of the three signatures are required for transactions.

Kenneth Murphy's name was submitted for consideration for election to a three-year term on the Region I elementary, secondary and vocational executive board. The board will provide all computer related services to school districts in the region, including Thief River Falls.

Personnel evaluation procedure was discussed and it was noted that at the April 9 meeting part of the session will be devoted to evaluation of the transportation supervisor after his first six months of employment and consideration of all other personnel.

Under the classification of agriculture resolutions, the delegates went on record urging that farm price supports be increased in direct proportion to the yearly inflationary index with consideration given to the fact that this has not been done every year. They also asked that government abstain from importing farm products and animals raised in sufficient quantities in the United States at the present time.

Other resolutions called for the following:

Continual fuel research on all possible alternative energy sources in an attempt to find a satisfactory solution to the problem;

Each farm property owner being encouraged to leave 10 acres of every quarter section of land in a wooded state and that the legislature adopt a tax exemption for such property as incentive to the owner;

Congress and the legislature to pass laws prohibiting striking employees from drawing unemployment benefits, food stamps or any other form of state of federal funding;

That every effort be made to regain the autonomy of our state government (because of the supreme court decision which allows for representation on a population basis only);

That the state law prohibiting the use of studded tires be repealed and that urban areas be permitted to restrict such use if they so desire; and services to be provided by the city in the future.

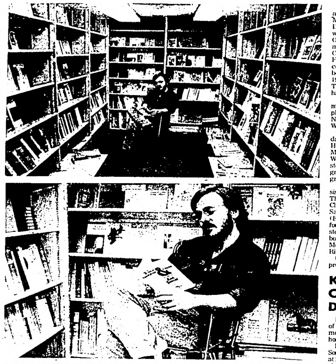
At the request of city planner Jack Quinlivan, the council instructed the city clerk to advertise the old Burlington Northern depot for sale on bids with bids to be let April 16 at 2:30 p.m.

In a unanimous vote the council agreed to buy back members present credit in the policeman's relief association in the new PERA program. Cost is estimated at $173,000.

At the request of present recipients, Ray Bren and Mrs. Yvonne Pederson were appointed benefit recipients representatives on the board of trustees for trust fund recipients. City clerk Jerry Wigness was also instructed to investigate average benefit payments to widows and dependent children and to report back to the council so that an adjustment to the present benefit amounts might be considered.

Council instructed the city clerk to contact the Minnesota department of transportation (MN-DOT) and request a study of traffic at highway 59 and First street and recommendations regarding turn lanes, traffic lights and cross walks.

Mayor Bob Carlson and superintendent of utilities John T. Anderson were appointed to represent the city at a department of energy meeting to be held in Sioux Falls, S.D. on power marketing plans after 1985 and city attorney Bob Wurst and alderman Don Goodrich were instructed to contact Congressman Arlan Stangeland regarding the possible termination of Canadian natural gas exports to the United States and the effect this would have on our area.



"THE PLAINS DISTRIBUTION SERVICE is a non-profit literary organization of writers, editors and publishers of the Midwest," explained Joe Richardson, co-founder and executive director of Plains. The purpose of the distribution service, Joe says, is to "develop an audience for contemporary Midwestern literature. Most schools don't teach contemporary literature classes or contemporary for them stops with Pound, Hemmingway, etc.", Richardson observes. So Plains was started to distribute selected small press publications it feels "form the backbone of the developing literary movement." The service intends to serve the writer — offering him an outlet for his work; and the public — introducing him to contemporary writers, styles and themes. Contemporary poets especially must rely on small presses for circulation for their work since major publishers have printed fewer and fewer works of poetry in recent years. In addition to the Plains Bookbus, where Richardson is pictured during the bus' two-day stay in Thief River Falls, the distribution service also uses classroom visits, poetry readings, a quarterly publication and other types of public contacts such as workshops, visits to talk shows, etc. to promote regional contemporary literature.

A complete obituary will be published in Monday's edition of the Times.

Gertie Johnson Rites Held At Halma Tuesday

Mrs. Gertie Johnson, 88, of Halma died Friday evening at the North Memorial hospital in Robbinsdale, following a brief illness.

Funeral services for Mrs. Gertie Johnson were held Tuesday at 10 a.m., at the Eidsvold Lutheran church at Halma with Rev. Donald Peterson officiating. Mrs. Loren Germundson was the soloist and Mrs. Michael Folland, the organist. Interment will be in the church cemetery. The Collins Funeral home, Karlstad, will be in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Chris Johnson, Lynn Rambeck, James Rambeck, Kevan Holmberg, LeRoy Stumpf and Robert J. Carlson.

Mrs. Johnson, the former Gjertina Norheim, was born Nov. 25, 1890 in Norway where she attended school and grew to womenhood. At the age of 19 years, she immigrated to the United States, settling in the Halma community. She was married Jan. 1, 1915 at Halma to Chris Johnson. Following their marriage, the couple lived on the Johnson home farm in Norway township, Kittson county, near Halma. From 1919 to 1922, they lived at Oslo where they were engaged in the hardware business. The following seven years, they lived at Karlstad, while her husband managed the lumber yard. They then lived in various communities where her husband managed Wilcox Lumber yards. In 1946, they returned to Karlstad, and in 1950, they moved to Halma. After her husband's death in February of 1962, Mrs. Johnson continued to live at Halma for a short time. Since then, she had resided in Minneapolis, with her daughter, Mildred.

Surviving are a son, Alden Johnson, Red Wing; two daughters: Mrs. Evelyn Rambeck, Glenwood, and Mrs. Mildred Peterson, Minneapolis; 12 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

In addition to her husband and parents, she was preceded in death by a son, Raymond, and one sister.

John T. Sorum Services Held Here Tuesday

Funeral services for John T. Sorum, 83, a lifetime resident of Excel township, Marshall county, were held Tuesday at 11 a.m., at the Green Funeral home. Sorum died Friday evening at Northwestern hospital.

Rev. Jay Borchert officiated at the services. Mrs. Sherman Idso served as organist and soloist. Interment will be in the Holt cemetery.

John T. Sorum was born March 31, 1895 in Excel township, Marshall county, to Theodore and Beatta Skogen Sorum, now deceased. He attended the Sunnyside elementary school in that community and spent his whole lifetime on the family farm, which he operated. He never married.

He is survived by two nephews: Gaylord Sorum, who resides on the family farm, and Morris Thingstad, West Fargo, N.D.

In addition to his parents, he was preceded in death by three sisters and one brother.

This Area Was Home To Plains Indians

by Gretchen Belto

A good deal of interest was shown by the community in the pictures and artifacts of Plains Indians on display recently in the Northwest regional library. The exhibit, on loan from the University of Minnesota Galery, was brought here by the library with grants from the Minnesota arts board and the local Friends of the Library. This article is written in the interest of relating the "People of the Plains, 1820-1850" to the history and culture of men who lived in what is now northwestern Minnesota.

Chippewa are today the most numerous Indian population in Minnesota, but until the mid-18th century they were an eastern tribe who lived on the far side of Lake Superior. It was the Dakota who had ruled all of northern Minnesota until 1748, and who continued to regulate all traffic in the Red River valley until 1825.

These Prairie Sioux depended on the tens of thousands of buffalo which trod the Red River valley on their annual migrations for food, shelter and clothing. Today, with the many shelter belts and farmstead trees planted in the valley, it is difficult to visualize a perpetual waving grassland and swamp that once stretched to the west of the ridge just outside Thief River Falls.

To the north the Cree and Assiniboin tribes ruled. Legends tell that Cheyenne once farmed on the western fringes of Minnesota, but that they and the Blackfeet moved west from the Minnesota area in the late prehistoric and early prehistoric periods.

Although there are many unanswered questions, there are archaelogical indications that Mandan and Hidatsa formerly lived in northern Minnesota. The Minnatree and Hidatsa told that their forefathers were the possessors of Mississippi headwaters. Descendants of all of these tribal people were depicted in the art work displayed at the peak of their civilization, just before they were dislodged or destroyed in the great Westward movement of white men.

Of particular interest in the exhibit were the pictures of Indian earthen homes. A large earthen-lodge village, similar to the Indian village at Mandan, was once inhabited in what is now the Chippewa National Forest. Where the Mississippi river enters the east end of Lake Winnibigoshish were embankments, mounds and an extended village site.

"In the last century, when the grass was burned off the point, the forms of a great number of ancient lodges could be seen, which were so constructed that the floors were sunken below the surface of the ground. Smaller circles were arranged in one great circle, with one large mound forming the center of the ring. Groups of these mounds were to be found on all the principal lakes in the Upper Mississippi country.

In 1858, the old men of the Chippewa said that none of the mounds scattered west of Lake Superior were lived in by their ancestors, but that the people before them were forced to live in them as a defense against their enemies.

Much closer to Thief River Falls was the camp of ten earthen lodges at the headwaters of the Thief river. The Chippewa chief at Red Lake told the historian Warren in 1858 of how this secret earthen village was discovered and destroyed about 1820, but the embankment of earth was still plainly visible in 1858. Today an arrowhead or Hudson Bay trading ax is occasionally found by farmers in the area to indicate earlier inhabitants.

While Red Lake was controlled by Chippewa after the 1740's a few of the defeated Forest Sioux remained to take advantage of the excellent hunting and trapping in this transitional land between coniferous forest and grassland prairie. A million-dollar Red river trade from tributary areas of Roseau and Red Lake rivers emerged like a hidden river from the wilderness.

Today there is but one visual reminder of the early Dakota people who once lived in this part of Minnesota. A gigantic earthen mound in the shape of a turtle is on a hiking trail in the Chippewa National Forest. It was made before French voyageurs came in the 17th century, and had religious significance.

John Perrault said that the Dakotas' forefathers had consulted the turtle as an oracle. The turtle always kept his head toward the enemy, the Chippewas, to warn them they must be on their guard, but that it was several years since he had ceased to give predictions. The turtle's head pointed to the northeast because that was the direction from which the attack would be launched.

In 1748 a fierce battle was fought along the portage, which ended with the Dakota being driven from the area. The victorious Chippewa turned the turtle's head to the southwest as a reminder to Dakota war parties of their defeat.

If you wish to see the turtle mound, which is located on a portage between the Mississippi waters and Rainy lake, take highway 1 through Red Lake reservation, then turn south on highway 46 toward Grand Rapids and look for a hiking trail marker. You will see the turtle mound over 25 feet long beside the stump of a gigantic white oak tree.

By an actual count in the 1880's, there were 7,773 Indian mounds in Minnesota. But virtually all in northern Minnesota have been plowed under, with the exception of Turtle Mound and Laurel Mound near International Falls. There were a few mounds in this area, noatably at Red Lake Falls, Fertile, and between the Wild Rice sawmill and the newly opened Thirteen Towns.

A group of earthworks with widths up to 84 feet and up to nine feet high were located on a lake beach about 250 yards from and 60 feet above the Red Lake river in section 90 of Polk county. The oldest, and best known were at Lake Bronson, and consisted of six linear mounds in a north-south line, each 200 feet long, 20 feet wide and six inches high.

In these were found gifts for the dead: bear, beaver and wolf teeth necklaces and conch shells. Other linear burial mounds were excavated in the 1960's on the Haarstad property near Old Mill state park and on the Snake river near Warren. Archaeologists think that the people wh oleft the burial mounds lived here about 500 to 900 A.D.

Country Fair Days Set At White Dealer

Twelve six-day vacations for two to Nashville, Tenn., are the grand prizes in a new sweepstakes open house program announced by White farm equipment company and participating dealers.

Furuseth Nelson Inc., Thief River Falls, will sponsor "White Country Fair Days" on Thursday. Attending farmers, will have the opportunity to compete for one of 12 grand prizes — the six-day, five-night Nashville trip — simply by filling out special entry blanks available at the dealership.

Health Career Student Aid Now Available

Students interested in pursuing careers in health education are encouraged to apply for college scholarships being offered by the Minnesota Lung-Christmas Seal association. Eight scholarships will be awarded to graduating senior high school students and to current college students majoring in school and community health.

Recipients of these health education scholarships will be selected by the Minnesota lung association scholarship committee, Roy B. Moore, Ph.D., chairman. The awards will be made through the Minnesota college at which the student is or will be enrolled. The college must offer a major in health education towards a Bachelor degree. The aid is awarded in the following manner and continues until the student graduates or changes his-her career objective: freshman year ($300), sophomore ($400), junior ($500), senior ($600).

Purpose of the Minnesota lung association health education scholarships is to encourage qualified young people in preparing themselves for careers as health educators in Minnesota schools and communities. The lung association believes that promoting excellence in the health education field benefits the general health of the entire community.

Scholarship application blanks and directions are available from high school principals, counselors, health teachers or health education department chairpersons. Or you may receive the application forms by writing directly to: Scholarship Committee, Minnesota Lung Association, 614 Portland Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota 55102 (612-227-8014). Deadline for applications is April 10, 1979.

MN Women For Agriculture Set Annual Meeting

Deputy commissioner of agriculture for the state of Minnesota, Dr. Rollin Dennistoun of Apple Valley, will be the keynote speaker at the annual meeting of the Minnesota Women for Agriculture, Inc. March 31. The annual meeting will be held at the Best Western Inn in Crookston with Dennistoun to deliver his address following a noon luncheon.

Assistant commissioner for the past four years, Dr. Dennistoun has worked with the state agriculture agency for 15 years and has actually served his entire 32-year career to date promoting Minnesota's agricultural industry. A native of Brooks, Rollin graduated from Oklee high school and subsequently earned a bachelor of science degree in agricultural education and master of science and doctorate degrees in agricultural economics and education from the University of Minnesota.

He served as vocational agriculture instructor at Freeborn for two years then joined the faculty of the University of Minnesota where he served for 15 years. In 1964 he resigned as assistant superintendent at the university's experiment station at Rosement to take the post of agronomy services director in the Minnesota department of agriculture.

Registration for the annual meeting is from 9 to 9:30 a.m. with two workshops scheduled for the morning session. Willis Mattson of the Minnesota pollution control agency (MPCA) will lead the first workshop on the water quality 208 program. "Plan Your Plantings" is the title of the second workshop to be conducted by West Polk county home agent Barbara Oseth.

An afternoon business meeting will be held with the adoption of several resolutions scheduled as a part of that meeting. The meeting is open to the public.

TO WHITETAIL DEER, a trail like the one above would be equivalent to a metropolitan freeway. This obviously well-used trail leads from the woods to hay bales owned by Keith Hagen of rural Gatzke. He has counted as many as 17 deer feeding on his hay bales at one time and estimates a loss of $300 in hay eaten or wasted by the woodland visitors.

Arbor Month Goal Is Green Minnesota

Minnesota department of agriculture has been thinking spring with its plans for Arbor Celebration '79. Minnesota's second arbor month will kick-off on Arbor Day, April 27 and continue through May.

Deputy commissioner of agriculture Rollin M. Dennistoun has appointed Chris Tschida as coordinator of the state program. The theme this year is "Celebrate Trees."

Last year, Arbor Day was extended into a month long observance for the first time in Minnesota history. "Response was great," says Tschida. "Hundreds of volunteer groups across the state planted a total of 200,000 saplings in 350 communities. Thousands more were planted by private citizens in their yards."

In order to make arbor month an even bigger success in 1979, Minnesota are encouraged to plan their tree-planting projects now. Local nurseries can offer help in tree selection and other technical advice. Other excellent sources of assistance are local garden and horticultural clubs, County agricultural extension agents, and the department of natural resources foresters.

"Plan to get involved in the celebration now," urges Tschida. "There is no better time to celebrate our state's trees and plant more for a beautiful green Minnesota."

Individuals interested in more information on arbor month should contact Chris Tschida, Minnesota Department of Agriculture, 600 Bremer Building, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101, telephone number (612) 296-8580.

Six Farmers Receive Farm Security Loans

Six applications recommended by the farm security advisory council and approved by the commissioner of agriculture this month boosted to 115 the number of new farm owners established during the first two years of Minnesota's national model state guaranteed farm security loan program.

March approvals of 90 per cent state guarantees on loans totaling $724,400 for the purchase of 665 acres of farm land increased accumulative totals for the program to $17,380,937 in loans on 17,572 acres in 47 of Minnesota's 87 counties.

Members of the farm security advisory council at the annual reorganization meeting also re-elected Lyle Nelsen, St. Peter banker, as chairman, and Fred Suedbeck, Slayton cattle buyer and retired farmer, as vice chairman.

Holt

The Holt 4-H club met March 23 at the Holt village hall. Meeting was called to order by President Dana Peterson. Flag pledges were said. Roll call was answered by "what is the first sign of spring you have seen?" The secretary's report was read and corrected. Treasurer's report was read and approved. For old business Karen Kjensrud asked us if we wanted to serve lunch.

Project talk was given by Vance Reierson on horses. There were 17 members present, six parents present, and nine visitors.

Judy Benitt, Reporter

Steiner

The Steiner 4-H club held their monthly meeting at the Terry Courneya's on March 12. The next meeting will take place at the Steiner Hall on April 9.

We discussed a roller skating party or a sliding party to take place soon. The Share-the-Fun numbers and the 4-H Carnival were also discussed. Junior Leadership Conference applications must be turned in by April 11. Mrs. Lester Muzzy wrote a thank you note for attending the Leaders Banquet.

A demonstration was given by Wayne Rausch on how to take care of your teeth.

Present at the meeting were 19 4-H members and 5 4-H parents.

Laureen Muzzy, Reporter

Holt 4-H Club

Preliminary share-the-fun contest will be held on April 23, at 7:30 p.m. at the Marshall county central high school gym in Newfolden. Each family is asked to bring a large pan of bars and either cookies or donuts. Share-the-fun finals are going to be held at Viking on April 30.

The next meeting of the Holt club will be held April 18 at 7:30 p.m. in the Holt Village hall. Share-the-fun registration is due by April 11 and community pride project registration is due June 1. The next 4-H Federation meeting was set for March 26 at Argyle. There will be a Dog Training class that starts in May.

Dana Peterson told how she did at the Red River Valley winter shows horse show. Robert Castle moved the meeting be adjourned and William Castle seconded the motion.

Grove Caliants club members presented the program. Those participating in the program were Darren Bengston, Darla Melo, Dawn and Denise Olson, Gail Waterworth and Jeff Melo. Lunch was served by the Walter Leach and Clinton Castle families.

Badger Home Start Workshop Set April 12

Due to inclement weather, grounding all plane travel from the Twin Cities, the March 20 early childhood development workshop at Badger was cancelled. The all-day seminar has be rescheduled and will be held Thursday, April 12 at St. Mary's Catholic church in Badger. Dr. James Kern, professor, counselor education, Winona state college, will conduct the workshop, starting at 9:30 a.m. A noon luncheon will be served at the church.

Dr. Kern is conducting the workshop under the auspices of the Northwest Community Action, Inc., home start program. It is one of a series of workshops being scheduled throughout the year for staff, parents and the general public.

Dr. Kern taught nine years in the junior high school st Stewartville, four years at the University of Wyoming, one year at Western Michigan university and is currently on a leave of absence to pursue speaking on a full-time basis. His speaking has taken him to more than 20 states and he has spoken to a wide variety of groups of all ages.

Victor Johnson, home start director, states that the workshop is open to the public. The cost to non-program participatns will be $3, which includes the noon luncheon. Pre-registration forms must be sent to the home start office in Badger by April 9.

Steve Anderson Ends Naval Basic Training

Navy seaman recruit Steven J. Anderson, son of Rodney and Marie Anderson of Grygla has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, San Diego.

During the eight-week training cycle, he studied general military subjects designed to prepare him for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the navy's 85 basic occupational fields.

Included in his studies were seamanship, close-order drill, naval history and first aid. Personnel who complete this course of instruction are eligible for three hours of college credit in physical education and hygiene.

A 1976 graduate of Grygla high school, Anderson joined the navy in November 1978.

Spring Flood Outlook Likely For RRV Area

Spring floods are likely around the state because this winter's deep snows are heavily saturated with water, said Roy Aune, acting director of the emergency services division of the Minnesota department of public safety.

"The extent and severity of flooding will depend on how fast the snow melts and how much precipitation occurs during the next three to five weeks," said Aune, who recently surveyed snow conditions throughout the state.

Water content of the snow, as of mid-March, ranges from four to six inches in southern and central Minnesota, five to six inches in northeastern counties, and three to five inches in northwest Minnesota.

"At least four regions face the possibility of major flooding this spring," said Aune. In the northwest, floods are "quite likely" along the main channel of the Red river north of Grand Forks. Snow is thick on the fields and this could mean fast runoff if rapid melting occurs, Aune said. The North Central region has an extremely heavy snow pack which could cause flood problems this spring along the upper Mississippi river in Aitkin county, particularly if precipitation is normal between now and the ice breakup.

Generally, in the rest of the state, spring floods appear less likely, said Aune. However, floods could hit at least two other areas if the snow melt is rapid and-or additional precipitation occurs.

"The heavy snows and high water content conditions this year are comparable to 1969 when several regions, especially in southwest Minnesota and the Red River Valley, experienced severe flooding," said Aune.

Conditions were very different in 1965 which brought record high flood levels to many areas. That year, the snow cover contained only three to five inches of water in most of Minnesota. However, the soil was saturated with water and deep frost prevented more water from being absorbed.

Then in late March and early April of 1965, sunny weather and warm rains combined to produce a fast snow melt and additional moisture and created the rapid heavy runoff and flooding.

This year the water content of the snow is higher than in 1965, but the soil is not saturated with moisture, except around Rochester and in the area between Alexandria and Brainerd, Aune said.

Frost is relatively shallow this year and with a slow melt, the ground could absorb much of the water, making floods less likely and less severe, he said.

County Crop Estimates Favor Northwest MN

Polk county took both production and average yield titles in Minnesota wheat for 1978 according to the first in a series of county crop estimates released by the state-federal crop and livestock reporting service of the Minnesota department of agriculture.

New county estimates confirmed that 1978 was not a good year for Minnesota wheat growers, at least when compared with 1977. The average yield state-wide fell by six bushels or 15 per cent to 33.6 bushels per acre, and total production dropped by nearly 29 per cent from the 1977 record to 93,225,000 bushels. The reduced total yield reflected the 17 per cent cut in acreage.

Polk county wheat growers averaged 42.5 bushels per harvested acre, a 14 per cent increase over 1977, and production totaled 13,985,100 bushels, almost a 1.5 per cent increase over the previous year.

Sharpest reductions in yields last year were experienced in the southern half of the state, while the traditional wheat growing area of northwestern Minnesota accounted for the majority of increased yields.

Counties that ranked behind Polk in the top Minnesota 15 in average wheat yields are: Norman, Clay, Marshall, Kittson, Roseau, Becker, Pennington, Red Lake, Hubbard and Cottonwood tied, Renville, Itasca, Mahnomen, and Wilkin.

Other leading counties in total wheat production behind Polk are: Marshall, Kittson, Clay, Norman, Roseau, Wilkin, Pennington, Traverse, Grant, Becker, Otter Tail, Lac qui Parle, Red Lake, and Renville.

Heart Clinic Set For Sunday In Middle River

Sunday morning, April 1, "Heartbeat" clinic will be held at the Middle River community center. The purpose of the clinic is to help individuals become aware of the risk factors that they may have that could lead to heart disease.

Those participating in the clinic should come to the community center between 7 and 11 a.m. No food or drink, except water, should be taken after 7 p.m. Saturday.

Blood tests for cholesterol, triglycerides and sugar will be performed along with medical histories, blood pressure and other tests.

A $7.50 charge will be made to cover the cost of the laboratory tests. Time of the physician, nurses and medical technologist is donated.

Laboratory test results will be returned to the clinic participants on Sunday, April 8, at 4 p.m. at the Middle River community center. A physician will discuss the lab results and the film, "I Am Joe's Heart", will be shown. Participants may keep their results or give them to their own physician.

The "Heartbeat" program is sponsored by the Loma Linda university school of public health and the Middle River Adventist church.

For more information call 222-3666 or 681-5678.

Euclid Plans Centennial Celebration

Euclid centinnial celebration is being planned by the Euclid Development association with Saturday, July 14, chosen as the date for the observance. Among the events being planned are a threshing bee, beef barbeque, parade and evening dance. Various historical exhibits will also be set up.

Committees have recently been formed to help organize the event with Frank Armstrong of Thief River Falls and Don Lubinski of Euclid cochairmen of the parade committee; Mrs. Mel Hoeft of Euclid in charge of publicity; Don Strickler of Euclid acting as general chairman; Loren Parkin handling historical exhibits and the Euclid Jaycees in charge of special events.

Any person or organization with old machinery or automobiles are invited to particiapte in the exhibits. Bands are also being sought for the parade and celetration. Mrs. Mel Hoeft is also seeking the addresses of any ex-residents. Names and addresses may be sent to her at. Euclid, MN 56722.

Youth Corps Offers Summer Jobs To Women

Young women, ages 16-23, unemployed and out of school, may apply for current openings at the Bald Eagle and Itasca youth adult conservation corps (YACC) centers. These employment opportunities will be of particular interest to persons concerned about ecology or conservation.

Employment is for a one-year period and pays the federal minimum wage of $2.90 per hour. Room and board in these residential centers are provided for $3 per day. Corps members work on such projects as fish and wildlife habitat improvement, tree planting, trail construction, carpentry and fire fighting.

Bald Eagle YACC center, located near Cass Lake and operated by the U.S. forest service, currently has 15 openings. Itasca YACC center, located near Park Rapids and operated by the Minnesota department of natural resources, has four openings.

Applications for any YACC center may be obtained from your nearest state job service office.

U.S. Senator Rudy Boschwitz reports to Minnesota

One hundred billion dollars. That's a figure so large it's hardly conceivable to most people.

Unfortunately, it's the amount some economists are now estimating to be the cost - to American farmers and businesses and ultimately the American public - of conforming with the 70,000 new pages of regulations issued by government agencies each year.

It's also over twice as much as American businesses and industry are able to spend on research and development each year, research and development needed to create new jobs, help our companies compete against foreign manufacturers, and restore a more favorable balance of trade.

Clearly, the question facing all of us here in Washington is: How do we determine which regulations are really necessary and how do we get rid of those which are trivial, unnecessary, and counter-productive to such national goals as trimming inflation, fighting unemployment, and increasing our country's productivity?

Complaints about the abundance of regulations have obviously reached the ears of many legislators, for there are any number of proposals floating around Capitol Hill. All claim they'd help reduce the regulation flood. Unfortunately, many of them would end up actually creating new bureaucracies and tedious processes to control what we already have.

These proposals I will not support.

Other approaches appeal more to common sense. These, too, have potential drawbacks and can't be considered final, perfect solutions. However, they're essential as starting points for discussion.

What I'd really like to see is a three-month moratorium on the writing of any new regulations. I suspect at the end of that time we'd find the world had not collapsed. We'd also have a better idea of those regulations the country was able to do without quite easily.

A second approach has been proposed by the President's own U.S. Commission on Federal Paperwork. That group has suggested that private businesses be compensated for the time and money spent on filling out federal forms. Accordingly, Senator Orrin Hatch has introduced a bill which would carry out this suggestion.

It's a drastic approach, but I agree with it. Without some kind of brakes applied to them, government agencies will continue to follow a very natural trend: expansion of their activities. They need something to give them pause and make them think about the impact of the rules they write.

Finally, I believe we must develop a method of measuring the cost of potential regulations. Once the cost has been determined, the authors of regulations must be required to show that the intended benefit is geater than its financial impact. Otherwise, the regulation would not go into effect.

It's to the public's benefit to remove the stragulating hold that unnecessary regulations now have on the American economy.

Employees as well as employers must comply with standards, rules and regulations of the U.S. Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

SUPERNATURAL activities will be part of the Thief River Falls recreational skating association's ice revue Saturday and Sunday. Lucy Worth will skate the part of a witches' queen and Matthew Holte skates the role of a warlock.

Job Service Placement Is High, Cost Low

In fiscal year 1978, the Minnesota job service ranked first in the department of labor region V and ninth in the nation in individuals placed per staff-year-worked, according to James L. Haynes, assistant commissioner, employment and training division, department of economic security.

"Placements, at 144,859, were up 30 per cent, an important factor in the department's performance," Haynes said. "The cost for placing an individual in a job was substantially lower than the regional average and tenth lowest in the nation."

States comprising region V, in addition to Minnesota, are: Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Illinois. The following were cited by Haynes as examples of achievement:

—Private sector placements per staff-year-worked, up 9.8 per cent, 4th place nationally.

—Veteran applicants, 84.2 per cent served, 15 per cent above national average, 8th place nationally.

—Women applicants, 39.8 per cent placed in employment, 10 per cent above national average, 5th place nationally.

—Handicapped applicants, 32.5 per cent placed in employment, 3.2 per cent above the national average, 20th place nationally.

—Economically disadvantaged applicants, 54.7 per cent placed in employment, 10 per cent above national average, 14th place nationally.

—Minority applicants, 49.1 per cent placed in employment, 14 per cent above national average, 9th place nationally.

—Older worker applicants, 27.1 per cent placed in employment, 13.1 per cent above national average, 14th place nationally.

—Youth applicants, 25.2 per cent placed in employment, 13.1 per cent above national average, 8th place nationally.

"These performance records were achieved despite staff reductions," Haynes said.

Council For Handicapped Has Local Reps

Minnesota state council for the handicapped now has area representatives, Harvey Whittmyer and Linda Hardt, serving the seven northwestern Minnesota counties of Region 1 including Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk and Norman. Whittmyer and Hardt will be conducting the Access Minnesota campaign in Region 1.

Fundamental goal of this project is to increase public awareness through the development of community interest groups, the education of public officials and conducting building surveys. Success of the project relies on the active participation of concerned community members.

For further information please contact Whittmyer or Hardt at Minnesota Department of Vocational Rehabilitation, 202 south Main, Crookston, Minnesota. Telephone number is 218-281-1946.

Basketball Milestones

While looking through the record books it was discovered that the Lincoln high school basketball team accomplished a major milestone this year when the Prowlers recorded two wins over archrival Bemidji for the first time since the 1951-52 season.

Thief River Falls and Bemidji split a pair of regular season meetings in 1978-79, with the Prowlers winning 48-46 in overtime at Bemidji Dec. 22 and the Lumberjacks running away with a 54-38 decision here Feb. 2. But Thief River Falls notched that rare second victory over a Bemidji cage squad by a 60-56 margin in the first round of the 1979 Region 8AA Sub Region 4 tournament played at Crookston.

Last time Thief River Falls beat Bemidji twice during the same basketball season Dick Bjorkman and Roger Williamson were serving as co-captains of the Prowlers. In addition to knocking off Bemidji 48-40 and 57-48 during the regular season, the 1951-52 Prowlers won the District 31 championship and advanced into the Region 8 finals where they lost to Halstad 54-53 after owning a 47-36 lead with six minutes left. Williamson set a then Lincoln high school record by scoring 426 points that winter.

Thief River Falls won just five of 60 meetings since the Prowlers' double triumph of 1951-52 before achieving that goal this year. Thief River Falls posted single wins over Bemidji in 1959-60, 1960-61, 1971-72, 1974-75 and 1975-76.

Seven times over than span Bemidji saddled Thief River Falls with three losses in one year, including post-season matches. But in 1959-60, after losing twice to Bemidji during the regular season, the Ron Hanson-paced Prowlers upset the Lumberjacks 60-53 in the Region 8 championship game. In the 1960 state tournament the Prowlers lost to Austin — a team that gained fame by losing to tiny Edgerton in the finals — 55-41 and fell to Melrose 48-38 in consolation round play.

In addition to the two wins over Bemidji, 1978-79 also produced two Thief River Falls victories over Mahnomen for the first time since 1973-74 when the Prowlers toppled the Indians 62-52 in the first round of the Region 8 tournament. They followed with a 60-54 championship game win over Blackduck to gain a state tournament for the first time since that 1960 trip. They lost 1974 state meet decisions to Waseca 60-53 and Simley 70-55.

Thief River Falls was expecting another state meet berth in 1974-75, but Mahnomen, after losing to the Prowlers 58-46 during the regular season, stunned the defending champs 39-37 in the Region 8 title game.

1979-80 Basketball Schedule

Detroit Lakes, Grafton and Climax will be new additions to the 1979-80 Lincoln high school basketball schedule.

The Prowlers, who will play the Lakers, Spoilers and Vikings on the road, will also add a game against Roseau, playing the Rams on a home-and-home basis instead of a single meeting.

Wadena, Fertile-Beltrami and Ada will be dropped from the Thief River Falls schedule, and the Prowlers will play Mahnomen just once after three years of home-and-home meetings with the Indians.

Miscellaneous

+Former Thief River Falls coach Gene Sack, who guided his Rochester John Marshall team into the Minnesota state high school hockey tournament for the third straight year, was named coach of the year on the 1979 WCCO high school hockey team of the year. Aaron Broten of Roseau was the only Section 8 player named to the team that also included Kurt Kleinendorst, Grand Rapids; Mike Krensing, Babbitt; Gino Peluso, Coleraine; Judd Frahm, Silver Bay; Mike Lauen, John Donnely and Steve Brown, Edina East; Todd Lecy and Paul Butters, Rochester John Marshall; Steve Griffith and Paul Ethier, St. Paul Hill-Murray; Scott Bjugstad, Irondale; Jim Rushin and Westy Graves, Bloomington Lincoln.

+Ten of last year's top 11 scorers are among the 17 lettermen working with the 1979 Bemidji high school track team. Jim Carrington of the Bemidji Pioneer says "the Jacks should have both quality and quantity in almost every event."

Post-season success erased whatever disappointment a .500 finish held and turned 1978-79 into a memorable season for the Lincoln high school basketball team.

A veteran line-up was expected to produce a winning record for the Prowlers who nevertheless struggled for a 9-9 regular season finish. However, they came up with an outstanding Region 8AA Sub Region 4 tournament performance in beating rivals Bemidji 60-56 and Crookston 72-69 to win their first Class AA trophy. A 67-45 Region 8AA tournament loss to a tall and talented St. Cloud Tech team did not tarnish that prized Sub Region 4 crown.

"We're pleased with what we did this year," said Thief River Falls coach Glen Peters. "We won that sub region title. That meant a lot to the players and people involved in basketball in Thief River Falls. A lot of people put the tab on us right away at the beginning of the season. We had a bad stretch in January, but we hit the peak at the right time. And say we would have went 14-4 and lost in the tournament; we wouldn't have accomplished a darn thing. Our aim was to win the doggone Sub Region 4 tournament."

As expected, the three full-time starters returning from the 1977-78 squad — senior guard Steve Enderlein, senior forward Jeff Oseid and junior guard Kyle Hams — represented a bulk of the 1978-79 attack.

The flashy Enderlein completed his third year of varsity duty with three impressive figures: 373 points, 123 assists and 123 rebounds in 20 games. He averaged 18.7 points, along with 6.2 assists and a like number of rebounds from his guard position. He led the team in scoring and was second in both the assist and rebound departments.

Oseid, outstanding in the Sub Region 4 tournament, scored 225 points, grabbed 110 rebounds and blocked 22 shots in 19 games. His 11.8 scoring average was second to Enderlein. He led the club with 54 offensive rebounds.

Hams enjoyed a strong all-round season as he scored 240 points and handed out a team-leading 131 assists in 21 games, averaging 11.4 points and 6.2 assists each outing. He was also the best free throw shooter in the starting line-up as he made 56 of 77 attempts for an eye-opening 73 per cent figure from the line. His clutch free throws held off a Bemidji rally in the Sub Region 4 opener.

Juniors Jim Nyland and Todd Young rounded out the familiar Thief River Falls starting line-up.

Nyland, a forward who started at tournament time when injuries struck the Prowlers in 1977-78, averaged 7.1 points per game with a team-high 56 per cent shooting eye from the fiend. He also contributed 108 rebounds in 19 games.

Young, a newcomer to the squad, became a polished performer as the season progressed. Like Oseid, Young starred in the Sub Region 4 tournament after averaging 6.8 points and 9.8 points during the regular season. The strong pivotman pulled down a team-leading 195 rebounds, including 143 on the defensive boards, and also blocked a team-high 39 shots.

"Talking with the kids, they said we had a great season," noted Peters. "We did have some problems with injuries. We did play well as a team at times, but I think the injuries had a lot to do with that. The last two or three weeks of the season we played well; we played well as a team; we played better defense. But then, we were finally healthy."

Thief River Falls regular season wins came against Kennedy 69-41, Ada 67-51, Mahnomen 64-34 and 62-57 in overtime, Bemidji 48-46 in overtime, Fergus Falls 63-60, Fertile-Beltrami 68-61, East Grand Forks 76-66 and Park Rapids 70-40. Losses came at the hands of Roseau 58-57, Crookston 58-56 and 81-69, International Falls 60-54, East Grand Forks 59-57, Bagley 80-64, Wadena 82-57, Bemidji 54-38 and Warren 59-53.

What does 1979-80 hold in store? "We're going to be a good ball club," promised Peters who once again will have three returning starters to build a team around. "But it's going to be tough for us to win because everybody else is going to be improved. However, we have the potential — if they take it upon themselves to work at it this spring and summer — to be a decent outfit."

Game Getters, Buck Busters Are Archery League Champions

Game Getters and Buck Busters were crowned regular season winners in the bowhunter and target portions, respectively, as the Thief River Falls indoor archery league completed its 11 weeks of regular season shooting.

Final week scores in the target competition where the Buck Busters emerged with a 4½-point victory margin over the runner-up Bear Busters found the Fast Cats beating the Buck Busters 875-849 and the Bear Busters knocking off the Arctic Arrows 881-850.

In the bowhunter division where the Game Getters won by a five-point margin over runner-up Team Arctic, it was the Game Getters 1181, Wasatch Warriors 1106; Team Arctic 1157, Junior Giants 1108; "Z" Archers 1201, Arctic Cat II 1170; Bull Skippers 1145, Bow Benders 1104; and Arctic Archers 1110, TG Sporting Goods 1092. Arctic Cat I received a bye while shooting a 1135.

Three weeks of tournament shooting awaits league members who will cap the season with a banquet, tentatively scheduled April 21.

Enderlein WCCO All-State Pick

Steve Enderlein

Lincoln high school senior Steve Enderlein has been named to the 1979 WCCO radio Prep Parade all-state basketball team of the year.

Enderlein, the leading scorer in the Northwest Athletic Conference this winter with a 19-point average, was one of three Region 8AA players named to the prestigious honor squad. The trio also included Ron Falenschek of Brainerd and Craig Griffith of Little Falls.

Others named to the team were Greg Downing, Duluth Central; Ken DeMaris, Hibbing; Doug Kraay, Owatonna; Randy Breuer, Lake City; Todd Oaks, Spring Grove; Joe Kenis, Albert Lea; Brian Hanson, Duluth East; Mark Wackler, Howard Lake-Waverly; Ron Lippert, Danube; Larry Witthus, Glencoe; Joel White, Laporte; Mark Smed, Marshall; Brad Flater, Butterfield-Odin; Mark Gaworski, Fairmont; Ben Coleman, Minneapolis North; Bruce Kaupa, Woodbury; Mike Heller, St. Thomas Academy; Lance Berwold, Minneapolis Washburn; Van Troup, Mounds View; Jerry Williams, Minneapolis Marshall-University; Dave Hennessy, St. Louis Park; Todd Swanson, Cold Spring Rocori; and Mark Bambanek, Winona Cotter.

Chosen as coach of the year was Jerry Snyder who guided the Lake City Tigers to their second successive Minnesota Class A state basketball title.

Enderlein is the ninth Lincoln high school basketball player named to an all-state squad. The first were John Chommie and Wendell Kielty, members of the 1932 Lincoln state champion squad. Roy Lee and Loren "Bones" Stadum were selected off the 1938 state championship team and Stadum was honored again in 1939.

The others were WCCO radio all-state picks: Bob Brodin, 1967; Sheldon Joppru, 1969; Duane Dicken, 1974; and Wayne Peterson, 1975.

Of 224 players who have worn Twins' uniforms, 1978 rookies Roger Erickson and Dave Edwards are the first whose last names begin with the letter 'e'. Only 'x' and 'y' remain unrepresented on the Twins' honor roll.

Wennberg's Is City Hockey Playoff Champ

In a match-up of the first and second place regular season finishers, pennant winner Wennberg's edged runner-up Sullivan's 3-2 in overtime Monday in the Thief River Falls men's city league hockey playoffs championship game.

Playoffs started with four one-sided first round games as Sullivan's drilled Woodland 24-4, Harger doubled Klosterman 12-6, Wennberg's handled Sooline 9-1 and Holmes eliminated Paulson 14-6.

Harger and Holmes, tied for third behind Wennberg's and Sullivan's in the final regular season standings, put up strong opposition in the playoff semifinals before dropping two-goal games as Sullivan's topped Harger 8-6 and Wennberg's got by Holmes 5-3.

MARK STORHAUG of Thief River Falls (front row, second from the left), was one of a dozen Bemidji State University swimmers named 1978-79 NAIA All-American or given All-American honorable mention status for performances at the 1979 NAIA national championship meet held earlier this month at Huntsville, Ala. Storhaug, a junior on the BSU team, earned his All-American honors by finishing sixth in the 1,650-yard freestyle race. An all-conference swimmer in the NIC, Storhaug was also a member of the Beavers' 800-yard freestyle relay team that finished fourth in the NAIA meet. Top six NAIA place finishers are given All-American status. Bemidji's All-American swimmers included, front row left to right, Kion Hoffman, Storhaug, Dick Seymore and Ron Bornetun; middle row, Greg Mayasich, Mal McCarthy, Dennis Prosen and Kevin McDermott; back row, Steve Boss, Paul Schaper, Bruce Paakh and Kelly Lewis. Seated in the back is Bemidji State swimming coach Lee Ahlbrecht.

Diane Fisher Is Climbing Toward 1,000 Point Club

Diane Fisher, a 5-6 offensive weapon on the Plummer high school girls basketball team, accomplished a major portion of her bid to become a 1,000-point scorer for the Cardinals with an outstanding 395-point junior campaign this winter that lifted her career scoring total to 844 points, just 156 shy of that prestigious 1,000-point club.

Hitting double figures every time she stepped on the court except in a 59-26 District 31 tournament semifinal loss to her namesake, Fisher averaged 18.8 points per game. And despite her small stature, her consistent play also produced a team-leading 225 rebounds, an average of 11 per game.

Plummer finished the 1978-79 season with a 15-6 record, including a District 31 tournament consolation title with a 51-48 victory over East Grand Forks Sacred Heart.

Regular season Cardinal victories came against Gonvick 60-31, Goodridge 45-32, Oslo 38-20, Alvarado 47-23 and 84-27, Middle River 30-29, Red Lake Falls 56-33, Stephen 56-43, Oklee 57-34, Mount St. Benedict 52-24, Strandquist 39-37 in overtime, Argyle 48-24 and Clearbrook 44-37. Losses came at the hands of Marshall County Central 30-28, Sacred Heart 59-42, Goodridge 63-48, Warren 54-44 and Fisher 56-38.

Coach Rick Koivisto's Cardinals, shooting 35 per cent from the field averaged 44 points per game on offense while giving up an average of 38.

Melanie Skjerven, a 5-3 senior, provided Fisher and the Cardinals with some offensive support with a 10.1 scoring average.

In addition to her scoring and rebounding figures, Fisher also led Plummer with 86 assists, 103 loose ball recoveries and a 41 per cent shooting eye from the field where she made 171 of 415 shots.

Skjerven handed out 71 assists, was credited with 76 loose ball recoveries and shot a team-high 62 per cent from the free throw line where she was 40-for-68. Fisher shot 53 per cent from the line by making 53 of 99 attempts.

Jodi Pahlen, a 5-3 junior, was credited with 63 assists and 41 loose ball recoveries.

Sandy Zimpel, a 5-8 junior, was second to Fisher in the rebounding department with 174, an average of nine per game. She also handed out 22 assists and had 35 loose ball recoveries.

Rebecca Sorenson, a 5-8 senior who served as co-captain along with Skjerven, was also among the rebound leaders with 162, an average of eight per game. Skjerven and Sorenson were the only seniors on the squad.

Sports Boosters Hear Agassiz Refuge Speaker

Judy Alderson, assistant manager at Agassiz national wildlife refuge, will present the program for the Thief River Falls sports boosters club at noon Thursday in the Rex cafe.

Miss Alderson will discuss the wilderness area designated on the refuge and answer questions about operation of the federal wildlife sanctuary. A narrated slide series on the federal refuge system will also be presented.

Terms Confuse Firewood Buyer In Minnesota

Increased use of wood as a heating fuel has produced a variety of names for the unit of measure by which firewood is sold, according to foresters in the Department of Natural Resources. Some call this unit of measure a "kitchen cord", others a "fireplace cord" or a "rick" and others just a "cord" — all of which may or may not contain the same number of cubic feet, depending on the length of each stick and whether or not the wood is split.

Minnesota statutes, section 239.33 states "In all contracts for sale of wood the term "cord" shall mean 128 cubic feet of wood, in four foot lengths; and if the sale is of "sawed wood", a cord shall mean 110 cubic feet when ranked (stacked) — or 160 cubic feet when thrown irregularly or loosely into a conveyance for delivery to the purchaser; and if the sale is of "sawed and split wood", a cord shall mean 120 cubic feet, when ranked, and 175 cubic feet when thrown irregularly and loosely into a conveyance for delivery."

Normally a cord of wood is considered to be 128 cubic feet or a ranked pile four feet wide, four feet high and eight feet long. However, as can be seen from the state law, this is true only when each stick is four feet long. When wood is cut shorter than four feet a cord of wood is less than 128 cubic feet as shorter wood can be piled more compactly with less air space between the sticks.

Most firewood sold these days is only 16 inches long which if split requires 120 cubic feet to make a cord. Many wood retailers call a pile of ranked 16 inch split wood measuring four feet high and eight feet long a kitchen cord, fireplace cord or some other term. Such a pile, however, is only about one-third of the cord defined in the state law. To contain a legal cord, a pile of 16 inch wood must be four feet high and 22½ feet long (1.33' x 4' x 22.5' - 120 cubic feet).

Oxygen OK In Major Fishing Lakes In State

Winter "freeze out" or oxygen depletion has not affected any of Minnesota's major fishing lakes to date, the Department of Natural Resources reported.

Charles Burrows, DNR Fish and Wildlife Director, said nearly all of the lakes that are suffering from lack of oxygen have a history of winter fish kills. Most are shallow and considered to be only marginal fishing waters.

Deeper lakes, mostly located in the northern or central portions of the state, are not critically affected by prevailing snow conditions and these are Minnesota's prime fishing lakes, he said.

Resort groups and chambers of commerce in northern Minnesota say they have been receiving inquiries from summer vacationers who have been hearing about Minnestoa's snow problems and are wondering if their favorite lakes are affected.

He pointed out that only about 200 lakes out of Minnesota's many thousands are currently listed as having experienced winter kill and that none of the freeze out lakes had been considered good fishing waters.

A FEW tools and a couple of spare hours are all you need to get your snowmobile ready for summer storage, says Randy Adamson of Thief River Falls, technical services representative for Arctic Enterprises.

Summer Care Important To Life Of Snowmobiles

Preparing your snowmobile for a summer of inactivity can be just as important as getting it ready for a winter of riding. This advice comes from Randy Adamson, technical services representative for the Arctic Cat snowmobile company, based in Thief River Falls.

"Most snowmobile owners should be able to perform the basics of proper machine preparation for the off-season," Adamson points out. "But if you are unsure of any procedures, you should probably bring the snowmobile to your dealer."

Here, then, are Adamson's suggestions:

First step is to remove the seat cushion from the tunnel, clean it with a damp cloth and store it in a dry place. Next, clean the snowmobile thoroughly by hosing off dirt, oil and grease from the skid frame, tunnel, hood and belly pan. Allow the snowmobile to dry completely, and be careful not to get water in any part of the engine.

Next step, according to Adamson, is to drain all fuel from the tank. Disconnect the fuel line from the fuel pump fitting, start the engine and allow it to idle. Using a rust-preventive oil, rapidly inject the oil into the carburetor intake for a period of 10 to 20 seconds until the engine stops. This procedure will provide the crankshaft with a protective coat of oil. Then connect the fuel line to the fuel inlet fitting and install the fuel tank cap.

Turn the ignition switch to the off position and disconnect the high tension wire(s) from the spark plug(s). Second, pull the recoil rope slowly until a piston reaches top dead center (TDC).

Third, pour one ounce of engine preservative, or equivalent, into the spark plug hole.

Fourth, pull the recoil rope slowly about 10 times. Repeat the second, third and fourth steps on the opposite cylinder if you have a twin cylinder machine.

Finally, install the spark plug(s) and connect the high tension wire(s).

"The next step is very important," Adamson points out. Drain the chain case lubricant (by removing the chain case cover and gasket) and allow the lubricant to flow into rags placed in the belly pan. Then examine the chain case components for excessive wear or damage. After replacing any worn parts, install the chain case cover and gasket. Finally, pour eight ounces of chain lube in the filler hole and install plug.

Next, remove the retaining pin securing the clutch guard — then lift the shield free of clutches. Remove the drive belt on a flat surface or slide it into a cardboard sleeve to prevent warping or distortion during storage.

Finally, secure the clutch guard with the retaining pin.

While all of these procedures can generally be handled by the snowmobile owner, Adamson does recommend having the drive clutch and driven pulley serviced by an authorized snowmobile dealer.

Remaining tasks begin with the application of light oil to the upper steering post bushing, ski spindles and the front and rear bushings of the skid frame.

Lubricate any grease fittings with a low temperature grease.

Tighten all nuts, bolts and screws, and make sure rivets holding components are tight. Replace all loose rivets.

Final procedures, Adamson says, begin with cleaning and polishing the hood, console and chassis with an automotive cleaner-wax. Do not use solvents or spray cleaners, because some propellants will damage the finish.

Also, if possible, store the vehicle indoors. Raise the track off the floor by blocking up the back end, and cover the snowmobile with a machine cover to tarpaulin. If the snowmobile must be stored outdoors, block the entire machine off the ground and cover it. Always remember to lock the snowmobile for the summer.

"As you prepare your snowmobile for storage, carefully examine the entire machine for items that need repair or replacement," Adamson adds. "Pay particular attention to the ski wear bars, skid frame wear strips, cables, belts and bulbs. Make a list of any items you need and make the repairs during the warm weather ahead. By doing these things, your snowmobile will not only last longer, but it will be ready for riding when the first snowfall hits next season."

DNR Salutes 86-Year-Old Fire Warden

Department of Natural Resources recently saluted an 86 year old township fire warden in Wadena county who has just completed a record 55 years of service in his post — and is looking forward to his 56th year on his voluntary, unpaid job.

Axel Hepola, a fire warden in Blueberry Township, also served 27 years at town clerk, and has been a member of the local telephone board, electrical co-op and was one of the founders of the Minnesota forest products co-op mill in Menahga.

He also worked the family farm, was employed on logging jobs and worked for both the Northern Pacific and Soo Line railroads.

"It is because of dedicated individuals like Axel Hepola that Minnesota's forest fire prevention laws are effective," said DNR fire specialist Joe Gummerson.

Golf Workshop Scheduled At UND April 6-7

University of North Dakota department of health, physical education and recreation (HPER) and athletic department will host a golf workshop Friday and Saturday, April 6-7 in the UND fieldhouse in Grand Forks.

The golf workshop is being conducted in cooperation with the national golf foundation and professional golf association (PGA).

This golf workshop is designed for players, teachers and coaches who wish to improve their play, or to help assist others to play better golf.

Golf workshop featured instructors will include Dwane Clodfelter of the national golf foundation, Gunter Fuhramannek of the American precision golf corporation, pro Leo Marchel of the Grand Forks Country Club and PGA, pro Paul O'Leary of Grand Forks Lincoln Park and PGA, pro Louie Price of the Dickinson Country Club and PGA, George Reynolds of the national golf foundation and Jim Werre of the PGA.

Pre-registration for the golf workshop is desired. Registration fee is $15. Contact Pat Mauch, UND women's golf coach, or Louie Bogan, UND men's golf coach, at the UND fieldhouse, Grand Forks, N.D. 58202 for information and brochures.

An incorrect identification was made in Monday's Times under the photograph of the 1979 Thief River Falls women's bowling association city tournament team champion.

Members of the championship Ace Hardware team are Dollie Newland, Theda Booren, Cecilia Stoltman, Ann Yonke and Roberta Kloety.

DAMAGE TO HAY BALES again this winter has been reported by Keith Hagen who farms seven miles southwest of Gatzke. His land adjoins the Agassiz national wildlife refuge and some of the hay had been stored in a field near the refuge boundary. Hagen estimates that the deer have eaten or ruined about 30 large round bales of hay with an approximate value of $300. As many as 17 deer have been counted feeding on the bales at one time. During last winter's extreme conditions there were a number of deer feeding on hay at the Hagen farm and emergency funds allocated by the legislature were used to reimburse him for part of the loss. There are no such funds available this year.

In Memoriam

In memory of David Solberg, whose 27th birthday would have been on March 30th.

He Hurts Not Anymore
by Mary Mason

He is not hurting anymore;
His face is peaceful now
The suffering has been erased;
No pain upon his brow
These tears at best are empty tears
Because we miss him so.
We'd clasp him still, reluctantly,
So sad to see him go.

But it is not the will of God
That death beget dark tears;
His feet now walk where angels walk
And every sound he hears
Reverberates with heaven's love
As he kneels to adore.
Today he walks where angels walk
And hurts not anymore.

Sadly missed by his family. 1126p

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere thanks to Dr. Bray and staff at Northwestern hospital for the wonderful care and concern given to Blenda Hamberg during her stays in hospital.

Special thanks to Rev. John F. Hageberg for his prayers and many visits with her and his comforting message and help at the service; also to Rev. Keith Prekker of Redeemer for his many visits and prayers with her while she was in hospital.

Thanks to all our neighbors and friends for comforting words, visits and food brought to our home. Special thanks to all our relatives and friends for cards, flowers and memorials received in her memory.

Thanks to the Collins Funeral home for courteous and kind service; the honorary bearers, pallbearers, organist, Mrs. Troska and Renee Jensen for her beautiful songs; the Salem LCW for serving lunch; and also thanks to her friends at Arctic Enterprises for their concern and memorial given and to local I.W.A. for beautiful Bible received in her memory.

May God's blessing be with you all.

The family of

UMC Special Courses Offered Spring Term

Infant and pre-school swimming, introduction to stained glass I and II and carpet clinic are three special interest courses which will be offered by the University of Minnesota technical college — Crookston (UMC) beginning the first week of April.

Infant and pre-school swimming will be offered as six week, 12 session courses. Infants (six months to three years) meet 9-9:30 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, beginning April 3. Pre-schoolers (3-5 years) meet 9:30-10 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, beginning April 3. This unique parent-child course is designed to teach basic swimming skills, water safety and equipment use. Learning through games and fun will be stressed. Instructor is Cathy Forget and location is the pool at the Best Western Motor Inn, Crookston. Cost will be $15.

Introduction to stained glass I and II is for the beginning and advanced beginning students. New students will have the opportunity to learn the techniques of glass cutting, leading, copper foiling, soldering and the basics of setting up a stained glass project. The more advanced students will receive further instruction and guidance on their individual projects. Course meets 7-9 p.m. Thursdays, beginning April 5 (8 sessions). Instructor Jack Stattine, location: UMC Hill building, room 206, cost $21 plus materials.

Carpet clinic, beginning April 13, covers everything you will need to know about carpeting: types, fibers, textures, construction, maintenance and how to buy. Guidelines for decorating with both broadloom and oriental rugs will round out this interesting and informative course. Instructor Colleen DeMartin, location: UMC Dowell hall, room 110, 7-9:30 p.m. beginning Tuesday, April 3 (3 sessions), cost $21.

For information and registration, call UMC 281-6510, ext. 241.

ROBIN VICKER (center) of Bagley, a cosmetology student in the Thief River Falls AVTI program, was recently chosen first place winner in the state skill olympics. Advancing from local competition, Robin was among 24 participants at the state contest. Contestants were judged on five skills: coloring, permanenting, cutting, daytime styling and evening styling. Serving as Vicker's model for the competition was Sheila Bowe (left) of Kelliher and advisor for the cosmetology student is Mrs. Dolores Bakke (right), AVTI instructor. Robin received a medallion and trophy at the state contest and will now advance to the national skill olympics to be held in Atlanta, Georgia in July. Both Bowe and Bakke will accompany Robin to the national competition.

Kiesow To State Science Fair

Mary Kiesow, ninth grade student at the Goodridge public schools, won the purple ribbon at the regional science fair held at Bemidji state university last weekend and will advance to state competition. Exhibits at the state science fair will be arranged at the Leamington hotel in Minneapolis.

Joel Fuller Participates In 'Team Spirit'

Captain Joel M. Fuller, son of Mrs. Luella Fuller, Thief River Falls, recently participated in Team Spirit '79, a joint U.S. -Republic of Korea military exercise held in Korea.

Captain Fuller is a weapons flight commander at Moody AFB, Ga., with a unit of the tactical air command.

This annual exercise permits military forces of the two allies to gain experience in joint and combined defensive operations, including the combined employment of American land, sea and air forces from outside Korea.

Team Spirit is a defensive training exercise and field training events took place well south of the demilitarized zone.

This is the fourth year that the Team Spirit exercises have been held in Korea.

The captain, a 1966 graduate of Lincoln high school, received a B.S. degree in 1970 from the University of North Dakota where he was commissioned through the air force reserve officers training corps program.

Farm Machinery Group Adds Two New Members

Jim Larson and Jim Johnson of Warren will assist Nelder Broten, machinery curator for the Marshall historical society, in organizing a machinery parade for the Centennial pageant planned for the last day of the Marshall county fair in July.

Broten has served with the county historical society and helped collect antique farm machines for the society since 1975. He organized "Machinery Row," a group of over 70 antique machines, at the 1976 county fair. He currently lives south and east of the Old Mill state park near Viking.

Also assisting Broten is Frank Armstrong, a member-at-large of the society, who farms west of Thief River Falls. His specialty is old horse-drawn farm equipment and he led a covered wagon trek from Pembina to the fairgrounds in St. Paul (along the Red River trail) in 1976.

The four men will plan the parade for the historical pageant to show 100 years of progress. They will organize the farm machinery to show the progress of tillage, seeding and harvest machinery from the hand pulled to the present. The four planners indicated a need for a cradle scythe, an old-time pull type swather, a flail for threshing and teams of horses.

Information on the 1979 Centennial parade and pageant may be obtained from the machinery parade chairman, Jim Larson, or from the Marshall county historical society at the court-house in Warren.

Slow down and live.

'79 Missionary Conference To Open On Wed.

Seventeenth annual missionary conference of the Evangelical Covenant church of Thief River Falls will begin Wednesday, March 28, with a 6 p.m. fellowship dinner and run through Sunday, Arpil 1. Fund raising goal for the church from April 1, 1979 to April 1, 1980 is $40,000.

At the Wednesday dinner missionaries for the conference will be introduced. Featured missionaries this year include: Russell Killman from the Heaven and Home Hour; Ruth Noren from Zaire, Africa; Eunice Herbold from the Africa Inland mission in Zaire; Dean Erickson from Columbia, South America; Wayne Thyren of Minneapolis and Mark Thyren of Bemidji, both from the Youth Investment Foundation; and James Kock from the American Missionary fellowship.

Speaking Wednesday evening from 7:30 to 8 p.m. will be Ruth Noren with special music from 8 to 8:15 and a talk by Russell Killman from 8:15 to 9 p.m. A children's hour is also planned from 8:15 to 9 p.m. with Eunice Herbold leading that group. At 9 p.m. the conference session will close with coffee and fellowship.

The Thursday, March 29, agenda includes a panel discussion from 2 to 3:30 p.m. on the topic "My Greatest Burden." The evening session will get underway at 7 p.m. with a slide presentation by Enice Herbold followed at 8 p.m. with a talk by Jim Kock. Special music will be provided from 8 to 8:15 p.m. and from 8:15 to 9 p.m. Russell Killman from the Heaven and Home Hour will speak with Eunice Herbold again handling a children's hour at the same time. Coffee will be served at the close of the session.

"Areas of Great Opportunity" is the topic of a panel to be presented Friday from 2 to 3:30 p.m. by the missionaries. Mark and Wayne Thyren will open the evening session at 7 p.m. with an hour program followed by 15 minutes of music and the Russell Killman and children's hour from 8:15 to 9 p.m. Friday's session will also close with coffee and fellowship.

Saturday, March 31, the conference schedule includes morning prayer time with the missionaries from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. and a 10 a.m. family brunch at the Best Western Inn. Reservations for the brunch must be made by Thursday by calling 681-4449. Brunch program will include music by Russell Killman and Dean Erickson delivering the message. A free will offering will be taken.

The evening agenda Saturday will include a 5:30 p.m. youth supper with the missionaries. Junior and senior high school students, college and career youth are all invited to attend. From 7 to 8 p.m. music will be provided by ; attie Erickson and Carol Brodin with a singing group from Bemidji. Message for the evening will be delivered by Dean Erickson beginning at 8:15 p.m. with coffee to be served following the conference session.

Sunday school will be held for all ages April 1 with Eunice Herbold in charge of the adult group, Mark Thyren in charge of the fifth grade and younger group, and Wayne Thyren heading the sixth grade to college age-level. The 11 a.m. morning service will include choir music with Russell Killman to deliver the sermon. The evening program will begin at 7 p.m. with all missionaries speaking about needs in their field. The youth choir will provide special music at 7:45 p.m. followed by announcements, a thank-you to conference participants, and the "Faith Promise In-Gathering." Final conference message will be delivered by Russell Killman at 8:15 p.m. with a children's hour being conducted by Mark and Wayne Thyren at the same time. Coffee and fellowship will follow the closing session.

Girl Scout Association To Meet Monday

Thief River Falls girl scout association will meet Monday, April 2, at 7 p.m. in the Franklin middle school library. Margo Gustafson, girl scout field representative and Jeanne Olson, association chairperson will conduct a workshop on girl scout badges and insignia.

Leaders are asked to bring their handbooks, leader's guide, songbook and badgebook to this meeting. A portion of the evening meeting will also be given over to camp evaluation and plans for the summer's camping program as well as planning for court of awards.

Don't trust your husband's memory; get a Times subscription.

Co-op Sales Figures Rise In Midwest

Year of extreme competitive pressures, but generally good availability of supplies contributed to record sales of $404.2 million for Midland Cooperatives, Inc., in 1978. More than 2,000 delegates and guests attending the regional cooperatives' annual meeting recently at the Radisson South hotel in Bloomington heard president Sigved Sampson report on sales and a 7.5 per cent increase in earnings to $7.7 million for the year.

A majority of Midland's sales go to supplying the production inputs for upper Midwest farmers. For this reason, events that affect the agricultural community will also have a very direct impact on Midland operations. The year 1978 was generally a good one for agriculture with net farm income reaching its second highest level in history.

This favorable atmosphere led to sales records being set in all Midland divisions with significant increases in both dollar sales and in the numbers of units sold.

Ready availability of most products last year contributed to increasing business pressures. Sampson points to very tight gross margins facing Midland and its member cooperatives in the area of petroleum products and plant foods as examples of the more demanding operating conditions. In addition to this, a series of fires created serious operating problems at the Energy Cooperative Inc., refinery owned by Midland and seven other regional cooperatives. These fires reduced production and increased costs.

Similar conditions of reduced prices and surplus products also faced Midland in the area of fertilizer. Midland's plant food supplies come from CF Industries, an interregional cooperative owned by Midland and 17 other North American cooperatives.

Sampson reported to members on the world energy situation and the effects it might have on prices and supplies in the upper Midwest. "We are operating in a very critical period of history as far as energy is concerned. We, as a nation, are not energy self-sufficient and, therefore, are highly dependent upon foreign countries some of which have unstable governments. Because cooperatives have so small a percentage of their own crude oil, we are also dependent upon these countries for much of our oil stocks. Therefore, we will feel the full effects of increasing prices and chaotic supply conditions. Our immediate problem is going to be acquiring sufficient quantities of crude oil to produce the gasoline and fuel oil to supply demands."

Sampson also reported on construction progress on Midland's new home office building in suburban Minneapolis and indicated the building would be ready for occupancy by late summer.

Midland's assets for 1978 rose to $160.7 million up from $139.5 million for the previous year.

Midland Cooperatives, Inc., is a wholesale, supply and manufacturing cooperative owned by more than 650 community cooperatives in Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, South Dakota, North Dakota, and upper Michigan.

Head Start Is PTA Subject

Lowell Enerson of the Inter-County community council at Oklee will speak on the head start program at the monthly meeting of the Goodridge PTA Tuesday, April 3, at 8 p.m. in the Goodridge school. Coffee will be served following the meeting.

Talk Time

Communication . . . that's the name of the game. As long as you keep the channels open, you are in business. People don't get divorces when they can sit across a breakfast table and smile at each other, sharing coffee and conversation. People seldom get fired when they can express themselves, make their ideas known, say what they think.

And there's another kind of communication. The kind you find in church . . . with your pastor . . . with the other people in the congregation . . . but, most of all, with God.

Don't miss out.

Hints For Homeowners

HOW TO SAVE MONEY ON LAWN MOWER REPAIR

BRIGGS & STRATTON

GETTING THE FACTS - Whether you're a novice or a skilled do-it-yourselfer, you'll find the job will be better if you use factory-original parts and easier with the factory repair manual to guide you.

It is encouraging in these inflationary times to learn that dealerships in business to repair Briggs & Stratton lawn mower engines or the mowers themselves, are helping do-it-yourselfers maintain their own equipment.

Experts from many Authorized Briggs & Stratton Service Centers state that minor repairs can easily be made by the do-it-yourselfer through the use of factory-original parts and the detailed service and repair instructions offered by Briggs & Stratton.

On display are mufflers, spark plugs, starter ropes and springs, air cleaners and other parts. They can be replaced with common tools found in most home workshops. Instructions are printed on each parts package and the Briggs & Stratton manual sells at a nominal cost.

Dealers participating in the program say that advice for the do-it-yourselfer is gladly given while factory-trained personnel are available to handle any major engine or mower repairs.

Get the tank mix advantage:
AVENGE plus 2,4-D
—control both wild oats and broadleaf weeds in barley and wheat.

Only AVENGE wild oat herbicide can be tank mixed with 2,4-D amine or 2,4-D ester formulations. Gives you control of both wild oats and broadleaf weeds by air or ground equipment in one trip across the field.

Other AVENGE Tank Mixes: In addition to 2,4-D combinations, AVENGE may also be tank-mixed with MCPA amine, bromoxynil or a combination of MCPA and bromoxynil to control wild oats and broadleaf weeds. AVENGE is the only wild oat herbicide that gives you this kind of tank mix flexibility.

AVENGE. More time to stop more wild oats.

Stop by. And let's discuss how AVENGE can help you save time and money.

Winds Around The Stadium

Following editorial is from the St. Paul Pioneer Press:

It is crisis time again for the Minneapolis domed stadium, with winds from Florida and Hawaii threatening to blow all the plans back into the cocked hat from whence they came.

The Minnesota Twins stirred up a hurricane at their board meeting in Florida when they decided that it would take a great deal of outside help to keep them afloat in the proposed dome. And the typhoon from Hawaii carries the news that (a) Max Winter never threatened to move the Minnesota Vikings and (b) the National Football League is not averse to letting the Vikings move if conditions in Minnesota become "intolerable."

Even now the Minneapolis business community, which so desperately wants the liquor-tax-backed dome, is trying to round up the support that the Twins would need to move out of Metropolitan Stadium. There is talk of heavy season ticket purchases and fat television contracts.

This is private money that the downtown dome boosters are talking about now and they have the right to do anything they want to with it. If they see some profit in subsidizing an underfunded baseball team they are welcome to make the investment. We hate to think of what putting baseball into the dome will do to the product, however.

If ever a game was meant to be played outdoors on real grass, it is baseball. Preferably, it should be played in sunshine, but this has been compromised for the sake of attendance. Wind-blown homeruns, fly balls lost in the sun (or the lights), puddles in the outfield, bad-hop singles and dust from a sliding runner are all of the fun, the game loses so much when it is played indoors on a smooth plastic rug that the subsidizers may find themselves having to increase the subsidy as bored fans decide to stay home and fertilize the lawn. Meanwhile, the shenanigans and charades continue. Winter's statement that he has never threatened to move the Vikings provokes laguther. Some of the other nonsense merely provokes.

For example, why did the state Senate agree to sit on its hands and wait for the National Football League to come up with new methods of blackmail before taking action on the stadium liquor-tax repeal bill? The proper order of events would have been for the politicians to either pass or defeat the bill on its merits and leave the next move up to the NFL. Now the Senate will be in a perfect position to be bullied after the league meeting in Honolulu.

And why is the Metropolitan Sports Facilities Commission playing tough guy with the Twins? They are talking about taking the concessions away from the Twins after this season, having notified the Twins that they will be charged $1,000 a day rent to conduct their tryout camp at the Met and have told the Twins that they must hereafter pay rent when they use the "Halsey Hall Room" at the stadium to feed groups of fans.

Are these acts of boorishness designed to drive the Twins out of the Met and into the Minneapolis dome? The club's lease expires at the end of this year and the Twins could well abandon the Met. They might go farther than downtown Minneapolis, however. Calvin Griffith hasn't made any threats, but he has moved his team before.

The Metropolitan Sports Facilities Commission was ordered to build a stadium if it was feasible. The dome hasn't looked feasible for some time now but the drive continues. Will the commission ever get back to looking for an affordable facility in a practical location?

Local Levy Option

Following editorial is from the Morris Sun:

Gov. Al Quie's option to allow school boards to impose an extra two-mill tax at their discretion may meet with stiff opposition among DFL legislators, but the proposal is a sensible one.

Allowing school districts to levy 28 mills (as opposed to the current 26 for which state aid is received) could stave off some impending cutbacks in order to balance budgets, could provide funding, add a desired program without the necessity of cutting elsewhere, and most importantly, could restore a bit of local flexibility and fund-raising power to school districts that was lost through the "Minnesota Miracle" of 1970.

DLFers are in opposition to the plan because, for the past nine years, they have sought to shape state aid to [illegible] in an attempt to [illegible] a district's property wealth. Admittedly, two mills (a mill equals $1 in tax per $1,000 of assessed valuation) would produce differences throughout the state per pupil unit, but the provision could be used as a safety valve at a local district's option.

In the Morris-Donnelly district, for example, one mill would raise roughly $33,000. At a recent board meeting, $52,000 in cutbacks were authorized to balance the budget in 1979-80, and in the meantime, initiating a vocational agriculture program in the district has gained considerable support. Basic costs of starting the program are estimated at about $21,000, with an anticipated $5,500 reimbursement from the State Department of Education, for a net cost of $15,500-$16,000.

While not advocating that a two-mill levy power be used strictly, or even at all, to fend off the cutbacks and add an agriculture program, in District 769, such levy authority could produce up to $66,000, compared to the combined total of $67,500-$68,000 in cutbacks and cost of adding the program. Perhaps the levy power would not be used, but the accessibility would provide some discretion for districts otherwise at the mercy of the legislature.

The Minnesota Miracle perhaps resembled a miracle in the early years of the decade, when state school enrollment was at its peak, but the combination of declining student numbers and the addition of state-mandated programs have put the financial squeeze on most school districts without allowing local power to solve some of the problems. The levy authority would give districts the ability to at least plot a portion of their destiny.

Another Great Show!

With the conclusion of the fourth performance in five nights of the musical "The Sound of Music", the Lincoln high school music department wrapped up another outstanding production. Director Dave Morken, orchestra conductor Jim Solsten and the students involved deserve all the accolades they have received and more.

We were particularly impressed this year by the elaborate sets, sensitive lighting and appropriate costuming. The silhouette effect of the closing scene was almost breathtaking and the staging for the wedding of Capt. Von Trapp and Maria was exceptional. Construction of the sets to allow them to be moved on and off stage a number of times was impressive, as was the appropriate use of backdrops.

Singling out individual performances for comment is perhaps unfair in a production which indicated solidarity of a total effort but some recognition is certainly due to star performers.

As the postulate transplanted to be a governess and later wife, Ruth Ferber played the role of Maria with great sensitivity for the role. Not only was her singing voice pleasant and clear as it lilted over the familiar tunes of the musical, but her acting ability kept her completely in character, even when other actors or actresses were the focal point of attention.

Jane Olson as the Mother Abbess gave the type of performance we have come to expect from someone with an exceptional talent. She seemed totally comfortable in the role and her confidence in her own vocal ability showed as she made potentially difficult music seem effortless.

Lincoln high school sports followers accustomed to seeing Tom Bjorkman direct a football offense, rush a hockey puck or smash a tennis ball learned that the mature junior has musical and dramatic talent as well as athletic prowess. We enjoyed his performance as Captain Von Trapp.

William Saetre, as usual, dominated the stage whenever he appeared. He is another Lincoln drama veteran whose performance audiences have come to expect to be superlative. As Max Detweiller in this production he did nothing to reduce those expectations. He has a sense of timing in the delivery of his lines which milks every drop of expression out of them.

Most delightful in the musical was the combined performance of the seven Von Trapp children. From coquettish Kath Achenbach as Liesel to pert little Meredith Green as Gretl, the youngsters displayed talent beyond their years. Hats off to Bill Hustad, Lisa Nelson, Rob Blankenfeld, Leslie Wiegand and Julie Hanson together with Kathy and Meredith for their efforts.

For that matter, we doff a collective hat to the entire cast and production staff in tribute and express our thanks for providing the community [illegible]

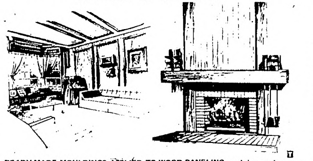
Great Possibilities For Your Home

A TOUCH OF ELEGANCE



READY-MADE MOULDINGS APPLIED TO WOOD PANELING can bring an elegant new look to an ordinary room. The fireplace, right, becomes a focal point when decorative paneling is added above the mantel.

Minor alterations like decorative mouldings applied to existing walls can bring traditional beauty to once-plain areas.

In the same way, false beams added to the ceiling, or prefinished paneling or textured plywood siding over the fireplace can give instant impact to a room.

You can make such simple, decorative additions yourself. A Colonial or Williamsburg motif is readily created with ready-made mouldings. View them as frames for panels of 1/4" plain, unfinished hardwood paneling, and you have the makings of a truly elegant wood-lined room.

Birch or maple will work well. First, place the hardwood panels over gypsum board using panel adhesive and nails. Apply the surface frames with adhesive and finishing nails.

Frames need not run vertically. You can achieve some interesting effects with narrow, horizontal frames. Use prefinished mouldings made especially for use with paneling, or the unfinished types you can paint or stain.

In a different setting, "built-up" beams can be attached directly against the ceiling if you drive fasteners into ceiling joists. No one need know they aren't the real thing.

Nail 2 x 4 or 2 x 6 supports, preferably at right angles to the joists, spacing for the number of beams you want. Add sides three to six inches deep and a bottom, all of 3/4" lumber, and there's your beam!

Redwood and cedar are good choices for a built-up beam with a natural finish. Use kiln-dried fir or clear or knotty pine darkened with stain if you prefer the look of Tudor-style exposed beams. (You can also use baseboard mouldings or casings for the beams' side pieces.)

Another room-improving device: Change the existing mantel or add one by running a 4 x 8 or 4 x 10 smooth or rough-sawn beam—or even a box structure—across the wall. Decorate full width above the mantel, or merely over the fireplace, with prefinished paneling or textured plywood siding available from Georgia-Pacific in a variety of finishes and patterns.

Be sure to picture the project in your mind before you buy. Vertical lines increase visual height, whereas horizontal lines make a room seem wider. Also, be careful not to use flammable materials near the "surround," to avoid fire hazards.

The Wikstrom Telephone Company, Inc. is planning to install mobile telephone service that will cover the area of Kittson, central and eastern Marshall, Roseau, Lake of the Woods, and Pennington counties. This system will be UHF. The service that we install will cover the area as stated above, plus any other area offering UHF. Before a system can be installed, we have to obtain an FCC license and approval of rates from the Minnesota Public Service Commission. Before these can be obtained, it is required that we have signed up enough users to support the system. Anyone interested in mobile telephone service, contact the Wikstrom Telephone Co., Inc., at Karlstad, Minnesota, 436-2121.

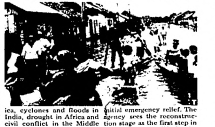
Helping The Needy When Disaster Strikes



When extensive flooding turns dry streets into churning rivers, the water often destroys precious lives, homes and possessions.

After the water recedes, the survivors are left with the grim task of burying the dead, rebuilding villages and mustering the courage to start all over again. Help is always welcome.

In disaster situations such as earthquakes, flooding and civil wars, aid comes from many sources. The agency which is consistently among the first on the scene of emergencies around the world is Catholic Relief Services.

Disaster preparedness is the hallmark of Catholic Relief Services. Begun during the Second World War as the American Catholic response to the plight of war victims, the agency today is among the largest private relief and development organizations in the world.

Years of experience in assisting the victims of natural and manmade disasters have earned for CRS the reputation as a fast and efficient purveyor of greatly needed aid.

Catholic Relief Services has ongoing projects managed through a unique network of personnel in 86 countries. When a disaster occurs, those personnel are already on the scene and can evaluate the situation to determine what help is needed.

No two disasters are exactly alike but preplanning on the part of CRS helps insure effective response. Catholic Relief Services is always ready to handle the varied emergencies such as earthquakes in Latin America, cyclones and floods in India, drought in Africa and civil conflict in the Middle East.

This immediate response to disaster is supported by the American people. Each year, the Catholic Relief Services Annual Appeal is taken in Catholic churches around the country. This collection provides the basic support for the organization, which also relies heavily on the freewill donations of concerned people of all religions.

When disaster strikes, the CRS Program Director in that country contacts Catholic Relief Services Headquarters in New York, where a warehouse full of emergency supplies is kept. As soon as the request arrives in New York, appropriate materials, such as clothing, blankets, roofing goods and medicines are trucked to nearby Kennedy International Airport for airlifting on the next plane out.

In the meantime, the Program Director arranges for supplies in neighboring countries to be transported to the scene of the disaster.

Catholic Relief Services recognizes that disaster aid entails much more than the initial emergency relief. The agency sees the reconstruction stage as the first step in building a better life for the survivors.

By providing tools and materials for rebuilding and incentive in the form of food as payment for reconstruction work, CRS helps communities get back onto their feet with dignity.

In some cases, coping with the aftermath of disaster is the first time people of a village work together for a common goal. The spirit of cooperation gives rise to ideas for community improvement projects. CRS helps groups realize these aspirations with funds, materials and technical assistance.

The disaster relief work of Catholic Relief Services begins with the onset of the emergency and continues with assistance and hope for a brighter future.

You can help with this important humanitarian work by contributing to the Catholic Relief Services Annual Appeal at your local Catholic church or by sending a tax deductible check to Catholic Relief Services, 1011 First Avenue, New York, NY 10022.

Bath Toys . . .

Make A Splash On Dry Land

Bath toys are nothing new, but toys that have equal play value both in and out of the tub are just beginning to appear in toy departments across the country. An example of this type of toy is the new, inexpensive Sea Wees collection.

For children three years and older, each four inch mermaid comes complete with its own comb and lily pad sponge. In the tub, a Sea Wee can float upright in its lily pad or recline on it. Out of the water, the doll becomes a child's constant companion. Small enough to fit in a pocket or purse, the mermaid is ready for any adventure. It's hair is long, silky and beautiful, just waiting to be washed and combed.

Manufactured by Cincinnati, Ohio-Based, Kenner Products, the Sea Wees collection consists of: blond Sandy Sea Wee; brunette Shelly Sea Wee; and redheaded Coral Sea Wee. A Sea Wees Lagoon complete with working shower, blow fish, floating sea horse, sponge coral, and vanity mirror is also available.

Mobile Telephone Service Is Already Here!

Steiner

Mrs. Alfred Solem, Rt. 2,
City, 681-3897

Community Club Meets

Steiner Community Club will meet Friday evening, March 30, at 8:30 at the Steiner hall. Lunch will be potluck.

Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Moe attended the musical, "Sound of Music" Friday evening at the Lincoln high school auditorium, together with eight other couples of the Oak Ridge Lutheran church couples club. Following the program they all assembled at the Daryl Lewis home in Norden for refreshments and to help Mr. Lewis celebrate his birthday.

When on his way home from a trip to Thief River Falls Saturday afternoon, Harold Klamar of Gatzke noticed from his airplane Alfred Solem and son Peter feeding their Angus cattle. He decided to pay them a call and landed his plane near the herd. He walked over to where Alfred and Peter were then visiting with Jim Amundgaard, who had driven over in his pickup and joined them. Jim was later a coffee guest at the Solem home.

Mrs. Ethel Moe brought her grandson, James Moe, to a meeting of the Holt 4-H club at the Village Hall in Holt Friday evening. The East share the fun preliminaries will be held in Newfolden April 23 at 7:30 and the west the same evening at the same time in Argyle. Finals will be held at Viking school April 30.

Two rinks from Thief River Falls curling club participated in the mixed bonspiel held in Grafton the past weekend. The Mr. and Mrs. Richard Jorde and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Bottem rink placed third in second event and received pewter bowls and billfolds, as prizes. The other rink included Mr. and Mrs. Donovan Liden, and Mrs. Mae Jahr and son Jeff. The Jordes and Bottems were also visitors at the home of Mrs. and Linnea Kosmatka in Grafton.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Yonke and David were weekend house guests at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Kosmatka at Grafton.

Melvin Saugen represented the Zion Lutheran church of Thief River Falls at the "Momentum for Mission" workshop in Middle River Sunday afternoon and evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Solem and Peter and Valerie Sheldon attended Bill and Donald Strickler's second production sale Wednesday afternoon at the winter shows building at Crookston.

Sunday afternoon luncheon guests at the Leonard Yonke home were Mr. and Mrs. George Rewertz of Plummer and grandchildren Paula and Sheila Wilkens of St. Hilaire.

John Solem of Grygla was a Friday forenoon coffee guest at the home of his uncle, the Alfred Solems.

Mrs. Bruce Russell, Cindi and Brenda and Mrs. Roger Rupprecht, Kristi and Karla attended the musical "Sound of Music" Friday evening at the Lincoln high school auditorium. They reported excellent performance and suggested everyone to see it.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Solem were Sunday afternoon and evening visitors at the John Thompson home in New Solum.

Sunday evening guests at the Bruce Russell home were Mr. and Mrs. Roger Rupprecht, Kristi, Karla and Kimberly of Agder.

Dedication of Organ

A large number attended the dedication service Sunday afternoon at the Silver Creek Lutheran church for its new organ. Guest speaker was organist Allen E. Larvick of New Brighton, who also played several selections. Terry Cuppett was a soloist. A congregational ham dinner was served at noon following Sunday school and morning services and a coffee time followed the afternoon program.

East Steiner Homemakers

Members of the East Steiner homemaker club met at the home of Linda Skibicki Monday evening last week for a lesson on coordinating pattern and you. Present were Sharon Jorde, Susan LaMoine, Beverly Rupprecht, Linda Hornseth, Donna Fosholm and Lorraine Sannes, besides the hostess. The West Steiner club met at the home of Violet Muzzy the following evening for the same lesson.

Hope Rachel Is Baptized

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Larson attended nine o'clock Mass at St. Edward's Catholic church in Strandquist Sunday morning when their granddaughter, Hope Rachel Kleinwachter, received the sacrament of holy baptism. Father Duane Pribula officiated at the ceremony. Sponsors were Paul Kleinwachter of St. Paul and Patricia Kleinwachter of Strandquist. Guests for dinner following the Mass at the home of Hope Rachel, her brother Kent, and parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Kleinwachter of Strandquist, were the sponsors, Paul and Patricia Kleinwachter, Miss Shirley Sands of St. Paul, grandpa Art Kleinwachter and son Thomas, and grandparents Lloyd and Harriet Larson. Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Larson were visitors and supper guests at the Hans Haarstad home in Newfolden. Other supper guests were Mr. and Mrs. Winton Forsberg of Thief River Falls.

Steiner 4-H Club Meets

Steiner 4-H club will hold their monthly meeting Monday evening, April 9 at 8 p.m. at the Steiner hall. Roll call response will be naming the favorite car. Special business will be the 4-H banner, community pride and rual life Sunday. Demonstrations are scheduled to be given by Jill Stenberg, Laureen Muzzy and Jim Courneya. Guest speaker will be Howard Person from the Pennington County extension office. Lunch will be served by the Lester Muzzy family.

Visitors at the LaVerne Rondorf home a week ago Sunday afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Rondorf of Rocksbury. The following evening Mr. and Mrs. William Rondorf were luncheon guests there.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Larson were Saturday evening visitors at the Orville Harstad home at Viking. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Harstad.

Mrs. Mike Hart, Chris and Dicky and Mrs. Elroy Enervold, all of Grand Forks, arrived at the home of their folks, the Alvin Halvorsons, Saturday morning and returned to their homes Sunday afternoon. Other Saturday visitors at the Halvorson home were Alfred Solem, Jim Moe, Pastor Dave Gabrielson of Viking, and Mr. and Mrs. Arvid Halvorson, Lisa and Aaron.

Danny Larson of Holt was a caller at the Lloyd Larson home Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Rich Wright was an evening supper guest.

Mrs. LaVerne Rondorf, Mrs. Donald Jorde, Mrs. Carl Jorde, Mrs. Alfred Solem and other members of the Rebekah circle of Trinity Lutheran church served a variety of sweet bread and visited residents at Oakland Park Nursing home Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Larson visited Wednesday afternoon with his aunt, Mrs. Mabel Furr, at her home in Thief River Falls. Later in the afternoon Jerry Muzzy was a caller at the Larson home.

Mrs. Clara Jaennette, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Ranum and Mr. and Mrs. Adam Lendobejh of Smiley enjoyed breakfast together Saturday morning at the Best Western. Afterwards the Lendobejas and Mrs. Jaennette enjoyed a ride to Red Lake Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Curt Johnson, Sheryl and Jeffry and Mrs. Clara Jaennette were luncheon guests at the apartment of Warren and Nancy Fellman Sunday afternoon and also viewed their many wedding gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Terry Lubitz, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Halvorson and Mr. and Mrs. David Halvorson were among those who participated in the spaghetti bonspiel at the Thief River Falls curling club Friday evening.

Agriculture Student From Sweden Arrived

Mr. and Mrs. Garret Reier[illegible] and Lisa met Rutger Arne Persson of Svalov, Sweden at the University of Minnesota St. Paul campus Friday, March 23. He will be living at the Reierson home until December 1, as a student training in agriculture, affiliated with the University of Minnesota. His home is on a farm in Sweden and he has had experience working on a 1500 government farm in his country.

Visitors at the Raymond Rausch home Sunday were her son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Diederich, Beth, Kyle and Alissa from Willmar. They were also callers at the Terry Lubitz home. Afternoon and evening guests at the Lubitz home were Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Augustine and Matthew.

Homebaked French Bread Can Be Last Minute Treat

Serve a warm, crusty loaf of homebaked French bread to dress up a meal for family or guests. Or turn the loaf into garlic toast, just like your favorite steak house serves.

Both of these hot breads can even be last minute inspirations when you start with ready-to-bake refrigerated buttermilk or country style biscuits. Because these biscuits carry a "use by" date on every can, you can keep a supply in the refrigerator for hot bread any time.

As a bonus, along with great eating you get important B vitamins and iron from the enriched flour used in refrigerated biscuits.

QUICK FRENCH BREAD

2 cans (10 biscuits each) Pillsbury Refrigerated Buttermilk or Country Style Biscuits
1 egg white, slightly beaten
Sesame seed

Heat oven to 350° F. Separate each can of biscuit dough into 10 biscuits. Stand biscuits on edge on ungreased cookie sheet; press together and shape ends to form a loaf. Brush lightly with egg white. Sprinkle with sesame seed. Bake at 350° F. for 30 to 35 minutes or until deep golden brown. Serve warm. 14 slices.

GARLIC TOAST

Cut baked Quick French Bread into 1/2-inch slices. Brush sides of each slice generously with bottled Italian dressing. Place on ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 400° F. for 5 minutes; turn and bake another 5 minutes or until crisp and golden. 28 slices.

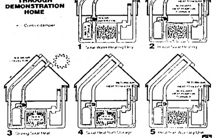
Goal of Solar Home . . .

Affordable Solar Heat



HOW SOLAR-WARMED AIR MOVES THROUGH DEMONSTRATION HOME
Control damper
1 Solar Water Heating Only
3 Storing Solar Heat
4 Solar Heat from Storage
5 Heat from Auxiliary Unit

Blowers and dampers move solar-heated air from 27 roof collectors through the BDP Company Solar Research and Demonstration Home. The system operates in five different modes depending on the need for heat and the availability of solar or stored heat.

If the basic suburban ranch house were solar heated, what would it be like?

It probably would be much like a trim 1,312-square foot ranch on the outskirts of Indianapolis—the Solar Research and Demonstration Home of the BDP Company.

A major manufacturer of home heating and cooling equipment, BDP's goal is to make solar heat economically practical for middle income families. The company, which manufactures Bryant, Day & Night and Payne equipment, hopes to learn how much energy a solar system actually saves in a home with such "average" features as single glaze windows with storms, R-13 wall insulation and panelized construction.

A by-product of the research house is that it is helping students, builders and homeowners to better understand how solar heating works. BDP prepared the diagrams above to show how heated air from roof collectors moves through the house and in and out of the rock storage bin.

The solar equipment and weather conditions affecting its operation are closely monitored by an on-location computer. Laboratory analysis of this information will lead to continued improvements in mass-produced solar equipment—and affordable solar heating.

DON'T LET SKIN PROBLEMS SCAR YOUR LIFE

"My daughter is eighteen years old and has a skin problem. She won't go out with boys, hides her face when she meets people, and is so obsessed with her looks that I am afraid it is affecting her emotionally," writes a worried mother.

A common problem—yes! A necessary problem—no!

Too often, skin problems are written off by parents as being the norm for adolescents. They are not.

Let us look at acne, the most common of skin problems among young people. It is a hormonal disturbance. The secretions of female and male hormones effect the sebaceous glands in the skin, causing them to produce more oil. As oily complexion often is the forerunner of acne, pimples, blackheads and other facial eruptions.

While the hormonal activity may very well be present during adolescence, the problem need not. If allowed to continue until it "runs its course" into adulthood, it may result in scars on the emotional as well as the physical make-up of the individual.

The American Chiropractic Association reports that the right diet, hygienic measures, exercise and specific treatment can overcome most skin problems. The association points out that diet plays an important part in skin health and beauty. In a majority of the cases of severe skin eruptions among young people, the problem can be traced directly to diet. In most cases, it comes from eating a non-balanced diet, and the wrong foods. Often, it is an intake heavy on packaged junk foods and greasy fast food restaurant menus. While hamburgers may be a teenager's delight, they don't do much for the skin of a person subject to blemishes.

It is recommended that greasy fried foods, iodized salt, spicy foods, shell fish, chocolate and animal fats be avoided. Eat plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables, and drink lots of water. Vitamin supplements are also recommended, especially Vitamin A.

Cleanliness is also important to avoidance of skin problems. The face should be washed frequently with a detergent soap. The mistake often made by victims of skin problems is to use creams and cosmetics to cover the blemishes. The best thing for your skin is soap and water; keep your skin as free of oil as possible.

While exercise may appear to have no direct relationship in the treatment of a skin problem, it does. It relieves tension, which may be a factor. Likewise, regular exercise promotes the balanced functioning of the body.

Adequate sleep is also important to the health of the skin.

For specific recommendations which may be beneficial to the treatment of a skin problem, it is advised that you visit a doctor of chiropractic. He can offer a regimen, based upon his training and experience. In his diagnosis, he may also find neurologic insults, which if treated, will correct the base of the problem.

Don't Let Your Easter Gift Lay An Egg!

The American Veterinary Medical Association urges you not to give your children rabbits, chicks or ducks for Easter. Excitement and enthusiasm over the gift often result in broken legs and crushed wings.

The injury or death of the animal is a traumatic experience for the child. Animals that survive generally end up in an animal shelter. It is impossible to place them all. Many have to be destroyed.

The veterinarians remind parents that these are outdoor animals. They cannot be housebroken and may cause serious housekeeping and health problems. Public health authorities warn that children and adults in close contact with these animals may be exposed to salmonellosis, a severe gastro-intestinal infection.

Salmonellosis is rarely fatal, but often requires medical treatment including hospitalization. Other pets as well as family members may become ill.

Because of the problems surrounding these animals, many communities have passed laws prohibiting the sale of rabbits, ducklings and chicks as pets.

Easter and the coming of spring should be a time of joy and rebirth, not a period of physical illness, psychological trauma and the needless deaths of young animals. The American Veterinary Medical Association urges parents to leave rabbits, chicks and ducks on the farm and give their children stuffed toys and chocolate bunnies instead.

Personal Goal Setting To Be Class Topic

"Personal Goal Setting" is the title of a class to be offered at the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute beginning Monday, April 9. Cost for the eight-hour course is $4. Instructor Dave Lysaker will discuss the use of personal goals to shape your future. The April 9 opening session will run from 7 to 9 p.m. in room 110.

Name Peterson To State Board

Norman Peterson, administrator of Northwestern hospital services in Thief River Falls, has been elected a member at large on the board of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Minnesota.

Change Meeting Location For Cancer Series

Change in location for the four programs on "The Nature of Cancer" which will begin Tuesday has been announced by William Vollan, Pennington county cancer society chairman. The series will be held at Room 109 in the area vocational-technical institute.

Programs will cover how to recognize a suspicious condition, how cancer spreads, importance of early treatment and methods of treatment. Meetings will run from 7 to 8 p.m.

Two programs on breast cancer are scheduled for April 3 and 5 from 8 to 9 p.m. Nurses from the county nurses office will be present to instruct breast self-examination to all those wishing this instruction. Dr. Earl Dagg or one of his associates from Northwestern hospital services radiology department will cover other methods used in diagnosis, such as mammography and thermography, when these are employed and how they are used safely.

Two programs on uterine and ovarian cancer will be conducted April 10 and 12 from 8 to 9 p.m.

Cancers of the mouth, throat and lung will be covered April 17 and again April 18 from 7 to 8 p.m., with colon and rectal cancer discussed from 8 to 9 p.m.

There will be one program on other less common cancers such as leukemia and Hodgkins disease, from 7 to 8 p.m. on April 24.

The last program of the series, "How to Protect Yourself Against Cancer", will be a summary of the methods of detection along with a film showing cancer examinations as done in the doctor's office.

Nancy Gustafson Discovers A Rewarding Career In Modeling

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Model Nancy Gustafson is an eye-catching blonde who weighs 108 pounds, stands five feet seven inches tall, has one brown and one green eye and is 18 to 35 years of age — depending on the modeling job she is working on at the time.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Knutson of rural Thief River Falls, she is a 1972 graduate of Lincoln high school and was a first runner-up for the Miss Thief River Falls title that summer. Her dad is carpentry instructor at the Thief River Falls AVTI. She married Kim Gustafson in 1974 and it was her husband who encouraged Nancy to look into the potential for modeling opportunities.

Now living in Boulder, Colo., Nancy works for the Vannoy Talent agency in Denver and has been modeling professionally for about the last two years. During an infrequent visit back home between modeling jobs recently she took time for an interview and to demonstrate for the Times camera a little of what she does and what she has learned in her chosen field of work. As the photos in this issue attest, she has learned a lot about being a photographer's model.

A couple of years ago, after earning her BA degree in communications from the University of Colorado, she wasn't sure what she wanted to do in the world of work. Although she lacked confidence in her abilities as a model, she followed the urging of her husband and enrolled for classes at the Vannoy modeling school.

"It was just by chance that I selected the best modeling school and agency in Denver," she said. "I went to classes off and on for about four months and I met a former model there who spent a good deal of time helping me. She immediately wanted to sign me on with the agency and see what I could do and I've been working fairly regularly ever since."

Nancy admits to being fortunate in a number of ways. "I was lucky to meet someone who knew the ropes and could give me a lot of help and get me started," she said. "I'm fortunate to have been able to work a lot the last two years. Some girls don't get a job for a year after finishing the modeling school. I've had excellent paying jobs this year (she's already earned more than in 1978 in total) and the chance to travel. And I have an extremely understanding husband whose understanding has made our relationship so strong."

Nancy's husband, Kim, is a branch manager for Kroy Industries which manufactures plastic components for sale to major industries. They have lived in Boulder for the past five years and currently plan to continue living there. Nancy considered going to New York City to try and hit the big time in modeling, but has decided against it, at least for the present.

"I've had friends who went there and it's really hard," she said. "You work 16 hours a day for no pay with a photographer to learn the ropes, and the cost of living is really high. It would take a lot of time away from home and I don't want that. Kim and I have our priorities, and they include living in a nice area and not letting our careers interfere too much with some of the things we want to do. Right now, New York is out of the question."

Travel is not out of the question, however, and Nancy rarely turns down a job that will call for travel. She recently finished a job for Head skis where she was gone 20 days during the month of January to ski resorts in Vermont, Heavenly Valley at Tahoe on the California-Nevada border, Vail in Colorado and Sun Valley in Idaho. She journeys to Houston, Tex., at least twice a year to shoot photos for catalogs with a photographer there and after her brief visit here she was off to Las Vegas for eight days of ramp modeling and product promotion at a ski show.

"When I work, I really work hard," she said. "I mean like 16 to 20 hours a day sometimes, and under some really trying conditions. You have to be ready to go

Summer Gasoline Supply Questioned

Concern is running high among motorists on the supply of gasoline for the coming vacation season, reports the Allstate motor club, which has been flooded with inquiries on the energy crisis.

In a review of the situation by the motor club energy secretary James Schlesinger was interviewed and stated that stringent measures might have to be taken by the federal government unless the American motoring public drastically curtails its gasoline consumption. These measures could include the closing of gasoline pumps on weekends and the rationing of gas.

Many major oil companies are taking a wait-and-see attitude. Most have already announced allocations of gasoline to dealers, amid predictions that certain types of fuel will be in short supply at times.

The consensus among the major oil companies is that the situation is tenuous, at best. Jerry Cooper, director of public affairs, planning and research for Standard Oil of Indiana, said his company's supply of oil to dealers will depend on the situation in the Middle East, particularly Iran. "There's no question about it. The situation is going to be tight. But if our dealers manage their supplies (of gasoline), there should be no shortage," says Cooper.

Gulf Oil is not dependent on Iranian crude and, as a result, was the most recent major oil company to announce allocations to dealers. That announcement was made only during the second week of March. Said Dorothy Brown, supervisor of Gulf's corporate information: "We are allocating the same amount of gas as we did last year at this time. But at the same time, demand is up about 20 per cent."

American Petroleum institute says that the current situation could have been avoided years ago if the federal government had provided an incentive to produce more oil. "The ideal situation," says R.C. Rnsz of the API, "is to encourage more drilling. This could best be accomplished by lifting federal controls from the price of oil. Why should the oil companies sink millions of

Short Course For Township Officers Set

Township officer short course will be offered by the University of Minnesota at the Best Western Inn April 4 beginning with refreshments and registration at 8:15 a.m. The program is for township supervisors, clerks, treasurers, and others interested in township government.

Purpose of the 1979 short course is to provide a one day educational program on various problems and concerns of town officers so they can keep adequate town records; make proper decisions on roads and cartways, taxation equalization, and zoning; secure adequate fire protection; adopt legislation affecting townships; conduct elections according to law; and manage township finances.

Registration fee of $10 per person includes noon lunch, refreshments, materials, and other short course expenses.

Sponsors of the short course are the Minnesota association of township officers, University of Minnesota agricultural extension service, and office of special programs.

PHTOTGRAPHER'S MODEL Nancy Gustafson finds the work physically and mentally fatiguing but financially favorable. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Knutson of Thief River Falls, she has been modeling professionally for the past two years and is now among the top models in the Denver, Colo., area. In the two-hour photo session at the Neal Fox studio, we shot about 160 photos and didn't have a single frame which would not have made an acceptable print. More photos on feature page inside this issue.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Special Awards Presented At TOPS Meeting

Annual Awards night for the TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) club was held Monday night, March 26, at St. Bernard's Catholic church basement. In addition to the TOPS and KOPS awards, with the recipients pictured elsewhere in today's Times, a number of special honors were given to chapter members.

Loraine Steiger and Norma Tauer received recognition for their perfect attendance at all meetings in 1978 and Patti Carpenter concluded the year with only two gains.

Special honors also went to Phyllis Meyers for maintaining KOPS status for five consecutive years.

Several special honors were voted by the chapter members. Patti Carpenter was selected the Most Helpful; Eileen Hutchinson, the Most Cheerful; Dorothy Nelson, the Most Generous, and Linda Helgeland was given the Volunteer award.

Regular meetings of the TOPS club are held every Monday at 7:15 p.m., at St. Bernard's Catholic church basement meeting room. Meetings are open to the public.

Chad Paulson Is Baptized At Ekelund Church

Chad Steven Paulson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Steven Paulson, received the sacrament of holy baptism during the morning services on Sunday, March 25, at the Ekelund Lutheran church. Rev. Gene Broughton officiated.

Sponsors were the child's uncles and aunts: Mr. and Mrs. David Paulson of Goodridge and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Johnson of Fosston.

For the ceremony, the child wore the long, white baptismal gown which was worn previously by his grandfather, Harry Paulson.

A turkey dinner at the Mayer Holen home followed. Present were the child's parents, his grandparents: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Paulson and Mr. and Mrs. Mayer Holen; Rev. Gene Broughton; Mrs. Enda McEnelly, Mr. and Mrs. David Paulson, Nichole and Troy, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Johnson and Michelle;

Also Mr. and Mrs. Phil Swanson, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Holen, Mr. and Mrs. David Dahlen and Stacey, Jeffery Dahlen, Bobby Paulson and Loren and Mark Holen.

Unable to be present were the child's great-grandmothers: Mrs. Myrtle Olson and Mrs. Halvor Holen of Thief River Falls.

The afternoon lunch featured a baptismal cake in the shape of a cross.

Handicapped Aided By Federal Laws

Half the eight million handicapped children in this country weren't getting an appropriate education a few years ago. One million of them were excluded entirely from the public school system.

"New laws are changing that," says Rhoda Erhardt, a consultant in occupational therapy for several schools in northwestern Minnesota and a part-time instructor at Moorhead state university, "but many parents of the handicapped don't know it.

"Some parents still hide their children at home or in institutions," she said, "afraid that the schools won't accept them or still bitter from a time not long ago when some schools did shut their doors to the handicapped."

Federal law, however, now requires a free public education for all handicapped children ages three to 18 at no expense to their parent or guardian. The law, which took effect this year, is called the Education for the Handicapped Children Act, better known as P.L. 94-142.

Although the law is quite explicit, Erhardt said, some parents are still struggling to get their children in schools. It's created such an interest in the civil rights of the handicapped that a magazine, "Closer Look," is published monthly as a guide to educational rights for parents of the handicapped. Copies are available free by writing Box 1492, Washington, D.C. 20013.

Not only do public schools have to educate the handicapped under P.L. 94-142, Erhardt said, but they must also develop an educational plan suited to each handicapped child they enroll. That means not only a lot of attention, she said, but a lot of planned attention for the handicapped, both in and outside the classroom.

The law also stipulates that handicapped children must be educated in "the least restrictive environment." That doesn't mean, Erhardt said, that a severely handicapped child must be placed in a regular classroom setting for six hours a day. It means that a handicapped child doesn't have to be isolated in a special room or institution when there's a chance for contact with other children in a regular classroom. Depending on the child, she said, it could mean placing a handicapped child in a regular classroom for one hour a day.

"The idea," she said, "is to make the handicapped feel like a member of the community as much as possible

The law is a breakthrough in civil rights for the handicapped, Erhardt said, and federal funds are available to help schools meet the law. But it has created some problems for schools that don't have people adequately trained to teach the handicapped.

Erhardt will teach a course at Moorhead state this spring designed to train a variety of professionals and non-professionals in the problems and practices of educating the handicapped. It's called "Interdisciplinary Team Approach for Children With Multiple Handicaps," a three-credit course that will meet Monday evenings from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. in MacLean Hall 127. The first class is March 12.

"Don't let the title scare you," she said. "The course is meant to show that the handicapped child needs all kinds of help and attention — from nurses, social workers, therapists, counselors, psychologists and others — parents, friends and school administrators included."

Professionals from a variety of fields will be brought in to the classroom to discuss how they, along with other professionals, and members of the community, must team up if they want to give handicapped children a proper education. The class will include interviews with parents of handicapped children and a discussion of how new legislation affects the rights of the handicapped.

To register for the course, contact the Moorhead State division of conintuing education at 236-2181.

Summer Supply Of Gasoline Is Questioned

dollars into drilling when they know that the price of that new oil will remain under government controls?"

Ensz told the Allstate motor club that there might be some spot shortages of high test unleaded gasoline because of the high cost involved in the refining process. "Some very sophisticated equipment is required to produce high test unleaded gas. And the added cost of this equipment can't be passed on to the consumer," he said.

The distribution of available oil is another factor in the nationwide situation. Standard Oil of Ohio has abandoned plans to build a pipeline aimed at moving Alaskan oil east from California. The March 13 announcement blamed government regulations for the decision. The company was also under fire by environmentalists. Project would have seen 500,000 barrles of oil a day shipped from California to a distribution center in Midland, Texas.

Some of the companies are looking at other ways of reducing the domestic crunch. Exxon has announced it will not renew contracts with third-party customers because of the growing oil shortage. An Exxon source said the first to feel the effect of this new rule will be Japan, which receives about five per cent of its needs from Exxon.

Other groups have also shown concern. The Illinois gasoline dealers association (IGOA) asked its members to voluntarily close their pumps on weekends and other state gasoline dealer associations have followed its lead. But when this announcement was made, the IGDA got a call from the White House. "The President applauded this move," says IGDA vice president Bob Esseman. "But they asked us to hold off until the impact of the proposal could be studied. In deference to the President, we backed off." That proposal for nationwide closing on weekends is now before Congress.

"TOPOLOGY" was the title of Goodridge student Mary Kiesow's science fair project which won her one of 17 purple ribbons awarded at the Northern regional science fair held March 24 on the Bemidji state university campus. Ninety students from eleven schools including Plummer, Stephen and Goodridge competed at the 28th annual science fair for ribbon and merchandise prizes entering both research paper and project categories. In addition to her purple ribbon, top honor in the regional fair, Mary received a certificate of recognition from the National Aeronautics & Space Administration and advanced to state competition.

Issue Warning Against Banned Herbicide Use

John McGuire, U.S. EPA Region V administrator, reminds consumers that most uses of the herbicides 2; 4, 5-T and silvex are now prohibited, and advises caution in the storage of the material.

On March 1, 1979 the EPA declared an emergency suspension on the major uses of the two herbicides until a full review of its impact and benefits can be completed. This action, the most drastic measure EPA can take under the law, was necessary because the spring spraying season will soon be under way. The only uses now permitted are on rice land and on sparsely populated range land, where there is little human exposure.

"While most of the nine million pounds of the herbicides used are for forest management, along rights-of-way, and for pastures, many homeowners and farmers in the Midwest commonly use them for lawn and garden work," said McGuire. "Consumers should check the labels of their lawn and garden weed-killers and herbicides to see if they contain silvex or 2, 4, 5-T, since they are common ingredients in products with many different brand names.

"EPA is very concerned that existing stocks be secured safely out of reach, and in accordance with storage instructions on the products' labeling, until EPA issues a final order after cancellation proceedings," McGuire added.

Any sale, distribution or use of a suspended herbicide during its suspension period is illegal and may be punished by substantial penalties. EPA will be issuing stop sale, use or removal orders to all registrants of 2, 4, 5-T and silvex, as well as to all manufacturers.

Anyone holding quantities of these products must stop any further distribution or use. Stocks should be stored in an out-of-the-way area until EPA issues a final order after cancellation proceedings. Complete cancellation usually takes between one and two years.

On March 7, 1979 Dow Chemical Company and 10 other manufacturers and users of the herbicides filed suit in Federal court appealing the suspension order. That motion was rejected by the Court.

Health Care Clinic Set In Newfolden

Blood pressure and foot care clinic will be held Thursday, April 12, at the Newfolden senior meals center from 1 to 2 p.m. for the Newfolden residents of all ages. Nurses from the Marshall-Kittson county nursing service will be taking the blood pressures and giving foot care. There will be a charge of $1.00 for each individual having his or her blood pressure checked and an additional $1.00 charge for foot care.

Gustafson Is Employed As Denver Model

any time you get a call. Many times I have had something planned for a weekend and then the phone rings. . .and there goes my weekend."

One rigorous day in particular involved the Head ski poster shooting. The photographer wanted a sunrise shot on a mountain top. Five blonde models including Nancy were up at 2:30 a.m. to get made up and ready, drove to the garage where the vehicles were waiting at 4:30 a.m., and were on the moutain top at 5 a.m. for the sunrise. They were dressed in jeans and jean jackets and temperature was 20 below zero.

After shooting photos until noon, the photographer decided he also wanted some sunset shots. The group came down off the mountain for a couple of hours, went back up at 3 p.m. and didn't return until 7:30 p.m. That made for a 15-hour day. . .and it was a Sunday at that!

Modeling for a similar shooting a week earlier, Nancy was sure she had suffered frostbite in her hand because of bitterly cold weather with a wind chill factor of 30 below. Her hand throbbed for two days afterward. A frost-bitten nose or check or hand could be disastrous for a photographer's model who must be as blemish-free as possible.

"Some people call modeling a glamour field," Nancy said. "For me it's just a job. You can avoid a lot of hang-ups by looking at it that way. It's true that you are hired because of your looks or how you look, but I don't like to work with people who are stuck on their own appearance and that's not the way I want to be.

"When I get home from work I climb into my comfortable jeans and a sweatshirt and my Adidas and pile my hair on top of my head or in a pony tail. I wear very little make-up off the job. I'm sure that when my neighbors see me carrying out the garbage or out running in my sweatsuit they wonder about my ability to be a model.

"On the job I do all that I can to be as attractive as possible to help sell a product for the people I am working for. But if people think I'm going to dress in the latest fashions and spend an hour putting on my face to go down to the market for a pound of hamburger. . .well, they can think that if they want to but it just isn't me. I like being myself."

It would seem to be a healthy attitude for someone in a profession where beauty is a big part of the business and success is dependent upon appearance. But Nancy appears to have her act together and a very mature attitude about herself and her work.

"I think a person who is attractive has more doors open than someone who is unattractive," she said. "But I don't walk down the street thinking everyone is looking at me or should be looking at me. I don't even consider it. I know darn well I'm not perfect; I'm very aware of many imperfections.

"Modeling is an incredible illusion. That's why when someone asks me my age (she's really 25) I say I'm 18 to 35. It's to my advantage to be able to look like a teenager with a can of Coke or a mother of three with an Excedrin headache. You can do so much with wardrobe and hair style and make-up. It's incredible."

When Nancy looks upon modeling as a job, she recognizes it is a very good job. Now ranking among the more successful models in the Denver area, her modeling fees are in the range of $50 to $60 per hour with day rates of $350 to $400 per day. Her agency deducts a 15 per cent commission for lining up the interviews and charges the client an additional five per cent for services.

"It's a highly competitive business," Nancy said. "My agent is out all the time looking for work with photographers or national companies. And I work to establish my own reputation for dependability and responsibility. When someone needs a blonde for a product shot, I want them to instinctively think of me. That's why I want to work as much as I can, to keep fresh, to be in the know."

Although she wants to work often, Nancy has turned down a number of jobs for moral or other reasons. "I have my standards and I try to live up to them," she said. "A couple of weeks ago, for instance, the agency called and said that Playboy magazine was in town interviewing for the centerfold. That's the kind of interview I don't even consider. There's a saying in the advertising business that 'sex sells'. I believe a good model can project sensuality if it's called for without selling a body."

Nancy has mixed emotions about her work being at odds with the women's liberation movement. "I see nothing wrong with selling attractiveness," she said. "While I recognize that women are as smart as men and have many comparable abilities, they are nice to look at. . .as are men, each in their own way. I feel sorry for the women who feel they have to go marching out in their suits of armor to try and prove a point."

A lighted photo of Nancy about 6x8 feet in size recently was on display in the airport at Denver. It showed her in hardhat and a vivid red tank top, holding a jack-hammer at a construction site. It's true, she didn't look like your run-of-the-mill construction worker. One day her husband came back from a trip and noted that someone had pasted a large sticker diagonally across the photo which stated simply, "SEXIST".

"It didn't bother me," Nancy said. "I didn't think it was sexist. But it gives you an idea of some of the conflicts we can run into in this business. But I have had jobs where I've thought to myself, 'Oh boy, if Gloria Steinem would see me now. . . .'"

To keep looking good, Nancy tries to keep on some sort of training regimen. She avoids sugar and foods made from white flour and she tries to run, swim or jump rope every day. "I'm a bit of a yo-yo," she admits. "I'll starve one day, over-eat the next, and then starve the day after to make up for what I over-ate. But the day after you have those two pieces of blueberry pie you may get a call to interview for a job where a good figure is necessary. You have to be ready any time."

Nancy says about 70 per cent of her work as a photographer's model is in product advertising and only about 30 per cent in fashion. She does very little ramp modeling since her 5'7" height is short for that type of work. Doing a good job for the camera is emotionally fatiguing, she said, because there is effort involved in creating a mood and maintaining a level of intensity with sensitivity.

Much of Nancy's off-work hours are devoted to personal care. Make-up for the camera is heavy and requires more than ordinary effort for removal. Hair problems are compounded by popping hot rollers in and out during a day of shooting (a good model should be able to model three outfits for photos in 15 minutes) and hot oil treatments for deep conditioning are essential. A pedicure is necessary at least twice a week.

"Do I spend a lot of time on keeping up my appearance? Just ask my husband!" she laughed.

For some of Nancy's friends, marriage and modeling don't mix. "It just doesn't work for them," she said, "so they either quit modeling — or they quit being married. Kim and I talk about our careers and we make our decisions on the basis of what we believe is best for both of us. It works out really well."

Nancy expects to keep at her work for at least the next three years. She enjoys the challenges and the travel... and the money. Maybe later she would like to try her hand at acting, something she has had a little exposure to and enjoys. If she has the talent for that as she does for modeling, success is assured.

Use Instrument Trainer In Ag Aviation Dep't.

A Frasca 101G instrument trainer is now in operation in the agricultural aviation department at the University of Minnesota technical college, Crookston (UMC).

With more emphasis being put on instrument flying, the agriculture division felt the need for more year-round training for students. The simulator, set up temporarily in Owen Annex, can be operated even when the weather is bad.

"It provides better use of time. When it's really cold outside, 15 degrees or below, we just don't fly," said Larry Leake, assistant professor of agricultural aviation. "I feel we are giving better training for less cost."

Wangberg To Visit Roseau Sat., April 7

Lieutenant Governor Lou Wangberg will accompany Representative Myron Nysether to the men's home district Saturday, April 7 to attend the annual meeting of the Roseau electric cooperative.

The lieutenant governor will address the 39th annual REA a day meeting at 2:30 p.m., after joining Rep. Nysether and Meridith Haslerud, manager of the Roseau electric cooperative, for the traditional dinner sponsored by the cooperative and served at the churches in Roseau.

Wangberg will visit with local citizens at a "listening hour," to be held at the Guest House in Roseau, from 11 a.m. until noon on Saturday. He will return to the Guest House later in the day as well, for a press conference from 1:30 to 2 p.m. All members of the press in the area are invited to attend.

"It is always a pleasure to visit with the people in this part of Minnesota that I call home," says Lieutenant Governor Wangberg. "It is especially valuable because not only is my perspective maintained when talking with the citizens, but the feeling of isolation from them, sometimes felt in the hurried activity of the state capitol, is lessened. I look forward to this chance to listen to fellow Minnesotans."

Bemidji State Dean's List Is Announced

Winter quarter dean's list for Bemidji state university, released recently by Dr. Richard Beitzel, vice president for academic affairs, included a number of students from this area. Bemidji state students carrying 12 or more quarter hours during any one term and earning a "B" or better average are listed on the dean's list which is published quarterly.

Among those qualifying were Thief River Falls students Pamela Berg, Gary Halvorson, Frank Hazard and Allen Narverud and Red Lake Falls residents Lucy Derosier, Jared Raebel and Michael Schmitz.

Also included on the dean's list were Nancy Cwikla of Middle River, John Helley of Plummer, Jane Bergeron and Rhonda Rolandson, both of Oklee and Linda Bjornrud, Cheryl Eveland and Wanda Holmaas, all of Newfolden.

Help Available For Overdue Utility Bills

Minnesota public service commission (PSC) In December 1978 issued an order prohibiting public utilities regulated by the PSC from disconnecting residential customers.

That order is effective only through April 1, 1979. If persons are not able to pay their utility bills they may be eligible for assistance under a federal emergency energy assistance program. Whether eligible or not, persons should contact their utility company to identify their problems.

Utility customers with questions relative to their eligibility for federal assistance should contact their local community action agency immediately since there are only funds available to help one out of every three households eligible. Most community action agencies are accepting applications on a first come, first serve basis and early applications are imperative if financial assistance is needed.

Utility companies will also assist persons in paying the overdue bills through extended payment plans. Utility customers are urged to call their utility companies to try to make special arrangements for paying their outstanding bills.

Approve SBA Loans For 35 MN. Companies

Paul W. Jansen, district director of the Minneapolis district office of the small business administration, announced this week that $4,059,500 in SBA loans had been approved for 35 Minnesota companies in the month of February.

This included four loans, amounting to $488,000, which were loans to minority owned firms, making the minority component of the February loan portfolio 11.4 per cent of total loans and 12 per cent of total loan dollars. Projected additional employment created as a result of these loans is 400 jobs.

Direct management assistance counseling was provided to 637 Minnesota firms through the small business administration's in house counselors or through support groups like the service corps of retired executives and the 10 colleges participating in the small business institute program.

Chippewa Tribe Funds Awarded To Ease Needs

Plan for the use and distribution of funds awarded the Lake Superior and Missippi bands of Chippewa Indians, under dockets 18C and 18T, became effective as of Feb. 1, 1979, according to an announcement by Darrell Wadena, president of the Minnesota Chippewa tribe.

Pursuant to the Indian judgment funds act of Oct. 19, 1973, the plan provides that the secretary of the interior shall divide the funds on an 80-20 per cent basis. Eighty per cent is to be utilized for a per capita distribution to each enrolled Mississippi and Lake Superior band member born on or prior to and living on the effective date of the plan. Twenty per cent is earmaked for planned use to meet other social and economic needs of the bands under the settlement.

The distribution roll shall contain the names of persons enrolled as members of the Mississippi and Lake Superior bands as of the effective date of Feb. 1, 1979.

Mississippi and Lake Superior band applicants who filed applications on or before April 20, 1979, and who are determined to be eligible for enrollment pursuant to the membership requirements specified in the tribal constitution and by-laws will be eligible for the awards. Persons who have already applied for enrollment need not file new applications, Wadena said.

An amount equal to a per capita share shall be withheld for each rejected applicant who has appealed such rejection, pending a decision on appeal by the secretary of interior.

The per capita shares of living competent adults shall be paid directly to them. The per capita shares of minors and those determined to be legal incompents shall be placed in individual Indian money accounts.

Rose Garbow, tribal operations officer, Minnesota agency, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Bemidji, Minnesota, may be contacted for further information. Her telephone number is 218-751-1150.

The Triangle Shirtwaist Co. fire in New York, March 25, 1911, which caused the death of 146 workers, led to establishment of the New York Factory Investigating Commission and eventual improvement in factory conditions, according to the U.S. Department of Labor's "Important Events in American Labor History."

PRICHARD BROS., INC.
Ph. 681-4324 Thief River Falls

CITY FIRE TRUCKS found a new home Friday when the Thief River Falls fire department officially began occupation of the new fire hall. The department had been housed in Wilson Bros. garage since July of 1978 while the old fire hall was demolished, the site prepared and a new facility constructed. City firemen agreed to undertake some of the interior finishing work in the new fire hall such as painting, laying carpet, etc. to cut costs and will now work full force to complete those chores. A grand opening is being planned for the facility later this spring.

Tillie LaCoe Services Held Here Today

Mrs. Tillie LaCoe, 82, a resident of Thief River Falls for the past 80 years, died Friday morning at the CNC unit at Northwestern hospital, where she had been a resident for some time.

The funeral Mass for Mrs. Tillie LaCoe was offered today (Monday) at 11 a.m., at St. Bernard's Catholic church. Rev. James Bernauer was the celebrant. Music was provided by Mary Amundson, organist, and St. Bernard's Ladies choir. Interment will be in the church cemetery with the Green Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Howard Comstock, Jerrald Nelson, Ward Votava, Armond Sauve, Arthur Lull and Kenneth Maidment.

Mrs. LaCoe, the former Tillie Philamine Fontaine, was born Sept. 2, 1896 at Junction City, Wis., to Alphonse and Victorine Durand Fontaine, now deceased. At the age of two years, she moved with her family to Thief River Falls, where she had since resided. She attended school in Thief River Falls and was married here on Oct. 18, 1915 to Eugene LaCoe, a railroad employee.

She was a long-time member of St. Bernard's Catholic church and the Catholic Daughters of America.

Surviving are a son, Bernard LaCoe, Thief River Falls; one daughter, Mrs. Duane (Pearl) Battleson, also of Thief River Falls; 11 grandchildren, 23 great-grandchildren, and a sister-in-law, Mrs. Nels (Selma) Fontaine, Thief River Falls.

She was preceded in death by her husband, who died Jan. 21, 1973; a son, Ernest, who died April 22, 1973; one great-granddaughter, three sisters and two brothers.

Mrs. Russell DeMarais, 30, Dies At RLF

Mrs. Russell (Theresa) DeMarais, 30, of Red Lake Falls died Sunday morning at St. John's hospital in that city.

Funeral services for Mrs. Russell DeMarais will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. at St. Joseph's Catholic church in Red Lake Falls. Rev. Gerald L. Noesen will be the celebrant. Interment will be in St. Joseph's cemetery.

Vigil Prayer service will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., at the Petterson Funeral chapel at Red Lake Falls where the body will be reposing.

A complete obtiuary will be published in a later edition of the Times.

Edwin Hoyum Rites Set At Our Saviors

Edwin O. Hoyum, 69, of Thief River Falls died Friday evening at St. Luke's hospital at Fargo, N.D.

Funeral services for Edwin O. Hoyum will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m., at Our Saviors Lutheran church with Rev. Eugene Enderlein officiating. Interment will be in the Reiner cemetery.

The body will repose at the Green Funeral home Tuesday afternoon and evening and at the church for one hour prior to the time of services. A complete obituary will be published in Wednesday's edition of the Times.

Services Held At Oklee For Knute Sordahl

Funeral services for Knute Sordahl, 83, of rural Oklee, were held Saturday at 2:00 p.m., at Zion Lutheran church, Oklee. Sordahl died Monday, March 26, at Northwestern hospital, Thief River Falls, where he had been a patient for two weeks.

Rev. Charles L. Gunderson officiated at the services. Nancy Hendrickson was the organist and Jim and Grant Gjovik provided the vocal selections with Mrs. Roy Gjovik as accompanist. Interment will be in the church cemetery with the Petterson Funeral home, Oklee, in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were LeRoy Rahier, George Lee, Clarence Johnson, Tom Melby, Larry O'Neill and Grunde Austad.

Knute Sordahl was born in Crookston on Aug. 23, 1895 to Torkel and Ingeborg Hegtvedt Sordahl. He lived his entire life in Equality township, Red Lake county, rural Oklee, on the farm which his parents homesteaded.

He is survived by two brothers: Ben Sordahl, Roseau, Ole of Bellevue, Wash.; a sister, Annie Sletvold, Oklee; four nephews and four nieces.

Two brothers: Anders and Andrew, preceded him in death.

Services Held For Mrs. Gerda Sagmoen, 87

Funeral services for Mrs. Gerda Sagmoen, 87, of 609 North Arnold, and formerly of the Rosewood community, were held Saturday at 3 p.m., at the Green Funeral chapel. Mrs. Sagmoen died Wednesday morning at Northwestern hospital, following a stroke suffered three weeks previously.

Rev. James Mattson, pastor at Zion Lutheran church, officiated at the services. Mrs. Richard Larson served as organist and soloist. Interment will be in the Rindal cemetery.

Pallbearers were Lawrence Ring, Ray Wagner, James R. Olson, Glenn Jorde, Arthur H. Peterson and Ray C. Olson.

Mrs. Sagmoen, the former Gerda Henrika Johnson, was born May 7, 1892 in Stode, Sweden to Erick and Khristina Johnson, now deceased. She attended school in Sweden. In July of 1904, she immigrated to the United States with her family. They settled in New Solum township, Marshall county, near Rosewood, where she completed her schooling.

On Dec. 12, 1912, she was united in marriage to Charles Sagmoen, a carpenter. The couple lived in the Rosewood community until 1939 when ill health forced Sagmoen to retire. The couple then moved to Thief River Falls where Mrs. Sagmoen was employed as a cook at Mercy hospital for 11 years.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Walter (Vandella) Chilstrom, Minneapolis; three sons: Borden Sagmoen, Seattle, Wash.; and Byron and Bartlett, both of Thief River Falls; eight grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren, and one sister, Mrs. Clara Chappell, Alberta, Canada.

She was preceded in death by her husband, who died in 1963, two daughters, who died in infancy; one brother, Albin Johnson, and two sisters: Mrs. Emil Blomberg and Mrs. Ed Rye.

Pallbearers were Phillip Wold, Peter Wold, Jon Vigness, Charles Vigness, Steven Efteland and Rodney Hill.

Peter Efteland, a son of the late Jonas and Marie Efteland, was born April 7, 1888 at Shelly. He attended school and grew to manhood there. On July 11, 1917, he was married in Thief River Falls, to Olga Stenne. Since then, he had made his home here, working for many years on road construction. Prior to his retirement, he was employed as a carpenter.

The Eftelands observed their 50th wedding anniversary in 1967.

Surviving are a son, Stewart Efteland, Minneapolis; two daughters: Mrs. Ingvald (Minnie) Wold, Viking, and Mrs. Lewis (Edith) Hill, Leonard; 12 grandchildren, 13 great-grandchildren, two great - great - grandchildren; and two sisters: Mrs. Josephine Vigness and Mrs. Arlie (Olga) Peterson, both of Thief River Falls.

He was preceded in death by his wife, who died in 1971; four brothers and three sisters.

Services Today For Clarence Lappegaard, 74

Clarence Lappegaard, 74, a lifetime resident of the Thief River Falls community, died Thursday at Northwestern hospital.

Funeral services for Clarence Lappegaard will be held today (Monday) at 2 p.m., at the Green Funeral chapel where the body is reposing. Rev. Eugene Enderlein, pastor at Our Saviour's Lutheran church, will officiate. Interment will be in Greenwood cemetery.

A complete obituary will be published in Wednesday's edition of the Times.

Rites Held At Terrebonne For Mrs. E. Paradis

Mrs. Ernest Paradis, 75, of Terrebonne, died Tuesday at St. John's hospital in Red Lake Falls. Mrs. Paradis had been in failing health for the past 12 years.

The Liturgy of the Funeral for Mrs. Ernest Paradis was offered Friday at 10 a.m., from St. Anthony's Catholic church in Terrebonne, rural Red Lake Falls. Rev. Larry Wieseler officiated. Interment was in the church cemetery with the Petterson Funeral home, Red Lake Falls, in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were George Perreault, Richard Sauve, and Joseph, Richard, Steve and Roger Paradis.

Mrs. Paradis, the former Doara Laundry, was born Oct. 11, 1906 at Terrebonne to Joseph and Philomene Collette Laundry. She was united in marriage to Ernest Paradis in February of 1924 at Terrebonne where the couple farmed until retiring.

She was a member of the Ladies of St. Ann Sodality.

Surviving are her husband, four sons: Ronald Paradis, Brooks; Robert of Little Rock, Ark.; and Mark and Donald, both of Terrebonne; six daughters: Mrs. Adelore (Betty) Paquis, Oklee; Mrs. Onizime (Henriette) Champagne, Mrs. Alfred (Ruth) Carriere, Mrs. Richard (Irene) Mussatti, and Mrs. Duane (Grace) Stucy, all of South Milwaukee, Wis.; and Mrs. Glen (Patricia) Bower of Las Vegas, Nev.; 49 grandchildren, 25 great-grandchildren, and one brother, Louis Laundry of Terrebonne.

She was preceded in death by one son, Tom, her parents, four brothers and four sisters.

Rites Held Here Sat. For Christ Windsnes, 85

Funeral services for Christ Windsnes, 85, of Maple Lake, were held in Thief River Falls Saturday at 10:30 a.m., at the Green Funeral chapel. Windsnes died Tuesday at Riverview hospital at Crookston.

Rev. Jay Borchert officiated at the services. Melodee Rupprecht was the organist and Mrs. Donald Rupprecht and Mrs. Roger Rupprecht provided the vocal selections. Interment will be in the Oak Dale cemetery at Crookston.

Pallbearers were Donald Rupprecht, Roger Rupprecht, Harold Storhaug, Roy Storhaug, Vernon Neuschwander and Lawrence Neuschwander.

Military honors were accorded by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Christ Windsnes, a son of the late Martin and Karen Windsnes, was born Feb. 11, 1894 at Mayville, N.D. He was a veteran of World War I, serving in the U.S. Army. Following his discharge, he began working for the Minneapolis Bridge company. Since retirement, he had made his home at Maple Lake.

He was married in Thief River Falls on Dec. 29, 1921 to Carrie Glende. She died in 1969.

He is survived by two brothers: Morris Windsnes of Grygla and Peter of Hoquim, Wash.; five sisters: Olga Storhaug and Mrs. Otto (Edna) Rupprecht, both of Thief River Falls; Mrs. Willie (Palma) Neuschwander, Grygla; Anna Sandberg, Pamona, Calif.; and Mrs. John (Clea) Freitag, North Branch; and several nieces and nephews.

In addition to his wife and parents, he was preceded in death by one sister and two brothers.

Services Held For Amanda Stohlmann, 94

Funeral services were held at Gaylord today (Monday) for Mrs. Amanda Stohlmann, 94, of this city. Mrs. Stohlmann died Tuesday at Northwestern hospital.

Services were held at 11 a.m., at the Immanuel Lutheran church with Rev. Paul Borgman officiating. Interment was in the St. Paul cemetery at Gaylord with the Green Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Stohlmann, the former Amanda Schoppenhorst, was born in Gaylord on Nov. 29, 1884 to William and Margarette Schoppenhorst. She attended school and grew to womanhood at Gaylord. On Oct. 27, 1937, she was united in marriage to August Fred Stohlmann. After their marriage, the couple made their home in Eugene, Ore. Following her husband's death on April 14, 1950, Mrs. Stohlmann continued to live in Eugene until 1974, when she came to Thief River Falls to make her home.

She is survived by a niece, Mrs. Ray Semrud of Thief River Falls.

In addition to her husband and parents, she was preceded in death by one brother and a sister.

When a bereaved family makes its first call at the funeral home for arrangements, usually they are grief stricken, perhaps physically exhausted, frightened, not knowing what to expect or what is expected of them. It is a most difficult time for the family. We trust that these 'open letters' will provide some advance knowledge of funeral arrangements to ease the burden.

Respectfully,

MSU Summer Theatre Seeks H.S. Students

High school students who are toying with careers in theatre, radio and television can get a taste of the real thing this summer at Moorhead state university.

The university's high school summer theatre company, entering its tenth season, will open its fast-paced four-week schedule of workshops, rehearsals and productions on June 11. Interested junior and senior high school students must apply by May 1 if they want to be considered for one of the 40 openings.

During the past decade more than 400 high school students have become part of the summer theater company, acquiring down-to-earth experience from professionals in threatre and broadcasting. In the month-long, seven-day-a-week schedule, the high schoolers are immersed in seminars and rehearsals. They learn, and then do it themselves: staging a full-length play for the Fargo-Moorhead public, taking over the campus radio station, taping television commercials and newscasts and shooting experimental films.

"There's not a program like it in the country," says Ted Larson, an assistant professor of speech and theatre at Moorhead state who runs the summer production company. "We're unique because we not only teach the students, but we let them perform like professionals — in real broadcasts and live theatre."

Students who've undergone apprenticeships in the summer company have come from the five-state Upper Midwest, Canada and even California. One of its graduates has worked in films with French mime Marcel Marceau, others are teaching and many are in radio and television broadcasting.

"We try to give them a realistic view of what it's like to be in the business," Larson said. "Some learn quickly that they're not cut out for the stage. Others catch a spark and dig in for careers."

The students — when not rehearsing — are routed through workshops ranging from make-up, lighting, dance and camera technique to acting and voice. They're also exposed to weekly state productions by the university's professional company, The Straw Hat Players, and tour local broadcasting studios.

At the same time, Larson said, the kids get to play college. They work with university professors and live in the dormitories (local students, however, may live at home).

Directors and instructors from the MSU Theatre staff the company along with guest professionals. Included on this year's staff is Eddie Gasper, a veteran of dozens of Broadway shows including "West Side Story." He's appeared as a dancer on several network television shows and in the movie "Sweet Charity." Gasper is now on the Moorhead state theatre faculty.

To apply for the summer company, stage or broadcasting experience isn't required. But interest is.

Tuition is $100 plus room and board. Some scholarships are available. For applications, contact your high school counselor or drama director, or write: Ted Larson, director, High School Summer Theatre Company, Dept. of Speech Communication, Moorhead State University, Moorhead, NN 56560.

Hamline Offers 10 Fellowships To Transfers

Presidential fellowship competition for the 1979-80 academic year was recently announced by Jerry E. Hudson, president of Hamline University, St. Paul.

Each year ten outstanding students from Minnesota community colleges are selected as fellowship recipients. The selection is made by a committee of Hamline faculty and previous fellowship winners and based on academic achievement, recommendations from college personnel and a written essay.

Applications for the special program will be accepted until April 23. As presidential fellows, the students are awarded scholarships in varying amounts from $200 to full tuition of $3,400.

In addition, they are invited to participate in special honors activities including weekly luncheons, discussions and convocations directed by Donovan Hull, a member of the Hamline faculty.

To be considered for a fellowship, applicants must have obtained a cumulative grade point average of at least 3.5, finished two years of community college work before enrolling at Hamline, and completed the special presidential fellowship application.

The presidential fellowship program is one of the programs administered by Hamline's office of community college programs for the benefit of community college transfer students. Additional information and fellowship applications can be obtained by contacting L. Randolph Lowry, director, at (612) 641-2378.

Honor Octave Chanute On Airmail Stamp

A pair of 21-cent international airmail stamps featuring Octave Chanute, an American engineer and aviation pioneer, was issued March 29 in Chanute, Kansas. First day city is named for Chanute, who was an outstanding engineer. He specialized in railroads and railroad bridges before turning his attention to aviation. In 1896, he designed his famous biplane hang-glider. With its excellent rigging, his hang-glider became a standard for future glider design, and he is honored in the aviation world for his great influence upon aeronautics.

The stamps are the second issue in the new pioneer aviation series of international airmail stamps, honoring American aviation pioneers and significant aviation developments. The series began in 1978 with the issuance of a pair of 31-cent international airmail stamps featuring the Wright brothers.

Procedures for ordering first day cancellations are as follows: Customers are encouraged to purchase their own stamps at their local post offices and affix them to their own envelopes. Covers bearing customer affixed stamps will be given preferential service. All envelopes must be addressed and peelable return address labels are recommended for this purpose. Stamps must be affixed in the upper right corner of the envelope, approximately one quarter inch from the top and one quarter inch from the right side. Return addresses should be placed on the right side of the envelopes at least 5/8 of an inch up from the bottom. Filler of postal card thickness should be inserted in each cover. Not later than April 13, orders must be postmarked by that date, the envelopes may be forwarded to "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Chanute, KS 66720." No remittance is required.

To have the postal service affix stamps, except for affixing stamps and addressing orders, follow the procedures listed above. Orders should be addressed to "Chanute Stamps, Postmaster, Chanute, KS 66720." Cost is 21 cents per stamp to be affixed to covers. Personal checks in the exact amount will be accepted as remittance for orders up to the limit of 50 covers. Postage stamps and cash are unacceptable as payment. Orders must be postmarked no later than April 13.

RECEIVING A CHECK from Grygla Lions director Bert Amundson is Mrs. Elizabeth Larson, for whose benefit a dance was held recently. Vance Wiseth of Goodridge, who was also to be a recipient of funds from the dance, donated his half of the proceeds to Mrs. Larson "because she needs the money more than I do." Mrs. Larson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tojus Johnson of Grygla, is paralyzed from the shoulder blades down following a motorcycle accident in Nevada. Earlier information provided to the Times indicated that her husband Jim had been killed in the accident. He received a fractured ankle and is pictured in the above Grygla Eagle photo with the couple's two children, Gwendy and Lori.

60 Per Cent Of Students Are Labeled Deviant

by Jeanne Hanson
University News

Sixty per cent of elementary school students are labeled "behavior problems" by their teachers at least once during their elementary school careers, according to results of the first research project ever to follow a large, representative group of students through their first years of schooling.

The finding raises serious questions about schools' expectations of children and how children are led to feel about themselves, their school work, and their schools, according to University of Minnesota psychoeducational studies researcher Rosalyn Rubin.

"There's something wrong if a majority of students are labeled 'deviant'," Rubin said. "And the problem certainly must not lie solely in the child."

The study found that boys are considered especially "deviant," with more than two-thirds of them labeled "a behavior problem" by one or more of their elementary school teachers. In any one year, more than a third of the boys were classified this way, Rubin said, while the percentage of girls labeled as problems in any one year began at 25 per cent in first grade and declined to about 13 per cent by the end of elementary school.

Each year of the study, many children were labeled behavior problems for the first time. This lack of consistency in teacher standards makes it difficult for students to adjust and makes predictions from year to year quite uncertain, Robin said.

Only about seven per cent of the children were called behavior problems by all of their teachers, Rubin said.

The high number of so-called "behavior problems" is surprising since the 1,613 students followed in the University of Minnesota project were typical urban, suburban, and rural white children of all intelligence and socio-economic levels. Although the total percentage is high, the yearly percentage of problem students, 25 per cent, is in line with previous studies done over only one year, Robin said.

Since teachers are using their own standards to label students, their standards are crucial for several reasons, Rubin said.

First, teacher judgments like these suggest that elementary schools may be expecting their students to behave too perfectly, she said. "Rules against chewing gum, leaving one's seat without permission, marching out of step, and talking before raising one's hand are common," Rubin said. "Yet standards like these may not be necessary to the learning process or the conduct of the class."

Students who wouldn't otherwise be thought of as "behavior problems" may be labeled as such because they break these nonessential rules. "The limits must be pretty narrow for 60 per cent of the students to be transgressing them," Rubin said.

Second, teacher judgments of behavior are the first step in diagnosis and referral for many school problems. An overestimate of behavior problems could lead to unnecessary, futile, and anxiety-provoking tests for elementary school students, she said.

Being called a "behavior problem" can affect a student's self-esteem, attitude toward school, and academic progress, Rubin said. "If the teacher sees you as a problem, that elementary school year can be difficult."

Parents involved should help their children adjust and get perspective on the situation, Rubin said, adding that the big step of requesting a change of teacher should only be undertaken if the child is under severe stress.

"Parents should keep their perspective too," she said, "and realize that, if there are no other signs of trouble, their child will probably not have a problem for very long.

"Behavior problems lie in some kind of interaction between the child, the school, and the teacher," she said. "School districts with a choice of educational alternatives for students, such as open schools, traditional schools, and continuous progress schools, are in a better position to have fewer behavior problems."

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

I would like to comment on a news letter on This Week Is National Wildlife Week reported by Robert Farmes, Frank Swenson, Gerald Maertens, George Davis and Terry Wolfe.

They list the deer harvest success from 1972 to 1978 for Kittson, Red Lake, Roseau, Pennington, Marshall and Polk counties. In 1972 there were 9,125 harvested and this has been continuously dropping every year to this last year of 1978 it is down to a low of 3,202 deer.

I don't dispute this figure at all. I think they are right. Most of the people living in the area have known this for the last seven or eight years.

But I do have my reservation about where they say the major problem is loss of habitat. This may be true in some of the counties, but habitat is not short in eastern Marshall county. In the Grygla-Gatzke school district the state and federal government owns approximately 67 per cent of the land. Private ownership is only 33 per cent of 171,590 acres and out of these acres of private land only about 98,000 acres are cropland. Just how much woods and brush do we need for the deer?

Last fall the first day of the doe and fawn season I hunted about eight miles southwest of Grygla and the first morning that whole area was covered with hunters in the brush and on the roads. My partner and I went back to my pickup and sat and watched for a while. There was an 80-acre patch of woods and hunters would come and go through it. Half an hour later another group would come and go through it. A little later another group came and this is the way it kept on. We left the area and went northwest of Grygla and it was the same way there, hunters all over. And this is all in the farming area. This was a three-day season.

But from Grygla on east and north all the way to the Canadian border, Ely, Finland, Grand Marais, International Falls, the whole northern part of Zone One was closed to hunting. Now certainly this area shouldn't be short of habitat brush or woods and there is very little private land. But not one deer hunter was allowed in this area as it was all closed.

Here are three counties that were not listed in this news letter. Beltrami county harvested 3,346 deer in 1972 and in 1978 went down to 1,759. Koochiching county harvested 2,834 deer in 1972 and went down to 1,386 in 1978 and Lake of the Woods county harvested 1,723 deer in 1972 and went down to 520 in 1978. These counties must certainly have enough woods and brush for habitat for they have also gone down on the same percentage.

I believe it is time the hunters, sportsmen and the DNR start to realize that we are not going to have room for all the hunters in the farming area nor will there be enough deer and I also believe it is time, although it is a few years late, to set up a good management plan for deer in the Red Lake management area and the Beltrami Island Forest. The Red Lake area covers over 417,000 acres and the Beltrami Island Forest has many thousand acres plus thousands of acres to the east and around the area. This is where we had a big population of deer from the 30's all the way up to about 1968. This is also where most of the hunters were. Now the hunters have moved to the farming area.

About a month ago a group of us drove north from Malcolm to the Houk Ridge. This road was covered with timber wolf tracks. They had trails going into the woods many different places. On the north end of this road a pack of 10 wolves had followed the road for about a mile going in the same direction. We did not see one deer track. Ten years ago this road used to be covered with deer tracks, but no more. Now the wolves have taken over.

Yours truly,
Henry Holte

Practice Care As Kite Flying Season Nears

Sunny, breezy days of spring inevitably bring out kite flyers. However, whether you are a novice or veteran kite flyer, make safety your first consideration, urged the Minnesota department of public safety.

Always fly kites in open areas, such as parks, playgrounds or golf courses. Stay well away from power lines, large trees and buildings.

Electric power lines are one of the kite flyer's greatest hazards. Never use wire or metal string, because severe electrical shock can result if the kiteline touches an electric power cable.

If your kite crashes and gets hung up on a tree or roof, it's usually best to leave it and build a new one. Too often, the attempts to rescue an errant kite can end in a fall and injuries.

Vehicle drivers should watch out for nearby kite flyers who may be so preoccupied with their kites that they run or step unaware into the street.

Also, parents should always lay down strict rules for their children about the materials to use in a lite and how and where to safely fly their kites, according to the public safety department.

Students Back 7% Limit On Tuition Hikes

University of Minnesota students recently expressed their support for Gov. Albert H. Quie's proposal to hold student tuition increases to 7 per cent for each year of the next biennium.

"A 7 per cent increase would not only be acceptable," said Colleen Kelley, "but it would be a welcome surprise compared to the tuition increases of the last several years."

Kelley, who is director of legislative activities for the Student Senate, was among several students to speak to the House education division about a variety of items in the University's biennial request.

Kelley said that an across-the-board tuition increase would hit University of Minnesota students the hardest because they already pay more than those who attend other state schools.

Jim Clark, a member of the student lobby committee, said tuition should increase with the level of inflation, and should be tied to students' ability to pay.

Clark supported the board of regents plan to ask the legislature for a tuition rate based on the level of appropriation rather than a percentage of instructional costs.

Al Senstad, president of the student body on the Twin Cities campus, presented the legislators with a "tuition cost containment petition" which, he said, contained 7,000 signatures of students who support tying tuition increases to the cost of inflation.

Yes, There Is A Spring!

With no apologies to the writer of the now famous reply to Virginia's letter about the existence of Santa Claus, Bill Rossman of the Grand Rapids Herald-Review filled editor Ken Hickman's column recently with the following contribution:

Dear Mr. Newswriter,

My name is Virginia. I am 11 years old and I go to school in Grand Rapids. I like winter very much, but I like spring better. Some of my at school say there is no such thing as spring in Minnesota. Sometimes when they are real grouchy, like on Mondays, I tell them "Cheer up, spring is coming soon." But they just grumble and throw snowballs at me.

I want them to believe that spring is coming, so yesterday after school I asked by Dad to help me convince them that spring is really on it's way. My Dad said he couldn't help me. He's been crabby ever since he took a little fall while he was shoveling the snow off our roof. I'm sure he'll be happier when they take the cast off. He said I could write to you and that you would have an answer for me or that you would make something up like you usually do. He asked me to ask you, "If winter comes, can spring be far behind:" Then he laughed.

Please help my friends to know that spring is really coming.

Very Truly yours,
Virginia

Dear Virginia,

I'm not getting paid to answer your letter, so I will be brief.

Your little friends are wrong. They sound as if they need vacations. Spring is coming, just as certainly as snow will fall; but some people cannot believe this. The long winter has discouraged them, and their discouragement has fostered disbelief.

If you tell them that because March came in like a lion, it will go out like a lamb, they will only snarl and tell you that because March came in like a lion, it will go out like the Armistice day storm of 1941. They don't understand, or have never been told, that spring is a feeling you have inside yourself, regardless of the weather. As I said, they are wrong. Spring is really coming.

In their tender years, your little friends have become victims of some popular, and incorrect, notions about spring. They will tell you, for example, that if the groundhog sees it's shadow, it ducks back into it's hole confident that the ice will be out of the lakes by the Fourth of July. Unknowingly, they have come to believe that the only way to recognize a two-car family is to see who has an extra, suspiciously shaped snowdrift in the front yard. I am certain that they are wrong. Spring is on it's way, I believe.

Your disbelieveing friends need visible proof of the coming spring because their hearts and imaginations have grown cold and stale over the winter. They have seen their fathers squander their savings to invest in potted palms and sunlamps, the they have seen their parents grow depressed with the realization that for all the money they have spent on heating bills in the past six months, they could have quit their jobs and moved to Palm Beach. Because they have seen these things, they say, it is apparent spring will never come. I suspect that they are wrong, for the most part. Spring, I'm reasonably" certain, will probably come.

I'll admit that it is a bit disheartening to hear on the radio that the last car in town with a "Think Snow" bumper sticker was found concealed in a local garage and was summarily junked by an irate band of concerned citizens. However, this does not betoken that spring is not coming, as your little friends insist. They are definitely partially wrong, I suspect. Spring might come. Perhaps.

Ah, Virginia, so what if someone mentions South Dakota, and everyone else thinks he's talking about the Sun Belt? So what if a blizzard is forecast for March 21st? Who cares if people have cabin fever so bad that a mid-March vacation in Minot sounds like a good idea? I suppose your little friends take these items as a sign that we're going to have a year 'round winter. Well, they're half wrong, anyway. Spring, potentially, could come. As long as you're willing to believe in miracles, it is possible.

Your wise-acre little friends will probably make something of this letter, too. You know, the "Journalist - has - been - hibernating - so - long - he's - starting - all - over - again - on - the - Christmas - letter - to - Virginia routine. They will assume that this letter is just an attempt to perpetuate another myth, and that, in fact, spring really isn't going to come. Your little friends are right. And to answer your age-old rhetorical question, "If winter comes, can spring be far behind?"

Yes, Virginia, Quite far.

How Not To Run A Party

Following editirial appeared recently in the New Prague Times, published by Arthur J. Suel, who has generally endorsed activities of the DFL party and its elected officials:

The national conventions of both major political parties habitually bring a large expenditure of "outside" money to the convention city, as well as national and international publicity.

Not only the delegates, alternates, party chieftains, and well-wishers, but huge crowds also assemble for the quadrennial political spectaculars.

Before each convention, as many as a dozen American cities vie for selection, with sales talk of their advantages and sizable bids of cash to cover the cost of the conventions.

The Twin Cities of Minnesota put in a bid for the 1980 Republican National Convention, but the choice went to Detroit, Michigan, where the G.O.P. conclave will be held in nearby Pontiac, in the Silverdome.

The Twin Cities presumably will bid for the 1980 Democratic National Convention, but their selection may be precluded by a recent action of the Democratic National Convention Committee.

News reports stated that the Democratic National Convention Committee has adopted a resolution, the terms of which would bar that party's 1980 convention from being held in any state which has not ratified the so-called ERA Amendment to the federal constitution.

If that report is accurate, the Twin Cities of Minnesota are summarily ruled out. That is unless, in the brief time remaining, the Minnesota Legislature votes to approve the ERA Amendment. Such action by the DNC would appear to be entirely outside the realm of its responsibility, and a flagrant attempt to pressure or coerce a duly elected legislative body into obeying the dictates of political party managers.

This observation would be true regardless of which party, or which issue might be involved.

It is difficult, if not impossible, to comprehend any relevancy between a political issue and the selection of a site for a national convention.

While the DNC is an independent political unit, free from dictation or control, it would appear to be encumbent upon the White House and the leaders of the majority in Congress to endeavor to persuade the DNC to use discretion, moderation and restraint in correcting the damaging impressions or informing the news agencies of their misinterpretation or misunderstanding of the DNC action.

On the broad scale of political judgment, the selection of a national convention site is probably of minor importance, but even the appearance of any attempt at political authoritarianism should be avoided under any and all circumstances.

Modern Language

Simple thoughts expressed in simple words are still easiest for the public to understand. Columnist Paul Damkroger of "Commercial West" magazine speculated what a couple of early American patriots might have said in 1979 terms.

Rather than stating the well-known "Give me liberty or give me death" quote, Patrick Henry might have said, "Give me the state of being where aforementioned regulations previously applicable are hereinafter null and void, or give me terminality."

Further, Damkroger suggests that Paul Revere's cry that "The British are coming!" could instead have been, "The English race is advancing in a military posture from Boston as evidenced by the presence of weaponry and personnel."

Imagine what the history lessons would be like with that kind of talk to commit to memory!

Borrowed Nonsense:

Remember the round of "Confucius Say. . ." stories from a few years ago? Here are some current ones. Confucius say: "Man with tongue in cheek have difficulty whistling." "Man who all thumbs wear funny gloves." "When shoe is on other foot, man walk funny." "Man who bury hatchet have dirty hatchet." "Man who sees eye to eye have small nose." "A bird in the hand is very messy." "When cup runneth over, sip from saucer."

Spring Sports Openers

Keep an eye on the weather, but Thief River Falls' 1979 spring sports season is scheduled to open Saturday when the Lincoln high school tennis team faces Brainerd, Fergus Falls and South St. Paul in quadrangular tournament action at Brainerd.

Lincoln track season gets underway Tues., April 10, at the Northwest Athletic Conference indoor meet in the Winter Shows building at Crookston.

– First baseball game for the Prowlers is scheduled Thurs., April 19, in Red Lake Falls against Pete Sullivan's Eagles.

Lincoln golf team will begin play Sat., April 28, at Fergus Falls.

Spring sports at Northland community college are up in the air, pending on the outcome of the state-wide teacher's strike.

Miscellaneous

+ Looking ahead to the 1979-80 Section 8 hockey race, Detroit Lakes coach Ken Anderson says that "Roseau will be stable, Thief River Falls will be much tougher and Crookston Central will also be stronger." He feels Fergus Falls "will be up in the top four," and says Bemidji "is in the process of rebuilding and will be another year away from being a power." Anderson, whose 1977-78 Lakers were 16-7 and reached the Section 8 tournament semifinals before losing to Roseau, noted, "When you consider that Roseau took third in the state, I'd say we got as far as we should have." Anderson said the Lakers were "about two hockey players short of being a state entrant," pointing to the likes of Roseau's Aaron Broten and Mark Huglen or Thief River Falls' Scott Sabo.

+ Mike Harlander of St. Cloud Apollo, the winning pitcher in relief when the Eagles beat Thief River Falls 9-6 in the 1977 Region 8AA baseball tournament, is a freshman on the University of Nebraska baseball team. Minnesota, Missouri and Indiana State also tried to recruit the hard-throwing righthander who struck out 98 batters in 71 innings while posting a 1.87 ERA at Apollo last year. All-city in baseball, hockey and football, Harlander also led St. Cloud to a pair of state American Legion baseball titles.

+ Craig Erhart, Steve Saccoman and Brian Murphy were named tri-captains of the 1979-80 Bemidji high school hockey team. Kyle Young was named winner of the first John Beck award — named in memory of the Bemidji sophomore killed in a hunting accident last fall — recognizing a player for his inspiration, dedication and leadership.

+ Fertile-Beltrami's Shelly Oistad, a WCCO radio all-state basketball team of the year selection for the second straight season, finished her high school career with 1,236 points as she led the Falcons to three straight Region 8A titles. She plans to attend Concordia college in Moorhead.

+ Detroit Lakes, announced as a new addition to the 1979-80 Lincoln high school basketball schedule, finished the 1978-79 season with an 11-9 record — almost identical to the Prowlers' 11-10 finish. "I felt it was a good season," reported Detroit Lakes coach John Erickson, "although not a great one. I would like to think we could have won more than we did, but Crosby-Ironton, Wadena, Moorhead and Breckenridge all had very good basketball teams. Had we been able to bump off Moorhead or one of the top team teams in the (Mid-State) conference, it would have been a feather in our hats, but overall I feel we did as well as we could have for the size we had." Erickson feels that Detroit Lakes will have much the same type of team in 1979-80 when David Riedberger and Jeff Anderson will serve as co-captains.

+ Rumor has it that goaltender Jon Brekken of Mount St. Benedict in Crookston may transfer to Crookston Central where he would be a welcome addition to the 1979-80 Pirate hockey team.

+Gary Mullranin indicated at a post-season team banquet that 1979-80 may be his final year as Bemidji high school swimming coach. Rick Fitzgerald and Jerry Will were named co-captains of that squad. Fitzgerald was named MVP award winner as the Lumberjacks' top scorer this winter.

+Former Bemidji high school athletic standout Lance Chambers has transferred from Wisconsin-Eau Claire to Bemidji State University. He'll join the BSU baseball team when he becomes eligible in two weeks.

Steve Enderlein, Jeff Oseid, Kyle Hams . . .

Three Prowlers Named To All-Conference Ball Club

Thief River Falls, Crookston and East Grand Forks all placed three players on the 1978-79 Northwest Athletic Conference all-conference basketball team, announced Friday by Thief River Falls coach Glen Peters at the Prowlers' annual post-season team banquet.

Seniors Steve Enderlein and Jeff Oseid, along with junior Kyle Hams, were Thief River Falls all-conference picks. Enderlein and Oseid are the only 1977-78 repeaters on this year's squad. Hams is one of four underclassmen on the 12-player team that also included two players from Bemidji and a single selection from Fergus Falls.

Crookston all-conference players were seniors Garry Kotts and Dan Royal and junior Tim Knotek.

Named from East Grand Forks were juniors Todd Selk and John Roche and senior Steve Troyer.

Seniors John Noga and Stan Knudsen were Bemidji choices, with senior Kevin Hanson representing Fergus Falls.

Enderlein won the 1978-79 Northwest Athletic Conference scoring title with a 19-point average. Noga averaged 16.7 points per game, followed in the top five by Roche 15.7, Selk 15.5 and Knotek 15.0. In all games Enderlein averaged 18.6 points per game, Knotek 16.0, Hanson 13.5, Noga 13.3 and Selk 12.6.

Thief River Falls also had individual NWAC leaders in Hams and junior Todd Young.

Hams was the league's leading assist man, averaging 5.6 per game. In all games he averaged 6.2 assists per outing. Enderlein was second in both cases with a 5.5 average in conference play and a 6.1 average overall.

Young was the NWAC rebounding leader, pulling down an average of 9.9 rebounds in every conference game. He averaged 9.8 rebounds in all games. Gordy Olson of East Grand Forks was second in the NWAC rebound charts with a 9.5 average and Royal was second in the overall figures with an average of eight per game.

Noga was the league's best shooter as he connected on 46 of 77 shots in six NWAC games for a 59.7 field goal percentage. Thief River Falls junior Jim Nyland was close behind with a 25-for-42 performance in seven games for a 59.5 percentage. Nyland was the overall leader, hitting 61 of 109 shots for a 56 per cent mark. Chuck Simmons of Fergus Falls was second on a 50-for-92, 54.3 per cent effort.

Olson was the league's top free throw shooter, missing just once in 19 attempts for a spectacular 94.7 per cent performance. Kotts made 16 of 19 attempts for an 84.2 per cent figure. In all games, Kotts was 53-for-66 for 80.3 per cent, and Roche was 57-for-74 for 77 per cent.

Bemidji was the 1978-79 NWAC champion with a 4-2 record, good for six points in the league's title-deciding point standings. East Grand Forks also finished 4-2, but only accumulated five points, a figure matched by Crookston's 4-3 record. Thief River Falls was 3-4 and Fergus Falls 0-4. Overall, Thief River Falls was 11-10, Crookston 10-10, Bemidji 6-13, East Grand Forks 6-13 and Fergus Falls 1-17.

Hams, Young Selected As LHS Basketball Captains

Kyle Hams and Todd Young were selected by a vote of players as co-captains of the 1979-80 Lincoln high school basketball team, it was announced Friday as the 1978-79 Prowlers staged their annual post-season banquet at the Best Western Inn.

Next year's captains, who will succeed graduating seniors Steve Enderlein and Jeff Oseid, were also named co-winners of the coaches' most improved player award for the 1978-79 campaign when Hams' play at guard and Young's performance at center helped the Prowlers win their first Region 8AA Sub Region 4 title.

Oseid was named by a vote of the players as the team's most valuable player this winter.

Other coaches awards went to Enderlein, best offensive player; Jim Nyland, best defensive player; Mark Schmitke, winner of the hustle award; Mark Lundin, most improved sophomore; and Tim Swanson, most improved freshman.

Sixteen athletic letters were presented by head coach Glen Peters to seniors Tim Wiskow, Ricky Peterson, Wayne Krueger, Steve Helle, Enderlein and Oseid; juniors Gregg Peterson, Mitch Muzzy, Greg Miller, Young, Hams, Schmitke and Nyland; and student managers Brian Kjos, Brent Waale and Mark Appel.

Rev. Jim Mattson served as guest speaker.

SELECTED AS co-captains of the 1979-80 Lincoln high school basketball team were Todd Young (left) and Kyle Hams. Thier selection, based upon a vote by the players, was announced during Friday's post-season banquet held at the Best Western.

Athletic Directors Conference Is Being Held In Bloomington

Ab Strommen, athletic director at Park and Woodbury high schools, was named athletic director of the year at the ninth annual Minnesota state athletic directors conference recognition banquet Sunday at the Radisson South hotel in Bloomington.

The three-day conference continues through Tuesday. Some 275 of the state's athletic directors are in attendance at the conference, including Russ Smith of Thief River Falls.

Strommen, who has been active in Minnesota high school athletics for 41 years as a coach and as an athletic administrator, was one of 13 candidates and becomes the seventh recipient of the award. Previous winners include Giffy O'Dell, Minneapolis, 1973; Jerry Eckstein, Plainview, 1974; Bob Strand, Crookston, 1975; Earl Bruhn, Owatonna, 1976; L. B. "Lewie" Bredeson, Appleton, 1977; and Orv Schwankl, Mankato, 1978.

Other candidates for this year's honor included Whitey Aamot, Waseca; Jerry Bernatz, Chatfield; Ken Thompson, Worthington; Lloyd Stussey, Wells-Easton; Herman Holten, Montevideo; Roger Carlson, Coon Rapids; George Embretson, Montgomery-Lonsdale; Dick McWaters, Minneapolis Roosevelt; Ron Ekren, Breckenridge; George Larson, Cambridge; Phil Seljevold, Moorhead; and Norm Wagner, Fisher.

A graduate of Augsburg college, Strommen is a member of the "25 year coaching club" and currently is serving his final year of a two-year term on the board of directors of the Minnesota State High School League.

Also honored at Sunday's banquet were past presidents and Bredeson, who is retiring as athletic director at Appleton high school.

Dr. Dean Berkley, director of division of administration and administrative studies at Indiana University was the main speaker at the conference awards banquet. Berkley, a native of South Dakota, has been involved in a number of varied activities and experiences during his career in education.

Injuries Plague 1977-78 MCC Basketball Season

Injuries plagued the Marshall County Central high school basketball team throughout the 1978-79 season, with the Nordics finishing 11-9.

There wasn't a single player who appeared in all 20 games for the Nordics who were victimized even before the season started when Jim Sethre, expected to be one of the team's leaders, was sidelined because of a football injury. He missed five games before showing his worth by finishing with 53 loose ball recoveries, 27 steals, 38 assists and a 7.7 scoring average. He shared the team lead in the recovery department, was second in assists and third in steals.

Also struck down by a serious injury was Mark Halvorson, the team's backcourt leader who missed six games at the end of the season. In the 14 games he played, Halvorson was credited with a team-leading 71 assists and 34 steals.

Kevin Anderson led Marshall County Central in both scoring and rebounding this winter. He scored 216 points and pulled down 122 rebounds to average 12 points and 6.8 rebounds in the 18 games he played.

Dan Engen enjoyed a strong all-round season with a 10.6 scoring average, 101 rebounds, 53 loose ball recoveries and 28 steals for a team-leading 454 points in the Nordics' performance point charts. Anderson finished with 387 performance points and Sethre had 357.

Best Marshall County Central shooters were Tom Steinhauer and Ray Kvalvog. Steinhauer, who only averaged 3.8 points per game, shot at a 51.8 per cent clip from the field by making 29 of 56 shots. Kvalvog, averaging 8.2 points per game, connected on 31 of 39 free throw attempts for a 79.5 per cent figure.

Marshall County Central finished the regular season with a 10-8 record. In District 32 tournament play the Nordics beat Kennedy 49-36 but lost to Hallock 44-37.

During the 1978-79 regular season the Nordics beat Middle River 64-57 and 61-50, Badger 42-40, Grygla 54-40 and 69-47, Warroad 65-36, Greenbush 63-49, Kennedy 38-31, Stephen 55-46 and Strandquist 56-48. They lost to Argyle 73-50, Karlstad 54-40, Roseau 31-26 and 67-41, Warroad 47-42, Lake of the Woods 49-47, in overtime and 62-46 and Badger 43-34.

Righthander Paul Hartzell, acquired in the Rod Carew trade, was among the American League's top twelve pitchers for ERA in both 1976 and 1977, with 2.77 and 3.57 marks.

Lincoln Skaters Enjoy Strong Season

A 16-7 record, representing the best finish since a 15-6 mark in 1971-72 and the most wins for a Lincoln high school hockey team since a 16-2 effort in 1967-68, made the 1978-79 season an enjoyable one for the Prowlers, reported head coach Wendell Grand.

"We had a good year, no doubt about it. The kids can be particularly pleased with the improvement they made as a team," said Grand, pointing to a climb on the Section 8 ladder that produced a runner-up finish to Roseau in both regular season and tournament play. A year earlier the Prowlers' regular season record rated not better than ninth in the 16-team section and they failed to survive the first round of the Section 8 tournament.

That 16-7 record could have been even better "if we could have dropped Roseau from the schedule," joked Grand. The Rams beat the Prowlers three times — by 5-3 and 8-1 scores during the regular season and by a 4-2 margin in the Section 8 tournament championship game.

Thief River Falls' strength, said Grand rested in the "total balance of our team. Our goaltending was very solid; our forwards played reasonably consistent hockey; our defensemen came around and really played well at tournament time — not that they didn't play well during the season, either, because we would have lost a lot more games than we did if they hadn't played well. Overall, we played pretty well as a team," summed up Grand.

Underlining that team concept was the Prowlers' scoring charts. Thief River Falls did not have a single individual listed among the top 15 scorers in Section 8. However, what they did have was six players with 20 or more points. "That's pretty good balance," noted Grand. "We would have liked to have had somebody up there among the scoring leaders, but that doesn't necessarily determine whose team will finish near the top."

Senior Scott Sabo led the Thief River Falls scorers with 18 goals, 16 assists and 34 points. The next four scorers were all juniors as Wade Hoppe scored 12 goals, collected 16 assists and totaled 28 points; Jim Thompson was 10-13-23; Jeff Ulrich 9-13-22; and Bob Fitzgerald 11-10-21. Senior Todd Trickle rounded out the 20-point scorers with eight goals, 12 assists and 20 points.

"We didn't score as much as we would have liked to," admitted Grand. "I had felt we would score better than we did." He didn't have an answer as to why the Prowlers didn't score more. "That's a tough thing to put your finger on," he noted.

"Thief River Falls' defense was anchored by junior goaltender Bill Jury who completed his second year in the nets with a fine 2.9 goals against average in 19 regular season games. He stopped 500 of the 556 shots he faced for a 90 per cent save figure, placing him among the Section 8 leaders in that category.

Seniors Mark Huot and Joe Dee, along with juniors Dave Geatz and Brian Ranum, made up the defensive corps, with help from Fitzgerald when Hout was injured. Geatz complemented his defensive work with six goals, 11 assists and 17 ponints.

Thief River Falls recorded wins over Mount St. Benedict 7-2, Grand Forks Red River 3-1, St. Thomas Academy 6-2, Lake of the Woods 7-3, East Grand Forks 3-1, Greenway-Coleraine 4-3, Grand Forks Central 5-4, Warraod 4-1, Bemidji 4-1, Moorhead 6-3, Crookston 5-4, Hallock 10-2, Detroit Lakes 4-2 and Fergus Falls 2-1; adding Section 8 tournament wins over Bemidji 6-1 and Fergus Falls 5-1.

In addition to the three losses to Roseau, the Prowlers also fell to Bemidji 3-2, Benilde's-St. Margaret's 4-1, East Grand Forks 4-3 and Warroad 4-1.

Part of the problem in those losses, and sometimes in the wins, too, was the Prowlers' first period performances, said Grand. "The first period was one of our problems all year," he admitted. "We had terrific opportunities in the first period all year, to score or put things away, but we weren't able to do it."

Sabo, Trickle, Huot, Dee, Murray Dicken and Myles Lund were the only seniors on the squad, giving promise to another strong season in 1979-80.

"We're looking forward to next year very optimistically," acknowledged Grand. "It isn't going to be easy replacing those six kids — it never is, otherwise we would have done it this year. We're going to miss all six of those guys. But we'll have a lot of people returning; people who have proved they can play good hockey for us."

Ducks Unlimited Aids Research Program In Delta Marsh Area

Ducks Unlimited (Canada) and the Delta waterfowl research station have announced their agreement to undertake a marsh ecology research program on a 150-acre experimental complex to be developed within the Delta Marsh, 60 miles west of Winnipeg, at the south end of Lake Manitoba. The joint announcement was made by the North American wildlife foundation, which funds the Delta waterfowl research station, and Ducks Unlimited (Canada).

Development of the marsh complex, which is already underway, will consist of dividing the 150-acre area into 10 compartments, through the construction of more than three miles of dykes.

Purpose of this development is explained by Dr. Milton W. Weller, head of the department of entomology, fisheries and wildlife, University of Minnesota: "What is most needed to advance marsh management theory and practice are experimental data gathered concurrently by a team of specialists in marsh plants, limnology, hydrology, invertebrates and vertebrates. If such a group also had an isolated, artifical, multi-unit marsh complex deisgned exclusively for experimentation on the ecology of marshes and wildlife, the potential for understanding marsh systems and devising proper marsh management procedures for marsh wildlife would be unsurpassed".

Peter Ward, director of the Delta waterfowl research station, explained that water within each compartment will be maintained at different levels, to a maximum depth of five feet. "One pond annually will be subjected to an initial flood period lasting two summers. The basin will then be dried out for one or two years and finally re-flooded to an intermediate depth for at least seven years. This procedure will enable the researchers to evaluate the effects of different water level manipulation schemes.

"The results of the research will be available in two phases" Ward continued. "Short-term specific research projects and a long-term monitoring program of 20 years. Another important result of this program will be the trained young men and women who will apply the knowledge gained from this research to wetland management programs across the continent."

D.S. Morrison, executive vice-president of Ducks Unlimited (Canada), said that the research program is being funded through contributions from concerned sportsmen-conservationists in both the United States and Canada.

"The program will be cost-shared by Ducks Unlimited (Canada) and the Delta waterfowl research station" Morrison said. "During the first five years, the program will cost in excess of $1 million. Delta waterfowl reacearch station is providing the land, research facilities, accommodations and direct supervision of the monitoring and research. DU (Canada) funds will be allocated mainly to construction and major maintenance of the research compartments, with funds also provided for specific short-term research projects."

OLD BNRR DEPOT
CITY OF THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

The City Council of the City of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, will receive sealed proposals for the sale of the former BNRR depot until April 16, 1979, 2:00 p.m. at the office of the city clerk. Bids will be opened at 2 p.m. on April 16, 1979.

Bid forms and information regarding the depot are on file at the office of the city clerk and may be obtained from that office upon request. The city desires to have the depot removed by June 1, 1979.

The city will consider awarding the sale of the depot at their regular meeting on April 24, 1979.

The bids shall be accompanied by a certified check or bank draft in the total amount of the bid, payable without condition, to the city clerk of the City of Thief River Falls.

The City Council of the City of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, reserves the right to hold all bids for a period of thirty (30) calendar days after the date of opening bids and to reject any or all bids, to waive any irregularities and to award the contract as it deems to be in the best interest of the City.

Dated this 27th day of March, 1979.
City of Thief River Falls

Gerald A. Wigness
City Clerk-Treasurer

LEC Reports 8 New Cases

Law enforcement report dated March 27 listed eight new cases including five thefts, two accidents and one valdalism. Individual cases are given below by reporting date:

March 19 — Kim Johnson of St. Hilaire reported that someone slashed a tire on his fifth wheeler trailer and took a plastic hubcap from the same vehicle while the trailer was parked near Johnson's residence. Theft and vandalism loss was estimated at $70.

March 20 — The theft of a television set from the front lobby of the Thief River hotel was reported by Eldred Johnston of Thief River Falls. Value of the item was $90.

March 21 — Kathy Trickle of 111 Circle Drive reported that someone entered her home and took $200 in checks and cash from a dresser drawer. The theft is under investigation.

March 21 — Greg Hines of Edgewood Apartments reported that someone entered his apartment and took miscellaneous items valued at $58.

March 22 — Mailbox owned by Herb Peterson of Wyandotte township was stolen with theft loss estimated at $20.

March 24, 8:09 a.m., highway 32 & 14th St.: Glen Thomas of Thief River Falls was traveling north on highway 32 while June Gjovik of Strathcona was headed south on 32. Thomas attempted a left turn in front of Gjovik and the two vehicles collided causing over $1,000 damage to the Thomas vehicle and over $500 damage to Gjovik's.

March 24, 8:02 a.m.: Bob Carlson reported that an unknown vehicle drove down the center of the meridian at Muzzy and highway 59 knocking down a traffic sign and light pole. Total damages were estimated at $675.62.

March 26 — Norris Melander of Home Lumber reported that a fire was started in one of the storage sheds owned by the company. Started with wooden shingles and cardboard, the fire is believed to have been the work of juveniles and the incident is under investigation by the police department and the fire marshall.

1978 Traffic Deaths Rise Sharply In MN

Traffic accidents in Minnesota last year killed 980 persons, the highest death toll in the past five years, according to the Minnesota department of public safety.

Last year's fatality increase represented the worst percentage jump in 16 years. The 1978 traffic deaths rose 14.5 per cent, and by 124 fatalities, over the 1977 total of 856 deaths.

Seriousness of the state's rising road toll is underlined by the fact that in 1978, Minnesota showed one of the biggest increases of any state in the nation, according to the national safety council.

Minnesota's 1978 fatality increase of 14.5 per cent ranked as the fourth highest in the nation, behind New Hampshire, up 16 per cent, Nevada, up 22 per cent and Hawaii, up 27 per cent.

For the United States, crash deaths last year were up five per cent to 51,900, reported the national safety council.

Deaths on Minnesota roads have moved upward for the last three years, ever since the fatalities dropped to 777 in 1975 which was the lowest count since 1962. In 1976, traffic crashes killed 809 persons.

The best contribution that motorists can make is to respect the 55 mile per hour speed limit. Studies show that driving 55 is one of the most effective measures for reducing traffic deaths.

Also, avoid drinking alcoholic beverages while driving, not only for your own safety, but for the safety of all who share the highway, advised the public safety department.

Fine Arts Show Slated At EGF

HIGHWAY 32 SOUTH was the scene for this accident which occurred at approximately 1:14 p.m. Thursday, March 29. The Shotwell Floral truck, driven by John Hebert of Fargo, was traveling north on 32 while Carl Finstad of Thief River Falls, driver of the other vehicle, was headed south on 32 and attempted to make a left turn in front of the truck onto Greenwood. The vehicles collided causing damages estimated at over $1,000 to both the car and the truck. Finstad was taken to Northwestern hospital where he was admitted for observation. At press time Finstad was still a patient at the hospital but had apparently suffered no serious injuries and was expected to be released soon.

Gasoline Costs Rise Steadily As Supply Falls

Gasoline prices have continued to rise sharply in the last few months as supplies dwindle and stations face the possibility of running out of gasoline, according to the Minnesota state automobile association (AAA).

Recent survey of 54 stations throughout the state and in the metropolitan area revealed that the average price per gallon at full-service stations is 76 cents for regular, 82.7 cents for premium and 79.9 cents for no-lead.

Savings can still be found at self-service stations, although the price differential has narrowed in the past year. The average price per gallon is 71.6 cents for regular gasoline, 80.4 cents for premium and 76.7 cents for no-lead.

AAA's mid-March survey shows prices are about 6.5 cents per gallon higher than they were in mid-December of 1978, and about 12 cents per gallon higher than a year ago.

In spite of the shortages, only about 10 per cent of the stations said they actually had run out of some grades of gasoline, and the shortage only lasted for several days in those cases. However, 15 of the 54 stations surveyed said they were closing all day on Sundays. Only three stations said they were closing early on weekdays or limiting the amount of gas customers could purchase.

According to Mark Monson, transportation planner for the Minnesota energy agency, the big gas crunch in Minnesota is expected this spring, when farmers are working in their fields and motorists are beginning to do more recreational driving.

Monson was hopeful, however, that the weather would remain warm, allowing refineries to switch their production from heating oil to the diesel fuels used by many farmers.

"As prices increase, more people will be filling up at self-service stations," said John Lawrence, Minnesota AAA director of member's services. "They shouldn't forget about basic car maintenance, however. In addition to increasing a car's life, it can also improve gas mileage enormously."

Lawrence suggested motorists: install a dashboard-mounted vacuum gauge that indicates fuel consumption in miles-per-gallon; treat the car to regular tune-ups, check timing and air filters, and clean or replace spark plugs. A good tune-up, he said, can improve fuel economy up to 15 per cent.

The AAA employee also offers these tips:

Use the correct octane gasoline. If the engine needs no-lead fuel, using leaded fuel will ruin the catalytic converter and cause reduced mileage. And use the weight oil suggested in your owner's manual for maximum efficiency.

Check tire pressure with an accurate gauge; the owner's manual will specify correct pressure. Correct pressure not only saves gas mileage, but also wear and tear on tires.

Have your car periodically checked for improper alignment and out-of-balance tires.

Fields should be left rough in the fall to control wind erosion.
